sz. Abolition of distinction between felonies & misdemeanors—Action against company—Prosecution of directors.]—Even if the rule, that where an injury constitutes both a civil wrong & a felony the civil remedy is suspended or may be stayed until the person who committed the injury has been prosecuted, is in force in Alberta, it is inapplicable where the civil action is against an incorporated company & a stay thereof is asked for on the ground that criminal proceedings are pending against directors of the co. on charges identical with those which might be based on the facts which may be disclosed in the civil action, but there is nothing alleged in the latter action to show that said directors are individually connected with or have a knowledge of the facts alleged in that action. Since said rule under the law of England was applicable where the prosecution was for a felony but not where it was for a misdemeanor, & the distinction between felonies & misdemeanors has been abolished with respect to offences against the Criminal Code, the rule does not apply where the offences disclosed by the civil action are offences under the Code or, if only common-law offences, are offences which could not at any time have been classified as felonies.—PORTER v. SOLLOWAY, MILLS & CO., LTD., [1930] 1 W. All three leases contained onerous covenants to repair the premises & to keep them & yield them up in good repair. The sub-underlease became vested by assignment in deft. On Dec. 18, 1917, pltf. who had been a tenant to deft. of the same premises, & was liable to him under a covenant to repair less onerous than those in the three leases above mentioned, agreed to purchase, & on May 1, 1918, took a conveyance of the fee simple of the premises together with the benefit of the covenants in the head lease. At the expiration of all the leases the premises were out of repair & deft. was threatening pltf. with an action on his covenant. 66a. —— ——.]—An action in rem was brought in a county ct. having Admiralty jurisdiction by pltfs. against defts. the owners of the Norwegian S.S. Beldis, for £27 4*s.* 6*d.* payable by defts. to pltfs. under an arbitrator's award in respect of overpayment of chartered freight. The arbn. was held by virtue of a clause in a charterparty relating, not to the Beldis, but to the S.S. Belfri, another ship belonging to defts. Defts. failed to appear & judgment was entered against them by default. Thereupon the present applts., who held a mtge. on the Beldis, intervened, & by agreement an issue was submitted to the county ct. judge as to "whether pltfs.' action in rem against the S.S. Beldis is maintainable in view of the fact that pltfs.' claim in this action arose out of a charterparty of the S.S. Belfri belonging to the same owners.'

PART I. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.

66a. Equitable jurisdiction.]—M. obtained judgment for wages, etc., against the A., the owners having made default to appear. D. & Co., the owners of the cargo, intervened. The vessel was duly seized, sold at auction by the sheriff, & purchased by D. & Co., who made the necessary deposit. Money had been wired by applt. to discharge pltf.'s claim, but arrived too late to stop the sale. D. & Co. afterwards tendered the balance of the price, which was refused on account of an application to set aside the sale, & to redeem the vessel. D. & Co., on purchasing the vessel, made arrangements for repairs thereto, & at the time the application was originally made, they were negotiating for the sale thereof. The application was refused : —Held : while the Admlty. Ct. exercised an unquestionable equitable jurisdiction, inasmuch as applt. had failed to show a superior equity to those arising in favour of the purchasers, the order refusing the application should not be interfered with.—MCBRIDE v. DARRELL (1920), 20 Exch. 66c. —— —— ——.]—If a tort is committed within the jurisdiction of the ct. by the master of a ship, being a peregrinus, against a member of his crew, also a peregrinus, the ct. has jurisdiction to arrest the tortfeasor or his goods, & to try an action based upon the tort ; but the commission of such a tort is not a ground for attaching the ship to found jurisdiction unless the master has an interest in the ship.—NOLAN v. S.S. RUSSEL HAVERSIDE, [1921] 1 C. P. D. 136.—S. AF.

66d. —— Master's claim for damages —& interest on wages in arrear— Whether enforceable by action in rem.]—A British ship was attached to satisfy various creditors in rem, including the master of the vessel. She was subsequently sold, any liens of the creditors being transferred to the proceeds. The master's claim included damages against the owners for wrongful dismissal calculated from a date subsequent to the sale :—Held : (1) the master was entitled to damages pari passu with his claim for wages, which he could enforce by an action in rem ; (2) the master was not entitled to claim in rem for interest upon arrear wages.—Re GWYDYR CASTLE (1920), 41 N. L. R. 231.—S. AF.

The county ct. judge decided in favour of pltfs. upon a dictum of the Ct. of Appeal in regard to procedure in rem in The Henrich Björn, No. 65, that "the arrest need not be of the ship in question, but may be of any property of deft. within the realm." The interveners appealed. On appeal, the ct. raised the question whether, apart from the point for decision in the agreed issue, the issue itself was not based on a misconception, as it asserted that pltfs.' action arose out of a charterparty, whereas it appeared to be based upon an award. By County Cts. Admlty. Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869 (c. 51), s. 2 (1), any county ct. appointed to have Admlty. jurisdiction "shall have jurisdiction . . . to try . . . any claim arising out of any agreement made in relation to the use or hire of any ship . . . ":—Held: (1) the cause of action alleged was an ordinary common law claim for payment of money under an award & was not within the jurisdiction conferred by the Act of 1869; but (in case the ct.'s interpretation of the words "arising out of any agreement," etc., should be held by the House of Lords to be wrong); (2) the dictum in The Henrich Björn was obiter, was not therefore binding, and was erroneous; the procedure in rem either in the Admlty. Ct. or in the county ct. does not permit the arrest of a ship or other property of a deft. unconnected with the cause of action; & on both grounds the appeal must be allowed.—THE BELDIS, [1936] P. 51; 106 L. 130a. Yacht authorised to fly White Ensign.]—By the Dockyard Port of Dover Order in Council of June 10, 1912, Sched. 1, reg. 9, all vessels other than His Majesty's ships are forbidden to use the eastern entrance to the Admlty. Harbour between one hour after sunset & one hour before sunrise, without the special authority of the King's Harbour Master. While using the entrance during the prohibited hours without the authority of the King's Harbour Master pltf.'s yacht ran upon a wreck, which was said to have been unlighted at the time:—Held: the fact that a yacht of the Royal Yacht Squadron is authorised to fly the White Ensign does not confer upon her the status of one of His Majesty's ships within reg. 9.—H.M.S. protest, & motions were set down to set aside the writs & all subsequent proceedings on the grounds (inter alia) that the vessels were in the service of the Provisional Govt. & therefore immune from arrest; & that the dispute was between foreigners as to the possession of foreign ships, & therefore that, even if the ct. had jurisdiction, it should decline to exercise it. The judge invited the assistance of the Foreign Office as to the status of the Provisional Govt. of Northern Russia, & was informed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that, while the Allied Powers were co-operating with the Provisional Govt. in the opposition which that Govt. was making to the forces of the Russian Soviet Govt., the Provisional Govt. had not been "formally recognised either by H.M. Govt. or by the Allied Powers as the Govt. of a sovereign independent State:—Held: (1) although under the control of an official of the Provisional Govt. the vessels were not in the possession or service of the Govt.; (2) even under the older decisions, the ct. in its discretion would entertain a possession suit between foreigners if the representative of the foreign State to which the vessel belonged requested the intervention of the ct.—THE ANNETTE, THE DORA, [1919] P. 105; 88 L. 147a. —— Owners liable though possession of vessel transferred—Ship requisitioned.]—A Greek steamship owned by defts., a Greek co., was requisitioned by the Greek Govt. during the war in 1922 between Greece & Turkey. Under the terms of requisition the possession or control of the vessel passed to the Greek Govt., & the master & crew ceased to be employed by defts. & were conscripted into the Greek forces. At the end of the period of requisition the vessel had to be returned to defts. in the same condition as at the beginning of the period. While under requisition the vessel stranded, & was saved from possible total loss by the services of pltfs.' salvage ship. After the vessel had been returned to her owners she was arrested by pltfs. in an action in rem:—Held: the terms of requisition did not dispossess defts. of their property in the vessel; the services were of benefit to defts., as thereby they had their vessel instead of merely a claim against the Greek Govt.; as the services were not those of the crew of the Greek vessel, it was immaterial that the crew were the servants of the Greek Govt., & defts. were liable to pltfs. for salvage.—THE MEANDROS, [1925] P. 61; 94 L. Parcels of goods were accepted in N. for delivery at S. to the shippers' order, there being given to each shipper a document of the above-mentioned character. Upon the named ship arriving at S. the goods were not delivered. Resps., twenty firms, each being indorsees of one of the documents, issued a joint writ in rem claiming severally to recover damages. The writ stated that pltfs. claimed as consignees or indorsees of bills of lading for non-delivery of goods agreed to be carried by the named ship, or agreed to be shipped within a reasonable time by some other vessel of the same line. On affidavits sworn separately by pltfs., alleging that the goods were either lost or not shipped on any other vessel within a reasonable time, the ship was arrested. The owners of the ship took out a summons to set aside the writ & all proceedings thereunder :—Held : (1) the documents in question were bills of lading within the above sect., & the proceedings being to set aside the writ & it not being denied that some of the goods were received on board, the action should proceed; (2) the action being in rem & the joinder of pltfs. convenient, the view of the full Bench of the Supreme Ct. that pltfs. could properly be joined under the rules locally applicable should not be interfered with.—MARLBOROUGH HILL, SHIP v. 594a. —— —— Rival salvors—Injunction to restrain act on high seas.]—In 1922 pltfs. fitted out an expedition to salve cargo from the wreck of a Dutch steamship which had sunk in 1916 in the North Sea in over one hundred feet of water. Pltfs. worked at the scene of the wreck whenever the weather & tides permitted during the summer of 1922 & from Apr. to July, 1923. During that time they had succeeded in cutting a hole into No. 4 hold, had buoyed the wreck, & had extracted some portions of cargo of little value at a cost of over £40,000. In July, 1923, defts., British subjects & partners in a rival salvage co., arrived on the scene in a British registered ship, & by sending down their own divers & interfering with pltfs.' diving operations, tried to secure possession of the wreck & cargo, & either prevent further work on the part of pltfs. or establish themselves with pltfs. in concurrent occupation:—Held: (1) an action in respect of injurious acts done on the high seas had always been within the jurisdiction of the High Ct. of Admlty.; (2) pltfs. were sufficiently in occupation of the wreck to exclude third parties from interfering with the property; (3) as defts.' interference was high-handed & deliberate they would be restrained until further order from doing any acts at or near the wreck whereby pltfs. might be prevented or hindered in the carrying on of their salvage operations.—THE TUBANTIA, [1924] P. 78; 93 L. On a petition being subsequently filed, defts. moved for its dismissal, with costs & damages, on the ground that the value of the property salved was under £1,000:—Held: the proceedings of defts. in reference to the consolidation must be construed as an agreement which gave the ct. jurisdiction under Admlty. Semble: under Admlty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 6, the ct. of Admlty. has discretion to take cognisance of cases of salvage, though the value of the property salved be under £1,000.—THE HERMAN WEDEL (1870), 39 L. J. Adm. 30; 23 L. T. 876; 3 Mar. L. C. 530.

Accordingly, after the outbreak of war with Germany, the ship was seized as prize, & on July 28, 1916, the Prize Ct. pronounced her to have belonged at the time of seizure to enemies of the Crown, & ordered her to be detained by the marshal until further order. Meanwhile on Jan. 11, 1916, under Prize Ct. Rules, Ord. 29, the ship had been requisitioned by the Lords Comrs. of the Admlty., & she remained in their possession. On Apr. 5, 1917, the writ in the present action was issued claiming a declaration under M. S. By Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 22 (1) (a) (xii), the High Court shall in Admiralty matters have jurisdiction in respect of any claim arising out of an agreement relating to the carriage of goods in a ship, "unless it is shown to the ct. that at the time of the institution of the proceedings any owner or part owner of the ship was domiciled in England" :—Held : although under the sect. pltfs. who are British shipowners domiciled in this country are in a less favourable position than foreign shipowners, the sect. was general in its scope & could not be construed as applicable only to deft. shipowners against whom a claim is made, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the action.—THE ESKBRIDGE, [1931] P. 51 ; 100 L. extension of time for the renewal of an unserved writ, which has not been renewed within the period of one year as provided by R. S. But, inasmuch as Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57), s. 8, contains provisos for extension of time unknown to any other statutes of limitation, the application to renew a writ in an action which comes within the operation of sect. 8 must be considered on its merits, & if, under the circumstances, the ct. would give leave to issue a writ notwithstanding the lapse of two years, the ct. will allow an extension of time for the renewal of a writ, the time for the renewal of which has expired.—THE ESPANOLETO, [1920] P. 223; 90 L. Pltfs. did not admit the facts set out in defts.' affidavit in support of the motion:—Held: the facts being in dispute the ct. could not try the issue on motion by affidavit & the motion must be dismissed, but without prejudice to the right of defts. to apply, when the issues were defined by pleadings, for the question of law to be tried as a preliminary point.—THE SYLVAN ARROW, [1923] P. 14; 92 L. The owners of the A. agreed pltfs.' damages, but refused to pay the costs of the action by pltfs. against the W., which had then been prosecuted to the stage of filing pltfs.' preliminary act:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to amend their writ by adding the owners of the A. as defts. The case came within the principle of R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 11, that no cause should be defeated by the non-joinder of parties, & in the circumstances it would have been a misuse of the discretion of the ct. to refuse to allow a party to exercise that right. Subsequently the ship was arrested by the Admlty. marshal in an action in rem for necessaries. Various other writs in rem were issued against the ship, including a writ by the master in respect of wages. The sheriff was unable to effect a sale, & the ship was sold by the marshal without prejudice to the rights of the various claimants:—Held: the fact that the sheriff was in possession did not deprive the marshal of his power to arrest the ship in actions in rem.—THE JAMES W. 781b. Undertaking to put in bail—Afterwards withdrawn—Effect of subsequent arrest of vessel.] —On June 22, 1920, defts.' solrs. gave an undertaking to enter an appearance & put in bail in respect of a writ in rem claiming damages in respect of loss by collision. In consequence defts.' vessel was not arrested. On Feb. 17, 1921, defts.' solrs. wrote to pltfs.' solrs. that their clients were unable to make arrangements for bail, that accordingly the undertaking for bail was withdrawn, & that, as the vessel was within the jurisdiction of the ct., pltfs. could arrest her. Pltfs.' solrs. arrested the vessel, but wrote to defts.' solrs. that they reserved all their clients' rights under the undertaking for bail. On Mar. 16, 1921, the vessel was appraised as being at that time of a value of £600. Defts. provided bail in that sum & the vessel was released. On Apr. 12, pltfs. applied for an order that defts.' solrs. should forthwith provide good & sufficient bail, pursuant to their undertaking. It appeared that in June, 1920, the value of the vessel was much in excess of £600, & pltfs. estimated her value at £4,500 :—Held: (1) the undertaking to give bail could not be withdrawn by substituting the vessel for the bail; (2) pltfs. had not waived their rights under the undertaking by arresting the vessel; (3) defts.' solrs. must complete their undertaking by putting in bail to the value of the vessel as on June 22, 1920; (4) nature of bail discussed.—THE BORRE, [1921] P. 390; 91 L. 781d. —— Sale of ship—Effect on undertaking.]—In June, 1930, a firm of Norwegian shipowners, being threatened with an action in rem by cargo owners in respect of damage & short delivery, to avoid arrest of the ship, instructed their solrs. to give an undertaking to accept service, appear & provide bail. No writ was issued, the ship left the jurisdiction, & when she returned several months later she was encumbered with liens. On Jan. 6, 1931, she was sold by order of the ct. On Mar. 2 the solrs. took out an originating summons, & moved the ct. for an order that they were no longer bound by their undertaking. On Mar. 14 the cargo owners issued their writ in rem, but the solrs. refused to accept service pending the hearing of the motion :—Held: the undertaking, which was plain in its terms, enabled the ship to leave the jurisdiction without being arrested, & the fact that she was subsequently sold was immaterial; there had not been undue delay in issuing the writ having regard to all the circumstances; & the solrs. remained bound by their undertaking.—THE RING, [1931] P. 58; 100 L. 781f. Benefit of bail—Action in name of cargo owners—Some owners not joining in proceedings.]—The steamships W. & J. came into collision & the W. & her cargo were damaged. Before the issue of the writ an undertaking to put in bail to the amount of £100,000, had been given on behalf of the owners of the J. The writ was in the names of "The owners of the steamship W. & cargo v. the owners of the steamship J.," but at that time no authority from any of the cargo owners had been received. While the litigation was proceeding the owners of the W. asked the various underwriters on the cargo, subrogated to the rights of the respective cargo owners, to join in the proceedings or share in the costs. Some assented & some declined. The litigation proceeded to the House of Lords, where the J. was held alone to blame. The sum of £100,000 being insufficient to satisfy all the claims, the owners of the W. contended that having sued as owners of the ship & bailees of the cargo they were entitled to receive the whole of the bail for which the undertaking had been given, pay themselves the amount of their own damage as shipowners in priority to all other claimants, & that the non-assenting cargo owners had no right to share in the fund :—Held: (1) although, as bailees of the cargo, the shipowners were entitled to recover the full value of the damage to the cargo, represented by the bail, they must account to all the owners of the damaged parcels of cargo for their share; (2) it was the duty of the ct., when the bail was recovered, to see that all persons having a claim on the fund, including the non-assenting cargo owners, shared in the distribution.—THE JOANNIS VATIS, [1922] P. 92; 91 L. J. P. 182; 126 L. T. 718; 15 Asp. M. L. C. 506, C. A.

—— Several salvage actions.]—A vessel which had stranded on rocks & sustained heavy damage got off with the assistance of various salvors & was placed in dock for temporary repairs. In respect of these services various salvage actions & an action by the ship repairers for salvage &/or necessaries were instituted. No defence was put in, but in the first action an appearance was entered & an undertaking given to put in bail for ship, cargo & freight in the sum of £1,000. The cargo & freight were valued at £327. Before the other actions were instituted the cargo had been landed & dispersed. After some temporary repairs had been effected the vessel was sold by the marshal. She only realised £889 :—Held : the bail for cargo & freight did not constitute a fund in which all the salvors could share ; the undertaking was given in one action only, & pltfs. in that action, in which the total values were £1,217, could treat $\frac{327}{1217}$ of £1,000 as bail representing the cargo & freight.—THE RUSSLAND, [1924] P. 55 ; 93 L. J. P. 18 ; 130 L. T. 763 ; 40 T. L. R. 232 ; 68 Sol. Jo. 324 ; 16 Asp. M. L. C. 288.

781h. Amount of bail—Value of ship & freight—Limit of liability—Facts disputed by plaintiffs.] —If, in an action of damage by collision, the amount for which the action is brought exceeds the statutory limit provided by M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 503, deft. shipowners on filing an affidavit in the damage action stating the tonnage of their ship & that the collision happened without their actual fault or privity, will, if these facts are not denied by pltf. shipowners, be entitled to have the ship released on bail being given to an amount sufficient to cover the statutory limit, together with interest & costs. But if pltfs. dispute the facts on which the right to limit liability depends, bail must be given to the full value of defts.' ship.—THE CHARLOTTE, [1920] P. 78 ; 89 L. J. P. 62 ; 123 L. 812a. —— —— Position of third party.]—In an action in rem, pltf. cargo-owners having arrested the ship belonging to the first defts., the ship was released on the first defts. providing bail in the sum of £1,300. Subsequently the charterers of the ship were added as second defts. Pltfs. succeeded in their claim against the charterers but not against the shipowners. The charterers, however, in third party proceedings, succeeded on their claim for an indemnity against the first defts., & applied that the bail furnished by the first defts. might be available to meet their (the second defts.') claim under the indemnity :—Held : the proper course for the second defts. to have pursued would have been to sue out a warrant of arrest on their own claim, when the question of their right to arrest on a claim for an indemnity could have been challenged if the first defts. so desired ; & in the absence of such proceedings no precedent could be found for the suggestion that the second defts., as pltfs. in the third party proceedings, had any right, after judgment delivered, to an order that bail put in to answer another party's claim should be made available to answer their own claim. —THE ROBERTA (1937), 53 T. 837a. —— —— —— ——.]—Pltfs., the owners of a vessel damaged in collision with a vessel owned by defts., a foreign corpn., served a writ upon a member of an English firm, E. M. & Co., who acted as defts.' agents. The writ was served at E. M. & Co.'s London offices. Defts. moved to set aside the writ & services on the ground that they were not resident within the jurisdiction. It appeared that E. M. & Co. were one of deft.'s agents in this country for the booking of freight, issue of passenger tickets, & the ordinary purposes for which ship's brokers are employed. The only remuneration received by them was the customary agents' commission, & they had no concern with the management of deft. corpn. The only name appearing on the door of E. M. & Co.'s offices was their own name, but upon the window of the ground floor their name was exhibited as agents for deft. corpn. together with the names of other foreign shipping cos. for whom E. M. & Co. acted :—Held : E. M. & Co. were a firm who " sold " & did not " make " contracts on behalf of defts., & that defts. did their business in this country " through " E. M. & Co. & not " by " them ; defts., accordingly, were not resident within the jurisdiction & that the writ & service must be set aside.—THE LALANDIA, [1933] P. 56 ; 102 L. J. P. 11 ; 148 L. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 28, is a matter for the discretion of the ct. In such cases the proper course is that there should be the communication between the solrs. which commonly takes place in admlty. cases, & that the solrs. should ascertain whether the parties are ready to file preliminary acts under Ord. 19, r. 28. If both parties are not ready to deliver preliminary acts, or one of them declares himself unable or unwilling, then the matter should be raised by summons. If in such a case an order is made for preliminary acts to be filed, such order is not properly complied with by the party whose vessel has not been in collision filing a blank preliminary act.—THE EL OSO (1925), 133 L. 899a. Admissibility—Against party making.]—Two steamships came into collision in fine, clear weather. They had been on crossing courses, involving risk of collision, & pltfs.' vessel, having the other ship on her own starboard side, had a duty under art. 19 of the collision regulations to keep out of the way. Under art. 21 of the regulations there was a corresponding duty on defts.' vessel to keep her course & speed, but a note to art. 21 provides that, when for any reason the " stand-on " vessel finds herself so close that collision cannot be avoided by the action of the " giving-way " vessel, she also shall take such action as will best aid to avert collision. Pltfs. admitted that their ship took no action at all to keep out of the way & was partly to blame, but they contended that deft. vessel was also to blame for breach of the note to art. 21. In their preliminary act defts. stated that their vessel kept her course & speed up to the collision, & in their defence & counterclaim they added that they so acted " as the best means of avoiding collision or minimising its effect." At the trial pltfs. called no evidence & the defts. submitted there was no case for them to answer: —Held: the admissions in defts.' preliminary act were evidence which could rightly be used against them, although the point was not, perhaps, of very great importance, because the same admissions were made in the ship's logs, which were indisputably evidence.—THE LADY BELLE, [1933] P. 275; 102 L. 979b. —— ——.]—I had occasion, recently, when trying a salvage action in which there had been a tender, to express my view that the fact that the amount of the tender was made known to the ct. before it had determined its award hampered the ct. in its judicial capacity; & that it was better, if a tender were made, that the amount of the tender should not be made known to the ct. until it had exercised its judicial discretion in arriving at what would be a reasonable sum to award, because the question of costs, a serious one, depends upon whether the amount of the award is or is not in excess of the tender. . . . Having expressed my view as to what I thought to be advisable, namely, that the amount should not be stated in the defence, the case of the U. C. has arisen, a salvage case, & is now before me on summons; & I thought it desirable, in view of what has taken place, that my view upon this question should be stated publicly, so that it might be recorded for the information of all concerned. I have thought it right, as I have suggested a variation of what has apparently been the custom & practice of this ct., to speak to the President about it, & he agreed with my view of the case, that putting the amount into the defence in a salvage action was embarrassing to the judge. Upon inquiry, however, it appears that this is such a very old practice, that in the President's view it is not advisable to alter it. The result is that I make no alteration in the existing practice, & dismiss the appeal summons (BARGRAVE DEANE, J.).—THE UPTON CASTLE, [1912] W. N. 84.

1047a. —— For disposing fairly of cause—For saving costs.]—The owners of the steamship N., one of two ships found jointly to blame in a collision action, limited their liability & paid the amount into ct. Claims against the fund were in due course filed by the owners of the N. & the owners of the other ship, the S., & also by the owners of cargo on the S. The same solrs. presented the claims on behalf of the owners of both ships. The owners of cargo on the S., who were not parties to the collision action, then sought leave to administer four interrogatories to the owners of the S. Nos. 1 & 2 asked whether there had been, as between the owners of the two ships, a mutual abandonment of claim or a settlement on other terms. No. 3 inquired whether there had been any assignment of the claim of the owners, master, & crew of the S.; & No. 4 asked by whom the particular solrs. were instructed to present the claim of the owners of the S. The registrar allowed Nos. 1 & 2, but disallowed Nos. 3 & 4. On appeal by both sides :—Held : the first three interrogatories were necessary either for disposing fairly of the cause or matter or for saving costs, within R. S. C., Ord. 31, r. 2, & must be allowed. No. 4 was not pressed.—THE NEDENES (1924), 41 T. L. R. 243.

1062a. —— Confidential report by master.]—Defts., the Port of London Authority, arranged with their underwriters that, in all cases of claims for collision in which their vessels were concerned, the management of the claim should be put in the hands of certain solrs. Defts. directed that a report on a printed form headed "Confidential report for the information of the Authority's solr." should be made by the master of the vessel. The report was subsequently passed through various departments in defts.' offices until it reached the solr.'s hands. It was then dealt with by the solr. in the course of his professional conduct. A report was made in these circumstances by the master of a vessel belonging to defts. in respect of a collision with pltfs.' vessel. Pltfs. claimed to have this report produced to them :—Held : the report having been obtained for the solr., in the sense of being procured as materials upon which professional advice should be taken in proceedings pending or threatened or anticipated, it was privileged from production. —THE HOPPER No. 13, [1925] P. 52; 94 L. Defts. denied liability alleging that the loss was due to pilferage by an organised band of thieves. Defts. had called for reports from the first, second, third, & fourth officers of the steamer, in order to investigate the question of the management of the vessel & the conduct of their officers in the prevention of theft, which reports were in due course obtained through defts.' agents in China. Defts. claimed that these reports were privileged from discovery :—Held : (1) the reports were not privileged. The defence was delivered on Mar. 17, when deft. paid into ct. $2,000 & tendered it to pltf., who rejected it. Pltf. at the trial applied for leave to amend to set up an additional claim. The amendment was made, & deft. increased his tender to $4,000, which was accepted : —Held : (1) deft. should in any event have the costs of & consequent upon the amendment granted at the trial; (2) as to the accepted tender, the increased tender must be regarded as having been made & accepted on Mar. 17, & all the costs subsequent to that tender should be borne by pltf.; (3) the circumstances were not quite sufficient to deprive pltf. of costs before tender.—THE PASCHENA v. THE GRIFF, [1925] 2 W. 1152a. Log of defendants' vessel—Right of plaintiffs to put in—After admission of facts by defendants.]—Defts. to an action of salvage by their defence admitted that all pltfs. had rendered salvage services & that the allegations of the facts of such services set out in the respective statements of claim were in substance correct, but they denied that the various inferences sought to be drawn from those facts were accurate or well founded, & that their vessel was ever in any real danger. They also pleaded certain soundings which differed from those pleaded by certain of pltfs. Pltfs. by their reply joined issue upon the defence save in so far as the same consisted of admissions:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to put in the logs of defts.' vessel with danger, & also a graphic representation of the soundings based on sketches in defts.' log, but not to call evidence as to the facts, e.g. the displacement of certain tugs.—THE WOODARRA (1921), 38 T. 1152c. Lighthouse log — Admissible — Although facts admitted.]—The Cornish Rose was in the English Channel, unable to steam or to steer & in danger of becoming even more helpless. The Finland brought her into safety after twenty-two hours hard work. The facts were admitted upon the pleadings & pltfs. sought to put in defts.' log in support of the inferences which they desired to draw as to the nature of the services. On the other side it was desirable to check these inferences by the entries in the logs of the Lizard & Land's End lighthouses:—Held: although the facts were admitted there was no objection to the admission of the logs for this purpose.—FINLAND S.S. The pilot of the Prinses Juliana was not called as a witness, although he had been subpœnaed by the owners of the Esbjerg. 1185a. —— Photographs — Calculation as to locality of collision—Absence of expert evidence.]—In an action arising out of a collision in Sydney harbour between the ships C. & St. A., there were in evidence three photographs, taken from a third moving ship, showing the colliding ships just before, during, & after the collision, with the frontage of the harbour as background. The point in the harbour at which collision occurred was material. The trial judge, basing his judgment solely upon the other evidence in the case, held that the St. A. was to blame. The appellate ct. gave the owners of that ship leave to adduce upon an appeal by them the evidence of three land surveyors based upon the photographs. They used the alignment of pairs of objects which they identified in the backgrounds to fix the position of the camera when each photograph was taken, & then by reference to the background localised the collision. These results were shown by a diagram. The appellate ct., accepting the result so arrived at, reversed the decision of the trial judge, stating, however, that apart from the new evidence they agreed with it:—Held: the skill or science needed to produce an accurate result by the process adopted was not that of a land surveyor, & in the absence of expert evidence the reversal of the decision of the trial judge was not warranted.—UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD v. THE ST. 1196 iii. —— ——.]—Two ships collided on a very bad night. The collision was caused by the M., which was light, dragging her anchors, & coming down on the R., which was holding to her moorings. When the M. was dragging her anchors she had steam up but did not use it, by which failure she omitted to take a reasonable measure which might have avoided the accident. In an action for damages by the R. against the M. there was uncontradicted evidence to the effect that the steam had not been used because those in charge of the M. did not & could not know owing to the darkness & the weather that they were dragging their anchors. The Lord Ordinary, without expressing any opinion as to whether he credited that evidence or not, accepted an opinion expressed by the nautical assessor to the effect that it would not have been difficult for those on the M. to know that they were dragging their anchors:—Held: it was for the Lord Ordinary & not for the nautical assessor to pronounce upon the trustworthiness of that evidence, & to say whether or not the master of the M. ought to have known when his anchor began to drag, &, on the ground that the evidence did not establish the fault, the M. assoilzied.—CAMBO SHIPPING CO., LTD. 1402a. Failure to file vouchers—Damage action by Soviet Government.]—The Russian Govt., pltfs. in an action for damage by collision, were ordered by the ct. to file vouchers in support of their claim within a specified time, "otherwise, they be precluded from giving evidence in support thereof." Thereupon, pltfs. filed a bundle of documents, which referred only to a few of the items of their claim, & at the reference the registrar ruled that only those items which were supported by vouchers should be allowed to be the subject of proof in the claim, & that no evidence should be allowed to be given in support of the other items. On an appeal from this decision :—Held : the ct. had to bear in mind that the Russian nation had elected to carry on their business in a method entirely different from that in which business was conducted by the rest of the civilised world, with the result that when they came into that ct. they were handicapped to an unusual degree in supporting their claim; &, therefore, although the documents which, in the present case, they had produced in the way of vouchers fell immensely short of being a fair & full notice to the defts. of the case which pltfs. sought to make, in the circumstances justice would be done by allowing pltfs. to give evidence in support of all items of which, in the judgment of the registrar, they gave fair & full particulars to defts. as to the nature of their claim.—THE MARTE (1933), 149 L. T. 383; 49 T. L. R. 363; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 402.

1403a. Agreement for reference to Registrar—Effect of subsequent payment out of jurisdiction—In foreign currency.]—In proceedings for collision damage instituted by the owners of a Chilean steamship against the owners of a Dutch steamship the latter, through their solrs., undertook to appear, & in due course gave bail in an agreed sum. Later defts. made a formal admission of liability, & that admission, signed by the respective solrs. for the parties, was filed in the Admiralty Registry, together with a consent to a reference to assess pltfs.' claim. Pltfs., in compliance with an order to that effect, duly filed their claim & vouchers, but before a date had been fixed for the reference defts. obtained in the Chilean cts. an order permitting them to make payment by depositing in a named Chilean bank a sum in pesos considerably in excess of pltfs.' claim quantified in pesos. This payment was refused by pltfs., the Chilean currency having fallen heavily & the export of pesos being prohibited by Chilean law. On a motion by defts. for an order dismissing the action on the ground that they had satisfied the claim by payment :—Held : there was no final decision by the Chilean cts. that the payment in depreciated pesos was sufficient while proceedings were pending in England, & therefore the motion failed.—THE BAARN, [1933] P. 251; 102 L. J. P. 120; 150 L. T. 50; 49 T. L. R. 554; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 434, C. A.

1403b. —— —— ——.]—A Chilean vessel owned by pltfs. received damage through being run into by a Dutch vessel owned by defts. The Dutch vessel was arrested in England, & her owners put in bail, admitted liability, & consented to a reference to assess the damages. The admission & consent were filed in the registry & became an Order of Ct. The Chilean vessel was repaired in Chile, & pltfs. filed their claim & vouchers comprising (inter alia) some 70,000 Chilean pesos in respect of repairs & detention, quantified into sterling for the purposes of the claim at a little over £1,500. Defts. alleged that under Chilean law a debtor could make a valid payment, even against the will of the creditor, by depositing the amount owed in a Chilean bank in the name of the creditor, &, the exchange value of the peso having fallen, defts. deposited in a bank in Chile 80,000 pesos in pltfs.' name, an amount which defts. alleged was sufficient to cover the whole claim with interest.

LANGTON, J., held that the deposit, so far as it related to the claim in respect of repairs & detention, was a good discharge, & that the reference in respect of these items must be stayed. On appeal, SCRUTTON & ROMER, L.JJ., held that the deposit was not a good payment in satisfaction of the damages & that the reference must proceed; but GREER, L.J., said that in his opinion the registrar should treat the deposit as a payment on account of the sums expended & lost in pesos. The damages in question were agreed at £1,581, & it was further agreed at the reference (a) that the deposit, on the rate of exchange applicable at the time the pesos were expended & lost, was equivalent to £1,409 3*s.* 11*d.*, but (b) that owing to the 1322 i. General costs — Excessive claim.]—In a suit claiming remuneration for salvage services rendered, the claim was excessive & the case was such as to warrant a small award only. The ct. made an award of £25 in favour of pltfs., & ordered defts. to pay the costs of the suit. On a subsequent application for directions, the ct. refused to exercise its discretion & to make a special order for costs.—STUART v. COLUMBIA RIVER (1921), 21 S. R. N. S. W. 674.—AUS.

1323 iii. —— ——.]—Salvors arrested a ship against which they were claiming salvage amounting to £47,500, & they refused to release the ship except upon obtaining security to the extent of £37,500. The arresters ultimately obtained decree for £4,800 as salvage, with modified expenses against defenders, but they were found liable in the expense incurred by defenders in obtaining security in excess of £8,000 :—Held : the arresters were rightly found liable for the expense of obtaining security in excess of £8,000.—ST. CLAIR v. AUDNEY, [1922] S. C. 85.—SCOT.

action of the Chilean Exchange Control Commission it was impossible to purchase sterling, & (c) that defts. could at any time obtain possession of the pesos from the bank in Chile & that pltfs. did not claim them. The registrar held that a foreign deft. sued for damages in this country could not satisfy the claim by offering to pay in foreign currency; that the deposit did not affect the proceedings instituted here; & that pltfs. were entitled to £1,581 & interest. Defts. moved in objection to the report.

BATESON, J., confirmed the report, not only for the reasons given by the registrar, but also because, on the view he took of the judgments of SCRUTTON & ROMER, L.JJ., the question whether the deposit could be taken into account had already been decided. Defts. appealed:—Held: the appeal failed; (per CUR.) on the ground that on the previous judgments of the majority of the Ct. of Appeal defts. were precluded from raising the question that the deposit was to be treated as a sum paid on account of the damages in this country; (per SCRUTTON & MAUGHAM, L.JJ.) on the additional ground that a deposit which could not be converted into sterling could not satisfy or reduce damages payable in sterling; (per MAUGHAM, L.J.) on the ground that procedure in an action brought in this country must be governed by the lex fori & that the deposit in pesos was not a valid payment according to English law.—THE BAARN (No. 2), [1934] P. 171; 103 L. J. P. 149; 152 L. T. 439; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 506, C. A.

1405a. —— —— —— Expert evidence.]—On a reference to assess the damage arising out of a collision the registrar & merchants are not bound to accept the opinions of experts, even though they be all one way, but are entitled to test those opinions by their own experience & bring their own judgment to bear upon the evidence.—THE STEADFAST (1922), 39 T. L. R. 96.

1406a. Reasons should be stated.]—(1) In cases of collisions in which foreign ships are involved, the report of the registrar should state the reasons which have actuated the tribunal in allowing or disallowing large amounts, in order that the foreign interests concerned may appreciate what has been done.

(2) The registrar & merchants are in very much the same position as a jury except that they give their reasons. So far as their reasons involve legal considerations they can be questioned. So far as they are findings of fact it takes a strong case to disturb them, but where it is clear that they have made mistakes or that the evidence does not support their conclusions, the ct. has always retained the power to alter their report, & it is obviously right that the ct. should maintain such a control (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—THE ST. Thereupon certain charterers, to whom the mtgors. had chartered the ship for a term of years, intervened, claiming a declaration that the charterparty was binding on the mtgees. ; & by an order of Mar. 3 the sale of the ship stood over pending the trial of the issue, upon the interveners giving security in an amount satisfactory to the registrar for loss arising from delay & any loss on sale due to a fall in shipping values. On July 15 the ct. gave judgment that pltfs. were not bound by the charterparty, that they were entitled to the judgment they had obtained, & that the costs of & occasioned by the intervention should be paid by the interveners. On Oct. 14 the ship was sold by the marshal for £20,000 less than she had been valued at nine months previously. 1520a. —— Measure of compensation.]—While it has always been the practice, owing to the nature of their calling, to allow seafaring witnesses to be detained on shore to give evidence, & to allow them reasonable compensation for their detention, it is a question for the taxing master whether a party who seeks to charge his opponent with the cost of detaining an expensive witness has acted reasonably in incurring the expense or whether he ought not to have examined the witness on commission.

A taxing master should bear in mind that a witness duly summoned is bound to attend, & the witness is not entitled to receive, as the measure of his compensation, the exact sum he may prove he has lost by reason of the detention. He is, however, entitled to some compensation, & not merely to the conduct money given him with his subpœna ; & the wages he is earning may afford an important indication of what is fair compensation. But although this is correct in the case of seamen, as regards captains & other officers, as in the case of professional witnesses, their earnings cannot be taken as a fair criterion on which to base the allowance.—THE IBIS VI, [1921] P. 255; 90 L. 1520b. —— ——.]—The mate of pltfs.' fishing vessel, through being detained ashore for twenty-five days to give evidence at the trial of a collision action, was prevented from sailing on a voyage on which he would have earned £280 as his share of the catch. Pltfs., who were successful in the action, paid the witness the £280, &, on taxation, the assistant-registrar allowed the item in pltfs.' bill of costs as chargeable against defts. Defts. appealed, & the matter ultimately went to the Ct. of Appeal, which laid down certain guiding principles as to allowances to witnesses & sent the case back for reassessment. On reconsideration the assistant-registrar allowed the sum of £250, & defts. again appealed :—Held : the assistant-registrar had properly applied the directions given by LORD STERNDALE, M.R., in which WARRINGTON, L.J., concurred, namely, that the amount to be awarded should be "the reasonable compensation to a person of the class of the witness, taking into account all the circumstances & considering the wages which the witness was earning about the time of detention not as an absolute measure, but an important indication & guide of what is fair. The fact that all persons are under an obligation to give evidence when called upon should also not be ignored." The appeal therefore failed.—THE IBIS VI (No. 2), [1922] P. 4; 91 L. J. P. 44; 126 L. 1521a. Costs of obtaining statements from independent witnesses—Discontinuance of action.]—In a collision action, before pltfs. had filed their preliminary act or statement of claim, defts. took statements from independent witnesses on other vessels. Pltfs. shortly afterwards discontinued the action. On the taxation of defts.' bill of costs the assistant registrar disallowed the costs of obtaining these statements, on the ground that there was "a well-settled principle of taxation that a party is only entitled as against his opponent to incur such costs or expenses as will enable him to conduct his case at the stage which the proceedings have reached, & not incur expenses in anticipation of matter, which, as events turn out, never arise" :—Held : R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (29), was not limited in the way stated by the assistant registrar; if solrs. could compel the discontinuance of an action by collecting the necessary evidence, they were entitled to do so, & the costs in question were not prematurely incurred, & defts. were entitled to recover them from pltfs. on taxation.—THE CHANNEL QUEEN, [1928] P. 157; 97 L. 1521b. Fee of average adjusters — Numerous claims.]—On a reference to assess damages arising out of a collision, the claims of cargo owners against the fund paid into ct. by the owners of the wrongdoing ship, who had limited their liability, were presented to the registrar in the form of an average statement. On taxation, a fee of £1,000 was allowed to the average adjusters in respect of the preparation of the claims. On a summons to review this item :—Held : where, as in the present case, there were a number of claims to be dealt with, an average statement was a method of proof to which there was no objection in principle, involving as it did less expense than would be incurred in the preparation of many affidavits or in calling a number of witnesses from overseas; it was irrevelant that the claimants had employed the same adjusters to prepare their claims in general average against underwriters; & the fee of £1,000 was rightly allowed.—THE 1551a. —— Unascertained liability—Right of plaintiffs in limitation suit to claim against fund.]—In Feb. 1917, two Norwegian vessels, the C. & the O., came into collision & the C. sank. In Mar. 1917, the owners of the cargo laden on board the C. began an action against the owners of the O. in the Admlty. Ct. The action was heard in May, 1919, when both vessels were pronounced to blame, & accordingly it was adjudged that pltfs. were entitled to receive a moiety of the amount of their damage from defts. Thereupon defts., the owners of the O., commenced a limitation action against the owners of the C., the owners of her cargo, & all persons claiming to have received damage by reason of the collision. This action was heard in Feb. 1920, when a decree was pronounced limiting the liability of the owners of the O. to £8 per ton on the registered tonnage of the O. calculated in accordance with M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60). The decree provided that all claims were to be brought in within three months & that claims not so brought in would be excluded from sharing in the limitation fund. Claims were filed by the owners of the cargo on the C., but although the owners of the C. entered an appearance they took no further steps in the limitation proceedings. Meanwhile, however, in Feb. 1919, the owners of the C. had commenced an action in Norway against the owners of the O. & in June, 1920, when the reference was held in the limitation proceedings & the registrar made his report, the trial of the Norwegian action was still pending. The owners of the O. accordingly took out a summons asking that the report be not confirmed & that they might have leave to file a claim against the fund in respect of any liability they might incur under the Norwegian proceedings. The judge declined to postpone the distribution of the fund & dismissed the summons. Pltfs., the owners of the O., appealed:—Held: (1) pltfs. had no absolute right under the limitation sects. of M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), to have the distribution of the fund stayed & to bring forward a claim when ascertained; (2) limitation proceedings do not contemplate claims by pltfs., & the owners of the O. could not file a claim against the fund in their own right; (3) had an application been made in proper form the ct. would have had a discretion to extend the time before distributing the fund, in order to allow pltfs. to ascertain their liability under the pending Norwegian judgment & to apply to the ct. to adjust the distribution of the fund so that pltfs. might obtain credit for the amount payable under the Norwegian judgment; but, having regard to the lapse of time & to the fact that limitation proceedings contemplate that claims shall be brought in promptly & the distribution of the fund not be unreasonably delayed, the ct. had rightly exercised its discretion in refusing to postpone the distribution of the fund.—THE KRONPRINZ OLAV, [1921] P. 52; 90 L. B. then agreed to sell the premises to G., & a valid contract was executed, which B. did not perform. G. brought an action for specific performance against B., who by her defence signed by counsel pleaded the contract with E. in terms that made the pleading a valid memorandum within the statute. G. added E. as a deft. to the action ; & E., by a counterclaim, claimed specific performance of his agreement :—Held : counsel was the duly authorised agent of B. to sign the pleading & to plead the contract with E., & although the signing of a memorandum within Stat. N. & B. got into difficulties, & were unable to meet their obligations as they became due owing to overtrading, but they claimed to be still solvent. At a meeting of the trade creditors it was agreed that a committee of inspection should be appointed & that N. & B. should execute a deed of inspectorship. The deed, which was executed on May 6, 1928, was in the usual form, & in all material particulars the same as that considered by the ct. in Easterbrook v. Barker, No. 188. By the deed N. & B., the debtors, in consideration of a release of their indebtedness to the assenting creditors, assigned their real & personal estates to C. as inspector upon trust to allow N. & B. " henceforth to manage & carry on their said business " subject to the covenants & conditions of the deed. N. & B. undertook to carry on the business or wind it up as the inspector & committee should think best. In a circular which was sent out by C., the inspector, on Sept. 10, 1928, announcing that the deed of inspectorship had been executed, it was stated that " all

SECT. 4.—AGENCY OF NECESSITY (Vol. I., p. 293).

For "See HUSBAND & WIFE; SHIPPING & NAVIGATION," substitute as follows:—

215a. Extent of doctrine.]—An agency of necessity can arise in other cases than that of carriers by land or sea or the acceptor of a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer. Extraordinary circumstances, such as war conditions, which make it impossible for a buyer of goods on behalf of a principal abroad either to despatch them or to communicate with him, would entitle the buyer to sell the goods as an agent of necessity. But in order to establish an agency of necessity the agent must prove that there was an actual & definite commercial necessity for the sale, & that the transaction was bonâ fide in the interest of the principal.

Where an agent in London bought skins in 1915 & 1916 to be forwarded to his principal in Roumania as the principal might direct, & in consequence of the occupation of Roumania by the Germans in 1916, the agent was unable to send the skins to his principal or communicate with him, & the agent thereupon sold the skins without authority:—Held: the agent had failed to establish agency of necessity because (a) the deterioration of the furs might have been prevented by putting them in cold storage at a comparatively small expense, &, moreover, they had steadily increased in value, & (b) the agent had not acted bonâ fide in selling the skins.—PRAGER v. BLATSPIEL, STAMP & HEACOCK, LTD., [1924] 1 K. T. in fraud of pltf. drew a cheque on pltf.'s account, in favour of defts. in part-payment for a motor-car which T. had obtained from them for his own purposes on the hire-purchase system. Defts. knew that the cheque was drawn by T. as agent for pltf. In an action by pltf. to recover from defts. the proceeds of the cheque:—Held: as defts. knew that T. was paying his own debt to them with pltf.'s money, & as T. had no authority to pay his own debts therewith, pltf. was entitled to recover.—RECKITT v. BARNETT, PEMBROKE & SLATER, LTD., [1929] A. 332b. —— ——.]—Pltf. gave to one T., who was a solr., a power of attorney & authorised him to draw cheques on his, pltf.'s, behalf. T. was also acting as solr. for deft. & obtained from her a cheque for nearly £5,000 for the discharge of certain liabilities of which T. had informed her. At that time deft.'s banking account was, though deft. was not aware of it, about £1,500 short of the amount of the cheque & T. drew a bearer cheque for £1,500 on pltf.'s account & paid it into deft.'s account, the cheque showing on its face that it was drawn by T. as attorney for pltf. T. was thus enabled to cash deft.'s cheque. Pltf., on ascertaining the facts, brought this action against deft. for a declaration that he was entitled to recover from her the proceeds of the £1,500 cheque:—Held: as deft.'s bank had notice on the face of the £1,500 cheque that it represented money belonging to pltf., & as they had received it as agents for deft. & had credited it to her account, pltf. was entitled to succeed.—RECKITT v. NUNBURNHOLME (1929), 45 T. 338a. —— Authority to sign for business purposes.]—Resps. had two accounts with applt. bank at Sydney in connection with a business which they there carried on. They informed the bank in writing that the two managers of their business had authority together to sign & indorse cheques, to draw & indorse promissory notes & bills of exchange, & to transact on their behalf all business connected with the accounts. Banks in Australia frequently issue to a customer, in exchange for a cheque in favour of the bank, a cheque, described as a "bank cheque," drawn by the bank on itself in favour of a person designated by him, or to bearer. In exchange for cheques drawn in favour of applt. bank by the managers, the bank issued to one of the managers bank cheques payable to a name designated by him; these cheques he fraudulently appropriated:—Held: applt. bank was not entitled to debit the bank cheques against resps. The manager had not implied authority to receive bank cheques, & the circumstances in which on certain previous occasions the manager had been allowed to give instructions as to the application of the amount of cheques drawn, made the evidence fall far short of the strong case needed to show an ostensible authority prevailing over written instructions.—AUSTRALIAN BANK OF COMMERCE v. PEREL, [1926] A. The agent, within the fourteen days, signed a contract of sale by which the property was sold to pltf. for £6,700, payable £1,000 deposit (£50 preliminary deposit, to be increased to £1,000 within one month), £2,250 within three months, & £3,450 within six months, possession to be given after the second payment £2,250 at the end of the three months. Defts. were not prompt in providing funds, & pltf. complained of the delay which hampered him in buying, &, in order to induce him to carry out the contract, defts.' agent offered an advance of 25 cents per bushel on the contract price for four cart loads of potatoes:—Held : the agent on the spot, looking after defts.' interests, had a general authority sufficiently broad to cover the making of the contract for the advanced price.—LEGACY v. DAVISON (1919), 52 N. When the tenant left she recommended deft. to pltf. as a tenant. Pltf. never saw deft., but pltf.'s husband arranged some form of lease with him, & thereafter collected the rent, which was paid monthly, on behalf of pltf. & with her authority. In an action of ejectment deft. alleged that pltf.'s husband had given him a lease for four years from Dec. 1913, & that he was a tenant from year to year. Pltf. denied any knowledge of a lease for a term, or that she had given authority to her husband to make such a lease:—Held : the fact that pltf.'s husband had collected her rent was no evidence that he had authority to make a lease for four years on her behalf.—VOGE v. KERR (1919), 19 N. The agent submitted the property to pltf., who elected to take a lease. The agent drew up an agreement to lease the property upon the terms mentioned by deft., & signed it on deft.'s behalf:—Held : deft.'s letter did not authorise the agent to bind him by a concluded contract, but merely amounted to an authority to find a purchaser.—QUICK v. WINTER, [1920] N. 485a. —— —— —— Improper sale.]—Pltf. was the owner of the A. tapestry & the L. tapestry, & he gave to P., a dealer in antiques, a limited authority to obtain & submit offers from possible purchasers. P. falsely represented to pltf. that he could obtain £525 for the A. tapestry, & pltf. allowed him to take it away for delivery to a purchaser, who in fact did not exist. P. then sold the A. tapestry to deft. for £250. Subsequently P., who never had authority to sell the L. tapestry, stole it from pltf. & sold it to deft. In an action for conversion deft. contended that P. had been in possession of the tapestries as a mercantile agent within the Act of 1889, & that as he had bought them from P. in good faith he had acquired the property in them. He also contended that pltf. had held out P. as a person with authority to sell & was estopped from saying that P. had no such authority in fact :—Held : (1) although P.'s authority was limited, & although he was not acting for any principal other than pltf., yet these facts did not prevent him from being a mercantile agent & in the circumstances he was a mercantile agent & in possession of the A. tapestry with the consent of pltf., & as to that tapestry the defence under the Act of 1889 was established; (2) as to the L. tapestry, as P. was never in possession of it with pltf.'s consent, the defence under the Act failed, &, as pltf. had never represented to deft. that P. had authority to sell it, there was no estoppel, & pltf. was entitled to recover the value of the L. tapestry alone.—LOWTHER v. HARRIS, [1927] 1 K. The transaction was carried out by means of the printed forms used by defts. in their business, which were more appropriate to a case in which they bought a vehicle & let it on hire-purchase to a third party, than to the present case. H. being in possession of the lorry then fraudulently sold it to pltfs., who were not aware of the previous transaction between H. & defts. The payments due from H. to defts. under the hire-purchase agreement between them having fallen into arrear, defts. resumed possession of the lorry & refused to deliver it to pltfs. at their request. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. claiming delivery up of the lorry or damages for its detention :—Held : H. was not in possession of the lorry as a "mercantile agent" within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 2 (1), but as a bailee, & therefore the sale of the lorry by him to pltfs. was not rendered valid as against defts. by that sub-sect.—STAFFS MOTOR GUARANTEE, LTD. v. BRITISH WAGON CO., LTD., [1934] 2 K. 490a. Act of 1889—Goods let on hire to employee of seller.—On May 17, 1935, T., a branch manager of pltf. co., bought for & on behalf of the co. from C. a motor-car which was forthwith let on hire under a hire-purchase agreement to F., an employee of C., who was not in a financial position to buy a car on any terms. C. T. & F. all knew that the hire-purchase transaction was not genuine in the sense that it was never intended that F.'s part in it should be a real one or that the car should be delivered to F., either by its physical transfer to his custody or by C. submitting to hold it as his bailee. C. made such payments to pltf. co. as were made under the agreement between the co. & F., &, although F. had agreed not to change the permanent garage of the vehicle, which was expressed to be at his mother's residence, nor to part with its possession or control, & had signed a document acknowledging that he had received delivery of the car, the car remained in C.'s garage, in his possession, & under his control. On Aug. 9, 1935, C. let the car on hire under a further hire-purchase agreement to deft., who took it in good faith & without notice of the transaction between C. & T. In an action by pltf. co. to recover the car from deft. :—Held : that C., having sold the car to pltf. co., had continued in possession of it within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 8, with the result that the delivery or transfer by C. of the car to deft. had the same effect as if C. had been expressly authorised by pltf. co. to make the same, & pltf. co. could not, therefore, succeed in the action.—UNION TRANSPORT FINANCE, LTD. v. BALLARDIE, [1937] 1 K. 495a. Act of 1889—Agent obtaining possession by trick—Authority to sell—At specified price.]—The owner of a motor car delivered it to a mercantile agent for sale. The owner stipulated & the agent agreed that the car should not be sold at less than a specified price without the owner's permission. The agent intended from the beginning to sell the car immediately for the best price he could get & to use the proceeds for his own purposes. On the day on which he got the car he sold it for less than the specified price to a purchaser who bought it in good faith & without notice of the agent's fraud. The agent misappropriated the proceeds. The car was subsequently purchased by deft. In an action of detinue by the owner of the car against deft. :—Held : (1) deft. acquired a good title by virtue of 1889 Act, s. 2 ; (2) the mercantile agent had not rendered himself liable to be convicted of larceny by a trick, inasmuch as he was authorised by pltf. to pass the property in the car to a purchaser ; (3) as pltf. in fact consented to the mercantile agent having possession of the car, it was immaterial whether the latter committed larceny by a trick.—FOLKES v. KING, [1923] 1 K. sp. Dealer in possession of goods—Course of business to sell.]—Pltf., a financing co., took an assignment of an agreement between motor car dealers & their manager for the conditional sale of a motor car. The agreement & the assignment were duly registered. Pltf. left the car in the possession of the dealers knowing that it would be on the latter's premises for the purpose of re-sale. The manager effected a sale of the car to deft., who paid the dealers therefor knowing nothing of pltf.'s claim & believing he was buying from the dealers :—Held : deft. was protected by sect. 60 (1) of Sale of Goods Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, c. 225, & had a good title to the car.—COMMERCIAL ——— (BRITISH COLUMBIA), LTD. v. JOHNSON, [1930] 2 W. W. R. 444 ; 4 D. L. R. 509 ; 43 B. C. R. 61 ; affd., [1931] 1 W. W. sr. ——— Purchase by salesman.]—After a salesman, employed by a co. which sold motor cars at retail, had used one of its cars for demonstration purposes, he was induced by the president & manager of the company to buy the car. The co. when it purchased the car had been "financed" by an acceptance corpn. to which it gave as security a lien note & a chattel mtge. On an interpleader issue following the seizure of the car by the acceptance corpn. the salesman attacked the mtge. on the ground that it was not executed under the seal of the co. &, in the alternative, claimed to be a bonâ fide purchaser without notice of the mtge. or lien agreement registered against the car :—Held : the mtge. was not invalidated by the lack of seal but the claimant was entitled to succeed on his alternative claim, under the principle embodied in sect. 3 of Factors Act, R. 495b. —— —— —— To specified person—Sale to third party.]—Pltf., desiring to sell his motor car for £210, & being informed by N. that he had a friend H., who would probably buy it for that price, allowed N. to have possession of the car for the sole purpose of showing it & endeavouring to sell it to H. There was no such person as H., & N. represented that there was with the intention of obtaining the car for his own benefit. N. afterwards through an intermediary sold the car to defts. for £110. Before N. got possession of the car he had been convicted of theft & other offences, but that was not known to any of the parties. While N. was in possession of the car he obtained an appointment as car salesman to a firm of motor engineers. In an action by pltf. against defts. for the return of the car or its value & damages for its detention ;—Held : (1) N. had obtained the car from pltf. by larceny by a trick, pltf. never having given any real consent to his having or passing the property therein, & pltf. should succeed in the action unless defts. had some valid defence thereto ; (2) defts. could not rely upon the defence that under 1889 Act, s. 2 (1), the sale to them was as valid as if the seller had been expressly authorised by pltf. to make the same, inasmuch as N. was not a " mercantile agent," &, if he was, the sale by him was not a sale in the ordinary course of his business as a mercantile agent, within that sub-section ; &, further, because defts. had failed to satisfy the proviso to that sub-section by showing that they had not at the time of the disposition notice that N. had not authority to sell the car ; & defts. had no defence to the action.

(3) Under 1889 Act, s. 2 (1), proviso, the onus is on the person taking under the disposition of the goods made by the mercantile agent of proving that he acted in good faith & without notice of the agent's want of authority, & is not upon the person whose goods have been disposed of by the agent of proving the contrary.—HEAP v. MOTORISTS' ADVISORY AGENCY, LTD., [1923] 1 K. In 1917, an agreement was entered into between deft. & the general manager of the owners & a third person, whereby the latter became the tenant of the licensed premises & deft. was released from all obligations under the tenancy. The licence, however, was not transferred, & deft.'s name remained painted up over the doorway. During the continuance of the new tenancy liquor as well as food was sold on the premises. Pltfs., during this period, supplied fish, fruit & vegetables to the tenant. The accounts were not fully met, & pltfs., on discovering that deft. was the licensee, which discovery was made after the goods had been supplied, sought to make him liable for the price on the ground that the tenant was either the agent of deft. by operation of law, or that deft. was estopped from denying such agency : —Held : where two people agreed that one should illegally & improperly occupy a position which could only be lawfully occupied by the other, that did not necessarily make the person occupying the position the agent for all purposes of the person who ought to be occupying it ; the tenant was not in fact deft.'s agent ; & as between himself & pltfs., deft. was not estopped from setting up the true state of affairs, because, whatever misrepresentations were made, they did not reach pltfs. nor cause them to act to their detriment.—MACFISHERIES, LTD. v. HARRISON (1924), 93 L. Pltf. telegraphed his acceptance without naming an amount. The offer having been withdrawn, the agent agreed to sell the property to deft. for £825, & let him into possession. On the tender of the formal contract to pltf. for execution a month later he learned about the mistake in the telegram for the first time & refused to complete:—Held: the specific authority originally given to the agent did not authorise the sale of pltf.'s property for less than £900, & no land agent as such is held out as having a general authority on behalf of his client to sell on any terms or at any price.—SHORTAL v. BUCHANAN, [1920] N. In the agreement between pltfs. & C. it was provided that he had no authority to make any representation as to pltfs.' properties other than those contained in their printed matter, & that he should have authority to accept offers for the purchase of lots according to pltfs.' price-list. Pltfs. employed G. to sell their lots. G., in Mar. 1914, telephoned to deft. from pltfs.' office & induced deft. to buy two of the lots, upon the express agreement that pltfs. would resell the lots not later than Aug. 1914, at a profit of $100 on each lot; G informed deft. that he was authorised by C. to make this arrangement. C. was present when G. was telephoning, & heard what G. said; C. told G. that he should not have said that pltfs. would resell the lots; but, according to the testimony of G., C. himself was not called as a witness, C. ratified the representation made in his name & ostensibly by his authority:—Held: C., as general manager, had ostensible authority to make or ratify the collateral agreement, & any secret restriction of his authority would not affect deft., who relied upon his being the general manager.—CANADIAN GENERAL SECURITIES CO., LTD. v. GEORGE (1918), 42 O. The defence was that the agents had a limited authority to state a price only. The premises had been offered for sale by auction by order of the mtgees. under particulars & conditions of sale referred to in the correspondence on Jan. 18. H. & R. inclosed plan & auction particulars to pltfs. stating in their letter that their client would be willing to sell the freehold at £550. On Jan. 27, pltfs. offered £400. On the 28th H. & R. submitted that offer to the first deft., & asked for her instructions. On Feb. 8, the first deft.'s husband communicated with H. & R. over the telephone, & on Feb. 10, they wrote to pltfs. stating that their client would not accept £400, & that "we are now authorised to close with you if you will increase your offer to £450." Pltfs., on Feb. 14, wrote to H. & R. referring to the letter of Feb. 10, & stating "we are prepared to accept your offer of this property agreeing to the price of £450. Kindly forward the contract in due course." On Feb. 17, H. & R. wrote informing the first deft. that, as instructed by her husband, they had offered the property to pltfs. for £450, & that pltfs. had agreed to buy. The second deft. was prepared to purchase the property from the mtgees. at a price more than £450 :—Held : the agents had authority to conclude the contract, & pltfs. were entitled to judgment for specific performance of it.—ALLEN & Co., LTD. v. WHITEMAN (1920), 89 L. The same will be paid at the registration of the conveyance, otherwise not." The offer contained in the letter was accepted by pltf. & thereupon the fact of such acceptance was communicated on the same day to deft. :—Held : the offer contained in the letter amounted only to an offer to be put into touch with intending buyers of the premises & it was in no sense an authority to the brokers to sell deft.'s property or an offer on the part of the vendor to sell the premises to whoever might be brought in touch with the vendor by the brokers.—PURNA CHANDRA DUTT v. INDRA CHANDRA ROY (1921), I. 885a. Grant of sole selling agency—Power of grantee to extend privilege—Extension to company controlled by agent.] — The firm of R. & Co., one of applts., were the sole agents in the Island of Mauritius of the F. Co. of Canada for the sale of F. motor cars & F. spare parts. With the concurrence of said F. co. R. & Co. entered into an identical agreement with each of three garages under which said garages were given the exclusive right to sell F. spare parts in the Island. The agreements reserved, however, to R. & Co. the right to extend the same privileges to two other garages to be chosen by R. & Co. One of said three garage cos., a co. of which the three partners of R. & Co. were directors, went into voluntary liquidation ; &, at the instance of R. & Co., a new co., to wit, resp., was formed, independent entirely of R. & Co. The new co. took over the stock-in-trade of the co. in liquidation & its sub-agency business in F. spare parts. Later, R. & Co. formed another co., the F. Service Station Co., Ltd., one of applts., & conceded to it the privilege of selling F. spare parts within the Island. In the shares of this new co., the then four members of R. & Co., took & retained a controlling interest, the remaining shares being held by their relatives or employees. To this co. the firm of R. & Co. gave the right, in effect, to be & represent itself as being the F. retail distributor in the Island, not only for the sale of F. parts but also for F. cars :—Held : R. & Co. were not entitled under the agreement to choose themselves as one of the garages to whom the privileges of the agreement might be extended, &, consequently, what the firm could not do itself it could not do through a co. controlled by it, & the course adopted by the firm in forming applt. co. was not less damaging to the three other garages than would have been the similar activities of the firm itself. An injunction was granted to the resp. restraining R. & Co. from conceding to the F. Service Station Co., Ltd., the privilege of selling F. spare parts within the Island.—AUTO CAR & SPORT EQUIPMENT CO., LTD. v. FORD SERVICE STATION CO., LTD., [1931] 3 W. W. R. 363, P. C.

Pltfs. wrote to defts. : " We beg to hand you herewith the undermentioned bills for collection, subject to the deduction of commission & expenses & to the condition mentioned." That condition was : " Collections are undertaken at depositor's risk only on the understanding that no liability whatever attaches to the bank in connection therewith or with the storage and insurance of the relative goods." In the margin of the document under the heading " Instructions " was the following : " Documents to be surrendered against payment : if goods are not taken up, please do your best on our behalf to warehouse & insure them against fire." This document was received by the deft. bank, who acted upon it. Goods to which the bills related were destroyed by fire at the Customs House, B., when uninsured. Pltfs. alleged that their loss was due to negligence on the part of the deft. bank & (or) their sub-agents in omitting to insure the goods. It was contended for pltfs. that the clause providing that no liability should attach to deft. bank must be disregarded, as being repugnant to the contractual duty undertaken by the defts. to do their best to warehouse & insure the goods against fire. The action was brought by the C. P. Assocn. against B. Bank & the A.-P. Co., their sub-agents :—Held : although in certain cases where the employment of a sub-agent was authorised the agent might be impliedly authorised to create privity of contract between the principal & the sub-agent, there was no general rule of English law that such authority should be implied when a sub-agency was authorised. 995a. —— ——.] Pltf. had an account with deft. bank, & his wife forged his signature on cheques & thereby drew out all the money left in the account, & she lent it to her sister. Pltf., on discovering the facts, did not at once inform the bank, but about nine months later, when his wife told him that she wanted more money for her sister, he stated his intention of going to the bank, & that night his wife committed suicide. Pltf. then went to the bank & told the manager about the forged cheques. In an action by pltf., claiming to be credited by deft. bank with the amount of the forged cheques, the bank pleaded (a) adoption & ratification, & (b) that pltf. was estopped by his silence from alleging that the signatures were forgeries. The tribunal of first instance found that the forged cheques were honoured through the carelessness of the bank officials. There was no evidence that the pltf. had ever adopted the forged cheques as his own :—Held : ratification had no applicability to a forged signature, but pltf. was estopped from alleging the forgeries because his silence until after his wife's death had caused the bank to lose their right of action against the forger, & therefore the action failed.—GREENWOOD v. MARTINS BANK, LTD., [1933] A. 1001a. Offer accepted by agent subject to ratification—Withdrawal before ratification.]—Pltf. was chairman of the board of management of a charity. Deft. wrote a letter to the board saying that he would sell certain property to the board for £6,500. At a full meeting of the board instructions were given to arrange for an inspection of the property by members of the board on a specified date. A deputation, consisting of pltf. & twelve other members of the board, viewed the property & had an interview with deft. The price of £6,500 was again mentioned, & deft. was told that all the members of the board present had resolved to buy the property, & that they could carry the necessary resolution, & they purported to accept deft.'s offer subject to a formal meeting. The secretary of the charity stated that the deputation was not a quorum & could not act as a properly constituted board. On the next day deft. wrote to the secretary promising that the deeds of the property should be left to be inspected by the solr. to the charity, & that his own solr. would forward a form of contract ; & the secretary thereupon sent out a notice to members of the board of a special meeting to be held two days later " to receive the report & recommendation of the deputation." On the day of that meeting deft. telegraphed to the secretary cancelling all negotiations. The meeting, however, passed resolutions to ratify the deputation's acceptance of deft.'s offer to sell for £6,500, & to instruct the solr. to the charity to require deft. to complete. In an action by pltf. on behalf of himself & of all other members of the board for specific performance of an agreement to sell the property to the charity for £6,500 :—Held : on the facts the members of the deputation did not warrant their authority to bind the board, & their acceptance of deft.'s offer was subject to ratification by the board ; (2) where an offer is accepted by an agent subject to ratification by the principal there is no contract or contractual relation until ratification, & at any time before ratification the offer may be withdrawn.—WATSON v. DAVIES, [1931] 1 Ch. 455 ; 100 L. P. brought an ejectment to recover possession of the lands, & for mesne rates, & after he was in a position to mark judgment, an agreement was entered into in Nov. 1884, between H. & P., by which P. agreed to grant a lease to H. for 31 years from Sept. 29, 1884, H. paying £860 on or before Dec. 15, as & for mesne rates up to that date, & for costs, & that H. should be at liberty to sell subject to the landlord's approval. H. not having paid such sum of £860, judgment for possession was entered on Dec. 16. After the entry of the judgment negotiations took place between P. & D. who had taken the lands temporarily for grazing from H. for a lease of the said lands to D., & on Jan. 2, 1885, D. paid P. £860, & the following day signed a proposal for a lease for 35 years from Sept. 29, 1884, at the yearly rent of £200. P. was only tenant for life of the lands, & could not take a fine, & there was no mention in the agreement with D. of the payment by him of the £860. On Jan. 6, 1885, the writ in the present action was issued by P. against H. claiming £1,000 damages for mesne profits from the expiration of the lease on Sept. 29, 1880, & in the alternative £1,000 for use & occupation. H. by his defence claimed the benefit of the payment by D. of the £860, & by leave of the judge at the trial paid 6*d.* into ct. on the count in trespass. At the trial P.'s agent deposed that he told D. that whoever gave him £860 would get the land. D., who was examined for H., deposed that he knew £860 was claimed from H. for arrears of rent & costs, & that he was willing to pay that sum on getting a good lease. The question left to the jury was " whether the £860 was paid by D. & received by P. as for the rent of the farm due by H." They found that it was, & that the 6*d.* lodged in ct. was sufficient :—Held : there was evidence proper to be 1033a. —— After issue of notice to abate—Before institution of proceedings.] — By a bye-law of the city council of W., which was the sanitary authority of W., it was provided that whenever the council was in vacation the mayor & the chairmen of the respective committees of the council might give such instructions as were requisite with respect to any matter of an urgent nature, provided that all such acts were in due course reported to the council. The council of W. held no meeting between July 26, 1917, & Oct. 18, 1917—the summer vacation, & the public health committee of the council did not sit between July 17, 1917, & Oct. 9, 1917. On July 17, 1917, the public health committee passed a resolution appointing its chairman, & in his absence the acting vice-chairman, to deal with all urgent matters on behalf of the committee during the summer vacation. This resolution was reported to the council & approved by them on July 26, 1917. About the middle of Sept. 1917, the medical officer of health, being satisfied that a nuisance existed upon certain premises in the district of the council & city of W., caused a written notice of the fact of its existence to be served on the owner of the premises under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 3. As the nuisance was not abated, the matter was reported by the medical officer to the chairman of the public health committee, & the latter, considering that the matter was urgent, & acting under the authority conferred upon him by the resolution of the public health committee, which had been confirmed by the council, as before stated, directed that a notice should be served upon the owner of the premises requiring him to abate the nuisance in accordance with the provisions of sect. 4 of the Act. This notice, which was issued in due form, was served upon the owner on Sept. 25, 1917. This action of the chairman was reported to the public health committee at their first meeting after the summer vacation, on Oct. 9, 1917, & approved by them, & the matter was later on, on Oct. 18, 1917, reported to & approved by the council. As the nuisance still continued, proceedings were taken against the owner by the sanitary inspector, & on Dec. 5, 1917, an order was made for its abatement by the magistrate who heard the complaint. The owner thereupon applied for & was granted a rule nisi for certiorari to quash the order of the magistrate on the ground that the same was made without jurisdiction, the notice of Sept. 25, 1917, not having been given by the authority or direction of the council or of the public health committee, or after consideration by them in pursuance of Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 4 (1) :—Held : as the act of the duly authorised agent of the council, namely, the chairman of the public health committee, appointed to act in urgent matters during the vacation under the bye-law & in pursuance of the resolution of the committee subsequently ratified by the council, was reported to & approved & ratified by the council prior to the institution of proceedings against the owner of the premises, the ratification related back to the time of the doing of the act in question, namely, the serving of the notice of Sept. 25, 1917, & the magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order of Dec. 5, 1917.—R. v. CHAPMAN, Ex p. ARLIDGE, [1918] 2 K. 1238a. Duties of sole agent.]—Pltf. co., who had the sole export agency for a certain brand of whisky in Australasia, made a contract with deft. co., whereby the latter became the sole agent in New South Wales for the sale of that whisky. By a clause in this contract, deft. co. agreed to devote the principal part of their energies, so far as Scotch whisky was concerned, by means of themselves, their travellers, & others, to pushing the sale of this whisky in bulk throughout New South Wales. They were, however, not precluded from selling proprietary brands of whisky in response to orders therefor, nor from disposing of their stocks of such whiskies. Pltf. co. became dissatisfied with the volume of orders received from deft. co., & sued them for breach of contract. It was also a term of the contract that pltf. co. should supply, inter alia, all corks for the bottling of the whisky, but, by a substituted agreement, deft. co. used a form of stopper which had a lead liner, & a quantity of whisky was thereby rendered unfit for sale :—Held : (1) deft. co. was under an obligation vigorously to promote the sale of the whisky exported by pltf. co., & to sell as much of that whisky as they could throughout the whole period of the contract, such obligation being subject to their rights under the contract to sell their existing stocks of whisky, & to supply proprietary brands in response to orders therefor. The obligation under the contract was not satisfied by inaction & merely not preferring other brands ; (2) deft. co. had broken their contract, in that they had not made a steady effort to sell the whisky supplied by pltf. co., nor had they done their best to promote its sales in their tied & managed houses. Further, their travellers had solicited orders for other brands ; (3) it was a breach of the contract to allow the exhibition of advertisements, in tied & managed houses, of competing proprietary brands ; though they would be permitted to stock such brands, & to include them in their lists of brands stocked ; (4) there was no implied warranty on the part of deft. co. that the stoppers were free from defect, but, from the relationship between the parties, who were both concerned with the reputation & success of this particular whisky, there was an obligation upon deft. co. to use reasonable care in the matter, & this they had not done.—Davis (B.), Ltd. v. Tooth & Co., Ltd., [1937] 4 All E. Pltf. ordered jars from a manufacturer in England to be shipped in performance of this order. Two lots were shipped & delivered to defts. who paid for them. Delivery of the last lot, which comprised thirty-nine three-gallon & three hundred & forty-two two-gallon jars, was refused by defts. on the ground that there were twenty-three more of the three-gallon jars & twenty-five less of the two-gallon jars than had been ordered, & also that the mouths of a large number of the jars were not of the specified size :—Held : pltf. was under a duty to purchase goods for defts. of the description ordered, & his failure to do so amounted to a breach of duty.—Builters v. Roope, [1922] N. Pltf. then sought to recover from deft. the amount which he had paid for damages & costs in the libel actions as damages for breach of an implied duty to keep secret the letter of instructions:—Held: pltf.'s liability for damages in the libel actions did not result from deft.'s breach of duty, & deft. was liable for nominal damages only.—WELD-BLUNDELL v. STEPHENS, [1920] A. The entries in the books were falsely made by a fraudulent clerk, whose defalcations were not discovered, as they would have been if the entries in the books had been checked by reference to the pass-book:—Held: (1) the accountants were negligent; (2) they were liable in damages for the amount of the defalcations of each year which would have been discovered if the proper steps had been taken as to the pass-book.—FOX & SON v. MORRISH, GRANT & Co. 1263a. ——.]—Agents employed to sell land are generally employed to obtain the best purchase price reasonably obtainable. Their duty to their principal does not cease when they have procured an offer to purchase which he accepts subject to contract. It is still their duty to inform him of any offer which they receive at a higher price than that so accepted, & they remain subject to this duty until final contracts of sale & purchase have been signed & exchanged.

The owner of house property employed a firm of house agents to sell the property. They gave particulars to a tenant of the property, among other persons, & procured an offer from a prospective purchaser. They communicated this offer to the owner, & he accepted it subject to contract. The tenant then made an offer to the agents to purchase the property from the prospective purchaser at an increased price. In the bonâ fide belief that they had performed their duty as agents to the owner when he had accepted the offer of the prospective purchaser subject to contract, they omitted to inform the owner of 1245 iv. —— ——.]—A law-agent, to whom a client entrusted money for investment on heritable security to yield 5 per cent., invested £1,000 of the amount in 1903 on a heritable bond which bore to be secured over tenement property, & £200 on a postponed bond over other subjects. These properties both belonged to another client of the agent's firm, who, in 1905, died insolvent, & heavily indebted to the firm. He had granted an ex facie absolute disposition of the tenement property in favour of the firm prior in date to the bond for £1,000, which loan was accordingly not validly secured; & the postponed bond for £200 was worthless, as the prior bond exhausted the value of the security subjects. None of these facts were communicated to the lender:—Held: while the agents were not guilty of negligence in investing the money as they did in 1903, in view of the fact that they were called upon to obtain a 5 per cent. investment, they were guilty of negligence upon the death of the borrower in 1905, in respect that, a conflict of interest having then arisen between them & the lender in connection with the £1,000 bond, they failed to inform their client of the position, failed to realise her investments, & failed to advise her to seek independent legal advice.—WERNHAM v. M'LEAN, BAIRD & NEILSON, [1925] S. 1260 i. Factor.]—Where advances are made by a factor on the security of a world commodity, such as grain, consigned to him for sale, it is his duty to deal with the goods in such a way as to guard, not only himself, but the principal also, against loss. There is implied in every such transaction a right on the part of the factor to realise on his security whenever the exigency of the case demands it.—UNITED GRAIN GROWERS, LTD. v. MABEY, [1925] 1 D. 1260 ii. ——.]—Where an elevator company advances money on the security of grain delivered to it in storage which it is authorised by the contract between it & the borrower to sell without notice at any time it deems itself unsecure, the co. is not, in the absence of an express agreement to that effect, restricted to resorting to the pledged grain to obtain repayment, but can sue on the implied promise to repay which is ordinarily incident to a loan; &, moreover, the co. is not obliged to sell the grain &, if it does sell it, cannot be held to have been negligent &, therefore, liable to the borrower merely because it did not sell at a time when it could have received a higher price than it did receive.—PATTERSON (N. M.) & Co., LTD. v. CARNDUFF, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 221.—CAN.

1262 ii. —— Extent of duties.]—If a local agent is entrusted by an absent owner with looking after & renting a furnished house, then, although he is not an insurer of the safety of the property, he must use reasonable care & diligence in its protection & preservation, & if he fails to do so he will be liable for the resulting loss. If furniture disappears or is damaged beyond reasonable wear & tear, he is primâ facie liable to account for it. Evidence sufficient to excuse him from liability would in some instances be quite light, in others more burdensome, depending on such questions as the checking over or not of the articles of the furniture, the character of the tenants & the constituents of the tenant's family, the value & nature of the missing articles, etc.

When the owner claims damages against the agent for lost or damaged articles the question of liability may be directly involved in regard to each article, & that liability is a question for the judge, & in such case the value of any article or the damage done to it can be most conveniently determined by the judge when deciding the question of liability, rather than by a referee.—CARLILE v. NORTHERN TRUSTS Co., [1924] 2 W. W. R. 961.—CAN.

There may well be breaches of duty which do not go to the whole contract, & which would not prevent the agent from recovering his remuneration; & as in this case it is found that the agents acted in good faith, & as the transaction was completed & applt. has had the benefit of it, he must pay the commission (ATKIN, L.J.). — KEPPEL v. WHEELER, [1927] 1 K. Pltf. paid that cheque into his own bank account & handed his own cheque for the same amount to the house agent of the vendor. Pltf. engaged deft., who was J.'s son-in-law, to act as his solr. in the purchase of the house. The engagement having afterwards been broken off, & the negotiations for the house discontinued, the house agent of the vendor sent a cheque to deft. for the amount of the repaid deposit. J. requested deft. to account for the sum to him as being his property, & on that ground the deft. declined to pay it to pltf. J. then made a gift of the sum to deft. In an action by pltf. against deft. claiming the sum as money had & received by deft. to the use of pltf., deft. by way of defence relied with the consent & authority of J. upon the latter's claim & right to the sum :—Held : in the circumstances the jus tertii of J. did not avail deft. as a defence to the action.

agent to set off claims against consignors.]—In 1917 pltf. & F., merchants at Odessa in the Russian Ukraine, consigned large quantities of pigs' bristles to a Russian bank at Odessa, as commission agents, to send the goods to England for sale & remit the proceeds to the consignors. The bank, as principals, sent the goods to defts., as their agents, who knew that pltf. & F. were the original consignors. Afterwards the revolution broke out in Russia, & in Dec. 1917, all private banks in Russia were abolished by decree of the Govt., & in 1918 their assets & liabilities were taken over by the People's Bank of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. In 1920 the People's Bank was by further decree abolished & its assets & liabilities were transferred to the Central Budget & Accounts Administration of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. One result of this legislation was that the head office of the Odessa bank in Petrograd was raided & its shares were confiscated, but the Odessa bank was allowed to carry on its business as usual until 1920, when it was closed by a local soviet. This permission was the result of the establishment of an independent republican Govt. over the Ukraine—the Ukrainian Soviet Govt., over which the Russian Soviet Govt. claimed neither a de facto nor de jure jurisdiction, & which was also recognised by foreign powers as an independent Govt. Later on a full federation was entered into between the Ukraine Republic & the Russian Soviet Republic & recognised as a de facto &, recently, as a de jure Govt. by the Govt. of this country. During transit of the goods to England some of the goods respectively consigned by pltf. & by F. became inextricably mixed, with the result that F. assigned all his rights in his consignment to pltf., & notice of the assignment was given to defts. Before the closing of the bank at Odessa the bank ceded all their rights in the bristles consigned to them to pltf. & F. The bristles consigned to defts. were sold by them in 1920, & pltf. demanded payment of the amount of the proceeds, less the amount of defts.' commission, but defts. refused payment, alleging (inter alia) that the goods belonged to the bank at Odessa & that defts. were entitled to set off against pltf.'s claim a debt due to them from the People's Bank in Russia & the Russian Soviet Govt., & pltf. in 1923 brought this action:—Held: (1) assuming that the bank at Odessa was an effective bank up to the time when the bank was closed, the bank's instructions to defts., followed by the transfer of the bank's rights to pltf. & F. & the transfer of F.'s rights to pltf., made it clear that the bank's title to the bristles had gone; (2) assuming that the bank was non-existent & that some other person or persons had given the instructions to sell, the sale by defts. was without the authority of the bank, & in that case the bank's title had gone. In either case pltf. as a disclosed or undisclosed principal was entitled to the proceeds, less defts.' commission with interest from the date of the demand.—DORF v. NEUMANN, LUEBECK & Co. 1501a. Agent wrongfully acting for other principals —Liability of party inducing agent to commit breach of duty.]—Resps. employed D. as their agent to buy tobacco from growers, the total bought not to exceed 300,000 lbs., & supplied him with forms of contract bearing their firm name as buyers. D. agreed not to act as buying agent for anybody except resps. & another firm. Applt., who knew the position as between D. & resps., induced him to buy in the names of the two firms a total of 1,100,000 lbs., arranging with him to take over the surplus not required for them. Out of that total weight D. handed 300,000 lbs. to resps., & tendered the balance to applt., but he repudiated the arrangement, the market having fallen heavily. Resps. having also repudiated liability, one of the vendors, with whom D. had contracted upon resps.' form, was held to be entitled to damages from resps. as having held out D. as their agent. 1501c. Agent acting for both parties—Company with separate departments as agent.] —Pltfs., a trading co., carried on an estate agency & a building business in separate buildings. Deft. employed pltfs., through their estate agency, to find a purchaser for real property, & they found C., who agreed to purchase the property subject to contract & a surveyor's report. C. employed pltfs., through their building department, to inspect the drains of the property & to make an estimate for putting them in order. As a result of the report C. claimed a reduction in the purchase-price. Subsequently after complaint by deft., pltfs. discovered that they had been acting in this way for both the potential vendor & purchaser, &, by their solrs., offered deft. to invite the purchaser to obtain an independent survey of the drains. Deft. did not accept the offer, but completed the sale at a reduction of the agreed price, the reduction being due to the work required to be done upon the drains. Pltfs. sued deft. for commission on the sale :—Held : (1) pltfs. had acted in good faith, & deft. had in fact suffered no damage, as C. would in any event have secured a report on the drains, & any competent person would have recommended an expenditure on the drains of more than the reduction in the purchase-price ; (2) pltfs. constituted one person in law, however, many businesses they might carry on, & in acting as they did they committed a breach of their duty as agents of their principal, but as deft. with full knowledge of the breach of duty on the part of pltfs. had completed the contract at the reduced price, pltfs. were entitled to commission. Vendor, with full knowledge of their action on behalf of the purchaser, had refused the offer of pltfs. to stand aside that C. might have the drains tested by another firm, & had concluded the sale at the reduced price.—HARRODS, LTD. v. LEMON, [1931] 2 K. The broker, as he was entitled to do by the terms of his agency, closed the account by selling the cotton which he had bought for applt. He sold (inter alia) two lots of foreign cotton to different jobbers at the respective market prices of the day & immediately bought back from the same jobbers at the same prices equivalent amounts of cotton of the same description. The broker having assigned his property for the benefit of his creditors, resp. as trustee of the deed of assignment, sued applt. to enforce the broker's claim to be indemnified. 1594 iv. ——.]—Pltfs. sued to recover five Victory Bonds, or the proceeds thereof, handed by them to deft. H., a real-estate agent, in payment of the purchase-price of property owned jointly by the defts. Pltfs. alleged that H., knowing that they were relying, because of inexperience, on his advice had induced them to give him the bonds for investment in the property without disclosing his interest therein, & the ground pressed on the ct. for their return was that a fiduciary relationship arising from agency existed between them & H. which put him under the burden of establishing the perfect fairness of the transaction, although it was nowhere distinctly alleged that they had employed him as their agent to buy the property :—Held : H. never was pltf.'s agent, &, moreover, that he had fully disclosed his interest in the property before the sale. Defts. were originally appointed in 1908, & up to 1911 had the repairs executed by outside contractors. In 1911 defts. opened their own repairs yard, did the repairs themselves, & charged the "usual trade prices," which included a profit. 1638a. —— ——.]—Pltf. agreed to purchase a motor car from deft., & in accordance with the agreement he paid a deposit. Pltf. afterwards purported to repudiate the contract, wrongfully, as the judge found. During the pendency of an action by him for the recovery of the deposit pltf. died, & his exors. were substituted as pltfs., & they then discovered that at the time the contract was entered into deft. had promised, without the knowledge of pltf., to give pltf.'s chauffeur a share of the profit on the sale of the car if pltf. bought it. On the ground of that secret arrangement the exors. now sought to avoid the contract & to recover the deposit :—Held : the surreptitious dealing between deft. & pltf.'s chauffeur was a fraud on pltf. ; the fact that pltf., when he purported to repudiate the contract, was not aware of the fraud, did not prevent his exors. from now relying upon it ; & they were entitled on the ground of the fraud to avoid the contract & to recover the deposit.—ALEXANDER v. WEBBER, [1922] 1 K. 1671 xii. —— —— ——.]—It is not a general principle of law that whenever a man, having found out from the owner of property the terms upon which it can be sold or leased, produces a third party who will buy or lease on those terms, he thereby & without more entitles himself to payment of a commission by such owner. There must be, in addition to this, an intimation to the owner that a commission would be expected from him in the event of a sale or lease being effected upon the terms stated. The intimation of expectancy of a commission not negatived by the owner who permits the other to go to the trouble of finding a customer in the expectation of earning a commission, may well be a fact from which a promise to pay a commission may be inferred. A mere volunteer who acts as a go-between between buyer & seller & ultimately produces a sale cannot upon that fact alone found a legal claim for commission, nor can a third party, who acting for a possible purchaser, obtains from a property owner terms of sale or lease, & thus brings about a completed transaction upon those identical terms, legally claim a commission from the owner in the absence of some promise to pay a commission, either express or implied.—CHAMBERLIN v. MAW (1922), 68 D. so. Necessity for compliance with Land Agents Act, 1922.]—Pltf., who was a land agent, received instructions from deft. to sell deft.'s property, & obtained a buyer at the price authorised, who paid pltf. a deposit of £200. On the same day that pltf. sold the property deft. sold it to another buyer & in effect repudiated the contract of sale effected by pltf. on his behalf. On the repudiation of the contract pltf. utilised the deposit of £200 received from his purchaser in the purchase of another property by the first buyer. Pltf. notwithstanding that he did not forward the deposit, with the signed contract to deft., less his commission, sued deft. for commission on the sale. Deft. applied for a nonsuit on the ground that pltf. had not complied with the provisions of Land Agents Act, 1922, s. 8, deducting his commission from the deposit, & handing the balance to deft. The magistrate having nonsuited pltf. :— Held : sect. 8 deals with the application of trust moneys & if the deal was going through it was the duty of pltf. as agent to act in compliance with it, but if the deal was not going through, if there had been repudiation as the magistrate found sect. 8 had no application. Pltf. was accordingly entitled to payment of his commission. —BALLANTYNE v. CLOUTT (1927), 29 W. A. L. R. 93.—AUS.

(the purchaser) farms under said purchase agreement, & delivers your grain," &, as to the remaining $780 "in the fall of 1931 under the same conditions of N. farming, & delivering the crop to you the same as 1930." Pltf. had recommended N. to defts. as a man fit & competent to perform his contract with them, but in the fall of 1930 his position was such that he was unable to carry on &, in consideration of a quit-claim deed, he was released from his contract. He had farmed the land in 1930, & delivered one-half share of the crop harvested by him to defts., but he did not summerfallow according to the terms of the contract, or pay the taxes or the interest on the unpaid purchase-money, & he negligently allowed 125 acres of standing crop to go to waste :—Held : the condition of pltf.'s right to the commission was, not merely the purchaser's delivery of deft.'s share of the grain grown on the land ; but also his farming the land in accordance with the terms of his purchase agreement, &, as he had not done so in 1930, pltf. was not entitled to the $500, nor to the additional $750.—Broatch v. Vermont Loan & Trust Co., [1931] 2 W. 1706 xvi. —— ——.]—A. promised B. a commission if B. sold a ship. B. employed a broker as sub-agent, who mentioned the matter to another agent, & it was passed on through others until, about nine months after the agreement with B., a broker to whom the matter was mentioned came to A. & made an arrangement directly with him resulting in a purchaser being obtained. B. continued his services, which were accepted by A., up to the time of sale, & was of assistance in procuring the Govt.'s consent to a transfer of the ship to a foreign registry :—Held : B. entitled to commission.—GREER v. GODSON, [1921] 2 W. 1706 xvii. —— ——.]—Pltf. endeavoured to effect a sale of deft.'s land to a co., of which H. was a director, & introduced H. to deft. The parties failed to agree upon terms & the negotiations ended, & pltf. made no further effort to sell the land. Subsequently deft. through another agent sold the land to H., who purchased it on behalf of another co. :—Held : pltf. was not entitled to commission.—NEVE v. LEESON, [1921] 1 W. W. 1706 xviii. —— ——.]—After pltfs., with whom a house had been listed, introduced a prospective purchaser to the vendor, the purchaser endeavoured to induce the vendor to reduce the price. The vendor was unwilling to fix a figure agreable to the purchaser, & the latter then negotiated through other agents, with whom the house had also been listed, & finally bought it :—Held : pltfs. were entitled to commission.—BROOK & ALLISON v. HENDRICKS (1922), 66 D. 1706 xix. —— ——.]—Deft. listed a property with pltfs. with instructions to find a purchaser at the price of $5,000. A month later deft. listed the property with another broker at $1,750, the second broker having his offices across the hall from pltfs.' offices in the same building. Pltfs. interested S. in the property & brought her to view it. Shortly after S. went to pltfs.' offices with a view to purchasing, & when about to enter the offices saw a picture of the property in the window across the hall marked for sale at $4,750. She went into pltfs.' offices, discussed the sale but went out without making the purchase, crossed the hall & purchased the property from the second broker at $4,750 :—Held : pltfs. were entitled to their commission —TURNER, MEAKIN & CO. v. FIELD (1923), 33 B. 1706 xxi. —— ——]—Pltf. received written authority from deft. to enter into a contract with a purchaser for the sale of his farm & stock. The rate of remuneration was stated to be a certain percentage on the value of the land sold. Pltf. introduced the property to a prospective buyer, who ultimately purchased the property, but through the instrumentality of another agent. Pltf. claimed from deft. £171 19s. in respect of the land sold, & £65 in respect of the stock & implements. The jury found that the sale had resulted from the introduction of the purchaser from pltf. :—Held : pltf.'s right to commission depended on the terms of his authority, & this did not authorise any commission on the sale of the stock.—ROWE v. BUTLER, [1921] N. Deft. also agreed to let pltf. know should he be prepared to sell his house for a smaller amount than he had mentioned to pltf. Deft. subsequently instructed another attorney to offer the house to X. at a reduced price, & a sale was thereupon concluded :—Held : pltf. was entitled to the commission agreed upon.—VAN DER WALT v. HOFMEYR, [1920] C. sb. Agent to procure loan to third party—Loan raised by third party.]—Pltf. claimed a commission of 1 per cent. from deft. on the ground that the latter had requested him to raise a loan of £27,500, subsequently increased to £35,000, not on behalf of deft. but on behalf of one F. It was admitted that deft. had sold a certain property to F. for a sum of £45,000, £10,000 to be paid in cash & the balance to be secured by a bond over the property; through pltf.'s efforts the manager of a certain insurance co. was prepared to advance £27,500 to F. on a first mtge. over the property & that thereafter a sum of £35,000 was in fact advanced by the insurance co. upon that security, together with certain additional securities. Deft. denied that he had made the contract alleged with pltf. & stated that the real arrangement between them was that pltf. should raise a loan of £27,500 on behalf of deft. himself & not for F., & further, that if F. paid off the whole amount of the purchase price in cash pltf. was not entitled to any commission whatever, & that F. had personally raised on his own behalf a loan of £35,000 not on the security of the property alone but on additional securities belonging to him. At the trial pltf. applied for leave to amend his declaration so as to base his claim on a mandate to raise a loan of £27,000 only. The trial ct. refused to grant the amendment & held pltf. had earned commission on £35,000, the sum actually advanced to F., but as pltf. had declared himself satisfied with £275 awarded the latter amount. Deft. having appealed :—Held : commission of 1 per cent. was promised pltf. by deft. if the former was instrumental in obtaining a loan of £27,500 from the insurance co. to F.; further, in view of application for amendment, which should have been granted, it was unnecessary to consider whether pltf. was entitled to commission on the whole sum advanced. &, as on the facts, it was clear that £27,500 would have been advanced on the property alone, the fact that £35,000 had been lent

On the day when the charterparty was signed defts. signed & gave to pltfs. a commission note in these terms: "We hereby agree to pay you . . . 5 per cent. brokerage on hire. . . . Should the option of purchase contained in the charter be availed of, the brokerage on purchase to be 3½ per cent. . . ." The charterparty was acted upon until June, 1921, when defts. sold the steamship to the charterers for £65,000. Pltfs. brought an action against defts., claiming (inter alia) 3½ per cent. commission on £65,000, the price paid by the charterers for the steamship, &, in the alternative, a quantum meruit for their alleged services in effecting the same :—Held : (1) the former of these claims failed, the option of purchase mentioned in the commission note never having been exercised, & the sale effected being a sale at a different price from that upon which alone the brokerage of 3½ per cent. was to become payable ; (2) the latter claim also failed inasmuch as the parties having reduced their bargain into writing in the commission note, there was no scope for the operation of the principle of quantum meruit.—HOWARD-HOULDER & PARTNERS, LTD. v. MANX ISLES S.S. We also confirm that, in the event of this sale being satisfactorily completed, we shall pay you the usual scale of commission." An engrossment of the contract was signed by Major H., but defts. then refused to proceed, whereupon pltfs. claimed commission or, alternatively, damages for breach of an implied term that defts. would do nothing to prevent pltfs. earning their commission. It was found as a fact that Major H. was ready & willing to buy the property:—Held: although in an agreement "subject to contract," the matter, as between vendor & purchaser, must be deemed to remain in negotiation until contracts are exchanged, there must, as between pltfs. & defts., be implied a term that if the purchaser introduced by pltfs. was ready & able to complete the contract, defts. would not by refusing to complete prevent pltfs. from earning their commission, & as defts. had without just excuse refused to complete, they were liable to pltfs. in damages, the proper measure of which in the circumstances was the amount of commission pltfs. would have earned had the transaction been completed.—TROLLOPE (GEORGE) & SONS v. MARTYN BROS., [1934] 2 K. 1755b. ——.]—Pltfs., who were estate agents, were instructed by deft. to find a purchaser for certain property belonging to him, part of which he informed them was let to a tenant at £180 per annum. Pltfs. found an intending purchaser "subject to contract," but after negotiations had proceeded for some time deft. informed pltfs. that although the lease of the part of the premises referred to stated the rent to be £180, he had verbally allowed the tenant to pay £145 only, & would decline to go back on this arrangement. On becoming aware of this the intending purchasers declined to proceed unless the purchase-price was reduced, & as this was not agreed to by deft. the transaction went off. On a claim by pltfs. to recover commission or damages for breach of contract the county ct. judge gave judgment in their favour for the full amount they would have earned as commission if the transaction had gone through. On appeal:—Held: before an

When the agreement was mentioned to the solr. for the persons financing the builders, he refused to allow the sale to go on, upon the ground that it was completely one-sided & too advantageous to the buyer. The builders then refused to go on with the sale & the agent sued for his commission :—Held : the fact that upon further consideration the bargain is far too favourable for the purchaser is not a just excuse for refusing to proceed with the sale, & the agents were entitled to damages for the loss of the opportunity of earning their commission, & such damages ought to be assessed at half the amount of the commission.—BAMPTON (RONALD) & PARTNERS v. GARNER & SONS, LTD., [1937] 3 All E. 1780a. ——.]—Pltfs. D. & Co., who were partnership agents, claimed to recover from deft. the sum of £92 10*s.*, being the balance of commission on the sale of deft.'s business premises at T., effected by pltfs. Deft. had advertised the property for sale, & pltfs. had sent him a "particular form" which was in blank, except the words: "I hereby instruct you to sell my business premises as per particulars above, which I declare to be correct, & agree to pay you a commission 5 per cent. on the total price paid by the purchaser & appoint you agents," which, as pltfs. alleged, they had inserted on the form before sending it to deft. On July 8, 1928, deft. filled in the form & returned it to pltfs., but he subsequently denied that the above words were on the form when he signed it. A firm of G. & Co., estate agents, believing that they had secured a likely customer for the property, communicated with pltfs. & sent their representative, P., to them, & pltfs. introduced P. to deft. Deft. alleged that P. had been introduced to him as a purchaser, but pltfs. contended that he had been introduced to deft. as another agent who would be likely to find a purchaser. Ultimately P. found a purchaser in one T., who agreed to pay £4,000 for deft.'s property. In the "particulars form" deft. had stated: "Lowest price for goodwill, fixtures, & fittings, £4,500," but he eventually accepted £4,000. Meanwhile pltfs. & G. & Co. had agreed to share the commission. Deft. subsequently paid commission amounting to £107 10*s.* to G. & Co. As this amount was £92 10*s* short of £200, the 5 per cent. commission on £4,000, pltfs. on Nov. 2, 1928, issued a writ claiming the balance from deft. The completion of the purchase did not take place until Nov. 15, 1928, & deft. contended (inter alia) that he was not liable to pay commission until he had received the purchase price. The jury found (a) that the words in relation to the 5 per cent. commission were in the particulars form of July 8, 1928, when deft. signed it, (b) that the property was sold to T. through the instrumentality of pltfs., & (c) that G. & Co. were not acting as sub-agents for pltfs.:—Held: (1) pltfs. were not to be deprived of their commission by reason of the fact that the property was ultimately sold for £4,000 instead of the £4,500 asked by deft. in the particulars form; (2) the jury's findings that the words about 5 per cent. commissions were in the document when deft. signed it, the property was sold through the instrumentality of the pltfs., & that G. & Co. were acting as sub-agents for pltfs., could not be interfered with; & (3) although pltfs. had done all the work required to entitle them to their commission, they were not in a position to claim payment of their commission until the purchase was completed, & as the writ was issued thirteen days before the date of the actual completion of the purchase, it was issued too soon & the action failed.—PRICE, DAVIES & CO. v. SMITH (1929), 141 L. 1780 ix. —— Agreement to pay commission on work done.]—Pltf., who was employed by deft. to sell a station property & to find a lease for another, found A., who was ready & willing to purchase the one & to lease the other, & with him deft. entered into a contract. Subsequently the contract having fallen through, pltf. was employed by deft. to raise money for him which it was hoped would enable the purchase & lease by A. to be carried through, & a written agreement was entered into between pltf. & deft., by which it was provided that in the event of the completion of the sale & lease deft. should pay to pltf. a certain sum "representing commission due to" pltf. "on these transactions." The sale & leasing were never completed. In an action to recover the sum mentioned in the agreement, the trial judge found that when the agreement was entered into pltf. had a right to recover a reasonable sum for commission in respect of the work he had then done, & that the contract did not deprive him of that right:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover a sum made up of 1 per cent. of the purchase-money & 5 per cent. of a year's rent.—FRY v. BYRNE (1917), 23 C. During the period of the agency deft. negotiated personally & quite apart from pltfs. with a purchaser who had never had any communication with pltfs. & whom pltfs. did not know. The result of the negotiations was that the property was sold to this purchaser. Pltfs. thereupon claimed from deft. damages for breach of contract on the ground that, in selling the property direct to the purchaser, he had acted in breach of his contract with them & had thereby deprived them of their commission :—Held : (1) pltfs. were not entitled to damages, as the contract contained no express prohibition against a sale by deft.

The commission was stated to be "five per cent. on all sales." Pltf. being unable to find a purchaser willing to make the cash payment, then introduced a father & son to whom deft. agreed to sell the farm for a certain price to be paid by yearly payments of principal & interest "out of a half-share of the crop." Deft. then agreed in writing to pay the plaintiff a commission of a certain amount payable partly in cash within two weeks, "the balance by paying 25 per cent. of all money paid by said purchaser on principal as soon as the same are received." Deft. made the cash payment to pltf., & also other payments which amounted to 25 per cent. of all he ever received from the purchasers on principal. The purchasers being unable to meet their obligations, deft. took proceedings against them & the land reverted to him, nothing having been paid by the purchasers on the principal within the preceding three years. Pltf. then sued for the balance due him on the basis of a 5 per cent. commission :—Held : the meaning of the second agreement was that it was a condition precedent to deft.'s liability to pay any commission, over & above the cash payment, that instalments of capital should first be paid by the purchasers.—LEVENICK v. TURNBULL, [1932] 1 W. 1848a. ——.]—Pltf. was employed by deft., a music seller, to find a purchaser of the lease of deft.'s business premises, which were held under a covenant against carrying on any other business. Several tailors expressed to deft. their willingness to buy the lease for £2,500, but deft., believing that the landlords would not consent to the carrying on of a tailoring business, did not approach the landlords. Pltf., however, having found a tailoring co. who wanted to purchase the lease, received an assurance from the landlords that they would consent to a tailoring business, & he, by concealing this fact from deft., induced him to agree to sell the lease to the tailoring co. for £2,250 in ignorance of the fact that the proposed purchasers carried on a tailoring business. 1951a. ——.]—By an agreement made between pltf. & a limited co., which carried on business in Lancashire, in consideration of pltf. subscribing for £1,000 in shares of the co., & of introducing to the co. certain new classes of goods to be manufactured by them, the co. appointed him their sole agent in the United Kingdom, India, & the Colonies for the sale of those goods for the term of seven years, if the agent should so long live, & thereafter until the agreement should be determined by six months' notice on either side. The agent was to use his best endeavours to obtain orders for the co.'s goods at prices to be from time to time agreed upon, & all orders obtained by the agent were at once to be communicated to the co., who upon approving or rejecting the same were to inform the agent thereof & who were to carry out such orders as were accepted without undue delay ; & the agent was not definitely to accept orders for the co., but only subject to confirmation & acceptance by the co., such confirmation or acceptance not to be unreasonably withheld. The co. were to pay the agent a commission upon the invoiced prices of all goods delivered by the co., & duly paid for by the respective purchasers. A few months afterwards the co. required fresh capital, & they applied to pltf. to assist them in finding it, telling him that otherwise they would have to close down. Pltf. tried to do so, but failed. The co. then asked pltf. to give up the agency for the Manchester district, telling him that he would have to stand down so far as that district was concerned, in which case they thought that they could find the necessary capital, but he refused. The co. thereupon being insolvent passed resolutions for voluntary winding up & ceased to do business through pltf. & eventually sold their business. In an action to recover damages for breach of the agreement to employ pltf. as their agent for the seven years :—Held : the agreement was to employ pltf. as agent for the seven years & a term could not be implied to the effect that the co. could terminate the agency at any time by ceasing to carry on their business ; & the circumstances coupled with the voluntary winding up showed a repudiation by the co. of the agreement, & they were therefore liable in damages for the breach.—REIGATE v. UNION MANUFACTURING CO. 1946 i. Principal bound to enable agent to earn commission.]—By agreement dated Aug. 17, 1929, R. appointed C. his sole agent to sell a certain publication in Australia on a commission basis. The agreement provided, inter alia, that the agency should commence on the date C. & R. arrived in Australia, & that it could be determined by either R. or C. on the happening of certain specified events. None of those events in fact happened. The parties came to Australia & the business of the agency was embarked upon. In Jan. 1930, R. went into partnership with S. in the business of booksellers. On Mar. 15, 1930, R. gave C. six months' notice of the termination of the agency agreement of Aug. 17, 1929. On Aug. 1, 1930, R. & S. entered into an agreement with a co. for the sale to it of the goodwill & assets of their business including the agency rights. After Aug. 1, 1930, R. did not accept any new orders from C. under the agreement of Aug. 17, 1929. C. did not know of the agreement of Aug. 1, 1930, until after Sept. 15, 1930, up to which date he regarded himself as still employed by R. He took orders for the co. & received commission from it. From Sept. 15, 1930, he was refused further employment by R. He thereupon sought to recover damages from R. for his wrongful determination of the agreement :—Held : a term could not be implied into the agency agreement that R. could terminate the agency at any time by ceasing to carry on his business, & C. was entitled to recover from R. such damages as he sustained by reason of the wrongful determination of the agreement.—COULTER v. READHEAD (1931), 31 S. 1959 ii. For this number read "1967 i."

1967 ii. —— ——.]—In a five years' agreement between a selling agent & a firm of merchants it was provided that, if at the end of the first three years the agent had not realised a certain turnover, the merchants should be entitled to terminate the agreement. The agreement further provided that the merchants undertook to supply goods to the agent, who was bound to buy exclusively from them. At the end of the three years the value of the goods sold & delivered by the agent failed to reach the stipulated turnover, & the merchants terminated the agreement. The value of the sales effected by the agent had in fact materially exceeded the stipulated figure, but the value of the goods actually delivered by him fell short of it, owing to the failure of the merchants to supply him with the full amount of goods ordered by him. The merchants, who were not manufacturers, were dependent on delivery to themselves by the manufacturers, &, owing to war conditions, they were themselves unable to obtain the full supplies they required. They had, however, obtained sufficient goods to have implemented the agent's orders, but they preferred to distribute these goods ratably among all their agents & customers, the agent in question receiving his full share. In an action by the agent against the merchants concluding for damages for unjustifiable termination of the agreement :—Held : defts. were not entitled to terminate the agreement.—DOWLING v. METHVEN, SONS & CO., LTD., [1921] S. 1978 iii. —— ——.]—Pltf. & defts., an English business house, entered into an agreement by correspondence by which pltf. was to be the selling agent of defts.' goods in British Columbia. In the letter from defts. setting out the proposed terms of agreement were the words " this offer to be firm for one year." Defts. broke the agency agreement during the first year :—Held : pltf. was entitled to damages on the basis of loss of profits on two years contract, as being reasonable in all the circumstances.—MACDONALD v. CASEIN, LTD., [1919] 1 W. 1978 iv. —— ——.]—In 1911 resps. agreed to employ applts. as under-brokers for the business of a co. during the subsistence of an agreement which they themselves had as brokers to the co. : the latter agreement was for five years. In Aug. 1912, resps. wrongfully determined the agreement with applts. On Dec. 2, 1912, resps., bonâ fide & not as a means of limiting the damages, made a new agreement with the co., the terms of which were inconsistent with, & thus put an end to, the original agreement between resps. & the co. In Jan. 1913, applts. sued resps. for damages : — Held : the damages recoverable were limited to the amount which applts. would have earned as under-brokers down to Dec. 2, 1912.—LACHMANDAS, KHANDELWAL v. RAGHUMULL (1919), L. The grantee was by the instrument appointed sole agent of the grantor to effect all sales of produce, stock, & chattels which the grantor might require or desire to sell. The grantor, without obtaining the grantee's consent, sold to deft. in the ordinary course of business certain lambs the natural increase of the stock specifically described in the sched., & the grantee (pltf.) sought to recover possession of the same or their value :—Held : the appointment of the grantee as sole agent to sell did not negative the implied power of sale, & the sale, although it might be a breach of covenant, gave to the purchaser a good title to the lambs, & the sole agent's remedy was for damages for breach of contract.—NEW ZEALAND FARMERS' CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCN. 2126a. —— Sold by agent—Effect of misrepresentation as to being principal.]—G., employed as a traveller by a firm of builders, owed deft. £17 for goods sold. He asked deft. to buy timber from him, telling him that he had left the employment of the builders & had set up as a timber merchant on his own account, & deft. agreed to order timber from him on the terms that G.'s debt of £17 should be set off against the price. G. had not set up in business on his own account, but was employed by pltf. as an agent for sale on commission. Timber was delivered to deft. with invoices & letters bearing the name, address, & description of pltf., which G. told deft. were his own trade name, address, & description. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. for the price of the timber, & the county ct. judge found that deft. honestly believed that the name, address, & description on the invoices & letters were those of G., but that deft. was put upon inquiry by the invoices & letters, & had notice that G. was not selling as a principal but only as an agent for pltf., & he gave judgment for pltf. for the price of the timber :—Held : deft. had no more than constructive notice that pltf. was the principal of G., & in the circumstances constructive notice was not equivalent to actual notice; deft. had made no contract with pltf., & was entitled to judgment.—GREER v. DOWNS SUPPLY CO., [1927] 2 K. At B.'s request C. made a cheque for the purchase price payable to him. C. bought in good faith & for value. M. repudiated the sale & sued to vindicate the cattle sold without authority :—Held : the written authority & the request for personal payment should have put the purchaser upon inquiry.—MULLER v. (1923), 44 N. sa. Action for money paid under contract.]—Pltf., desiring to have ten vessels constructed in Canada, entered into a preliminary agreement with A., whereby A. was to enter into contracts with three builders for the construction of the vessels, called "building contracts," & at the same time into contracts with pltf., called the "vessels contracts" providing for the payment for vessels, the nature of their construction & due delivery thereof. The "building contract" & the "vessel contract" each expressly stated that a copy of the other was attached to & made a part of it. By the "building contract" deft. covenanted to build the vessels according to the terms of the "vessel contract," & this contract was expressed to be made with pltf. as well as with A., & deft. also confirmed provisions of the "vessel contract" for payment of the instalments of the purchase price to A. & appointed A. his agent to receive payments. Upon the signing of the contracts a first payment made by pltf. to A. was distributed by A. between the three "builders," who proceeded with the construction of the vessels. Upon pltf.'s failure to make the next deposit as provided for in the "vessel" contract, deft. gave notice terminating the contract. & carry on as going concerns eight greyhound racecourses. An underwriting agreement was entered into by trustees for deft. co. & B. co. & a draft prospectus was prepared therein referred to. On the following day M. & O. offered to sub-underwrite 12,000 shares, & sent a cheque for £600 to B. co., which was accepted by them on Dec. 8. On Dec. 12, the co. was incorporated, the underwriting agreement ratified, & a similar prospectus signed by the directors, which, on Dec. 19, was issued to the public. The response not being sufficient, the balance of shares was issued to the underwriters or sub-underwriters. One of such allotments was for 8,160 to M. & O. as sub-underwriters. A number of sub-underwriters had repudiated their agreements on Dec. 16, but this was not known to the directors when they went to allotment on Dec. 17. Subsequently these 8,160 were renounced in favour of pltf. The consequence of the failure of some of the underwriting agreements was that two of the racecourses, representing about two-fifths of the estimated profits, could not be acquired. In these circumstances, this action was brought for rescission on the ground of material misrepresentations in the prospectus. Defts. denied these, & claimed for the balance due. They submitted that, the contract having been made with agents for an undisclosed principal, he could not recover:—Held: pltf. could not establish his case on the basis of principal & agent, as in such a case as this an undisclosed principal could not be substituted for the persons contracting; all the rights of the agents under the contract with the co. did not pass to pltf. by virtue of the agents' renunciation & nomination of pltf., & though there was a contract between pltf. & the co. it was not a contract based on the prospectus.—COLLINS v. ASSOCIATED GREYHOUNDS RACECOURSES, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 1; 99 L. 2139b. Account stated & signed by agent.]—In Mar. 1918, a tank steamer was damaged by fire & her repairs were entrusted to a firm of ship repairers at A. The steamer was insured. The owners sent out an agent from L. to expedite the repairs & authorised him to sign the repair account with the Lloyds' surveyor as "approved subject to adjustment & conditions of insurances." In Jan. 1919, the repairers delivered to the owners an account of the repairs signed by the owners' agent & by Lloyds' surveyor in the above form after a detailed examination of the account. The owners paid part of the amount due on this account but declined to pay the balance on the ground that the charges were excessive. The repairers sued the owners for the balance of amount due for work & labour done by pltfs. & materials supplied at the request of defts., &, in the alternative, claimed the balance as being the amount found due from defts. to pltfs. on accounts stated between them & contained in an account signed by defts. by their agent, less the sums since paid by defts. in respect thereof. Defts. denied that the agent was authorised to agree the amounts due from defts. to pltfs., or that he in fact purported to agree such amount, or that the account constituted an account stated:—Held: the signature of defts.' agent was an agreement by him, with their authority, that the amount charged for the repairs was correct, &, there being no ground for re-opening the account, pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—CAMILLO TANK S.S. 2205a. —— Acceptance of payment from principal —After receiving order against agent.]—Resp. was employed by the debtor, who was acting for a co., but who was himself personally liable on the contract. While the contract was running, a receiving order was made against the debtor, but he was not adjudicated bkpt., the receiving order being discharged & an order being made approving a composition of 20s. in the pound. After the breach of contract by the debtor resp. took the salary offered to him by the co., & a proof put in by resp. for damages for the breach was rejected by the trustee of the composition on the ground that resp. had elected to look to the co. for the fulfilment of the contract:—Held: resp. had not, by his conduct, finally elected in law to look to the co. for the fulfilment of the contract, & the proof ought to be allowed.—Ex p. PITT (1923), 40 T. The property insured having been destroyed by fire, resp. received from the adjuster a memorandum showing him entitled to $2,864.45 as against the F. Co., & to $1,841.45 & $2,861.60, as against applt. co., under two policies. Later on, the F. Co., sent to D. their cheque payable to resp., & D. appropriated its proceeds by forging the signature of resp. The latter, pressing D. for a settlement, accepted as an accommodation D.'s personal cheque for the amount of his claim against the F. Co. On the afternoon of the same day, D. informed resp. that the cheque of the F. Co. had arrived. At that time, D. had also received from applt. co. two drafts, payable to the order of resp. D. obtained resp.'s indorsement on the larger one of the drafts on the representation that it was the cheque of the F. Co., which he would use to reimburse himself for his personal cheque, & also secured resp.'s signature on the other draft on the representation that it was a receipt, the execution of which was a formality required by the F. Co. D. indorsed both drafts & deposited them to his own credit, & they were later paid & charged to applt. co.'s account by the bank. Resp. having sued applt. co. :—Held : in the fraud practised upon resp., D. was acting within the scope of his agency so as to make his fraud that of his principals, applt. co. ; & the indorsements on the drafts of applt. co. were not binding on resp. in the circumstances in which they were given.—NATIONAL UNION FIRE INSURANCE CO. Reply was made upon the draft under the signature of one D., the managing director & solr. to the vendor co.: "There are no disputes & rents are paid promptly with very few immaterial exceptions." The reply had in fact been made by R., managing conveyancing clerk to D. in his professional capacity, on information obtained from A., property manager to the vendors. The representation as to the punctuality of rents was not incorporated in the agreement which was duly completed. In eleven cases the rents were not paid promptly. In an action by the purchasers for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation or alternatively for breach of warranty the learned judge found that there was no fraud, but he found that there had been a breach of warranty. On appeal: —Held: (1) in the absence of evidence that the parties entered into, or intended to enter into a collateral contract, there was no warranty of which there could be a breach; (2) the statement to R. by A. of that which was untrue to his knowledge, & the innocent use by R. of such untrue information to induce the purchasers to act to their detriment, amounted to fraudulent misrepresentation on the part of the vendor co.—LONDON COUNTY FREEHOLD & LEASEHOLD PROPERTIES, LTD. v. BERKELEY PROPERTY & INVESTMENT CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 2273a. Liability for fraudulent preference by agent.]—If a principal leaves the control of his business in the hands of an agent so that the agent is employed to determine which of the creditors of the principal shall be paid, when they shall be paid, & why they shall be paid, a payment made by such an agent with an intention to prefer a creditor of his principal is, in the event of the bkpcy. of the principal, a fraudulent preference by the principal within 1914 Act, s. 44. It makes no difference that the agent had not authority to sign the cheques he drew & presented to his principal, nor that the principal when signing them had no intention to prefer any creditor, but honestly believed the payments so made to be proper & in the ordinary course of business.

A firm of builders, having contracted to erect houses at S., employed T. as their salaried agent to control & manage the purchase of & payment for building materials, & generally to supervise & advise the firm on financial matters in relation to the contract. The partners had no knowledge as to the terms upon which the materials supplied had in fact been purchased, nor were they aware of any of the circumstances relating to any payments they in fact made. They signed cheques drawn by the agent as & when he prepared & presented them, but the agent had no right to make any payment except by cheques signed by his principals. The partners having become bkpts., it appeared in the bkpcy. proceedings that less than three months before the date of the receiving order, T., intending to prefer S. & Co., creditors of his principals & then well aware of his principals' insolvency, presented to F., the managing partner, two cheques which T. had drawn & which F. signed without inquiry in the honest belief that T. intended thereby to make proper payments but which were in fact intended & devoted by T., one to the extent of £100 in payment of a debt due by his principals under a contract other than the S. contract, & the other to the extent of £647 in payment of goods delivered by S. & Co. on credit terms not then expired:—Held: the partners as principals were bound by the acts of their agent T. when he, acting within the scope of his employment & as their agent, made the payments in question, & the act of the agent in making the payments with knowledge of the principals' insolvency & with a view of giving a preference must be treated as the act of the principals.—Re DRABBLE BROS., [1930] 2 Ch. 211; 99 L. 2299 i. Funds received for investment—By local manager of bank—Improvident investment.]—Two persons who formed the local advisory board of deft. co. purchased on defts.' behalf for $7,000 the balance unpaid under an agreement for sale of subdivided property, which amounted to about $7,500 taking the assignment in their own name " as trustees." One of these persons, the local manager of deft. co., had an individual private client, pltf., for whom he had invested money. Having $5,000 of pltf.'s money on hand he invested it by buying a part interest in the assignment of agreement for sale, & a declaration of trust was made by the trustees in pltf.'s favour to the extent of $5,000 & interest. The investment turned out badly & pltf. sued deft. co. for recovery of his money :—Held : pltf. was entitled to recover.—MCCRINDLE v. LONDON SCOTTISH CANADIAN INVESTMENT SYNDICATE, [1922] 3 W. W. Deft.'s brother had general permission to ride the motor bicycle for himself or for deft., but he was never in deft.'s employment. The jury found that the rider was acting as the agent or servant of deft. in the management of the motor bicycle at the time of the accident :—Held : the jury's findings & verdict must stand.—THOMPSON v. REYNOLDS, GIBSON v. REYNOLDS, [1926] N. 131.—IR.

2317 ii c. —— ——.]—A man was knocked down & killed by a motor car owned by deft. whilst it was being driven by his son. The car was kept in a garage on deft.'s property which adjoined the son's home. Deft. was not licensed to drive & had never been seen driving the car, which on many occasions was driven by the son, who worked with his father. The accident took place whilst the car was proceeding in the direction of the homes of deft. & his son :—Held : the evidence was not sufficient to establish as between deft. & his son the relationship of principal & agent.—GOLDMAN v. BARNFIELD (1927), 27 S. R. N. S. W. 405; 44 N. S. W. W. N. 147.—AUS.

2317 ii d. —— ——.]—Pltf. collided with deft.'s motor car, which was driven by J., a son of deft., & sustained serious injuries. In answers to interrogatories deft. admitted that she was the registered owner of the motor car; that her son C. & her daughter H. were licensed drivers; that she had purchased the car for pleasure; that she paid for all the petrol & oil; that her son J. resided with her; that she paid the rent for a lock-up garage, the key of which was kept by her son C. A witness stated that he saw J. driving his mother's car more than once prior to the day of the accident. Deft. denied that she knew that J. had a key of the garage in his possession on the day of the accident, or that she knew he had access to the key, & stated that she never at any time gave J. permission to drive her car, & that he never drove it to her knowledge :—Held : if the answer of the jury that J. at the time of the accident was driving the car with the implied authority of deft., amounted to a finding of agency, it must be set aside, on the ground that there was no evidence to support it.—GIBSON v. O'KEENEY, [1928] N. 2317 ii e. —— ——.]—A motor car owned by deft. was, at the time of an accident, being driven by a person to whom it had been lent by him :—Held : the mere proof of deft.'s ownership of the car was not of itself sufficient to establish a primâ facie case of liability on his part.—FERGUSON v. WAGNER (1926), 27 S. E. drove the car, & owing to his negligence it collided with another vehicle, & P. sustained injuries from which he died. P.'s widow sued deft. under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), for damages :—Held : as deft. was in the car, & there was no evidence that he had abandoned his right of control, he was liable notwithstanding that by a casual delegation he had entrusted its actual physical management & mechanical control to E.—PRATT v. PATRICK, [1924] 1 K. 2318b. —— Search for escape of gas.]—A landlord of a lock-up shop, occupied by a tenant, had the tenant's authority to visit the premises at night. The landlord occupied the adjoining premises, & a lodger, who had no authority to enter the shop himself, complained to him of a smell of escaping gas coming from the shop. The landlord & the lodger went into the shop together, & the landlord commenced a search for the escape of gas with a naked light, which the lodger continued. Owing to the lodger's negligent conduct, an explosion was caused, resulting in damage to the tenant's goods on the premises :—Held : the landlord was liable for the damage on the ground (inter alia) of agency.—BROOKE v. BOOL, [1928] 2 K. 2317 ii l. —— ——.]—In an action resulting from a motor-car accident in the state of Washington when deft. T.'s car was being driven by the deft. On presentation of the bills of exchange resp. dishonoured his acceptances & applts. then brought this action to recover upon the bills of exchange :—Held : (1) applts. were not trustees or agents of the exporters in any way that would prevent them recovering on the bills of exchange ; (2) the handing over of the shipping documents was good consideration for resp.'s acceptance of the bills ; (3) there was no failure of consideration for the bills which were not affected by the failure of the consideration under the contract for the sale of timber & applts. were entitled to recover.—CHURCHILL & SIM v. GODDARD, [1937] 1 K. sf. Agent accepting goods after revocation.]—Applts., a Durban firm, entered through V. into contracts with farmers in Alexandria for the supply of chicory. In 1917 V. had authority to accept chicory on behalf of applts., but when applts. entered into a contract with resps. for the 1918–1919 crop of chicory, this authority of V. had been withdrawn. Resps. tendered a consignment of chicory, which was accepted at Alexandria after examination by V., & sent to applts. at Durban ; but it was rejected by applts. as being unsound in terms of the contract. Prior to the sending off of this consignment, applts. had notified all the farmers by circular that they would reject any chicory not "tip-top," & charge rallage & storage to the senders :—Held : the circulars should have put resps. on inquiry as to V.'s authority.—ELLIS BROWN v. VAN ROOYEN, [1920] E. sh. Lapse of time putting third party on inquiry.]—Applt., a contractor, had obtained a contract to work the O. quarry for a municipality, one of the terms being that he should not transfer any of the work to other persons without the consent of the engineer of the municipality. During the period June to Sept. 1926, resp., in response to orders given over the telephone from the quarry, supplied applt. at the quarry with coal to the value of £35, which amount was duly paid by applt. Thereafter no further coal was ordered until Jan. 1928, when certain further orders were received by resp. over the telephone for coal to be delivered at the quarry. The coal was delivered & the delivery notes were signed on behalf of the O. quarry. At this time applt. was no longer at the quarry, but had sublet the contract to S. & G. Applt. had not given notice in any form of this fact. After delivery of portion of the coal, resp. inquired from the municipal engineer whether the contract had been sublet, & upon receiving an answer in the negative supplied further coal to the quarry, making no attempt to communicate with applt. It was not disputed that orders had been given for the coal by S. & G., & that as between themselves & applt. they had no authority to bind the latter's credit :—Held : assuming S. & G. professed to act on applt.'s behalf, applt. could not have reasonably foreseen that a tradesman from whom he had ordered goods some eighteen months before over the telephone would act upon further telephone orders without communicating with him, & he was therefore not estopped from denying the authority of S. & G. to find his credit.—MONZOLI v. SMITH, [1929] A. In the letter he wrote : "All orders are booked on the understanding that my principals are given the option of shipping by steamer or sailing vessel." Defts. gave pltf. an order. Pltf. wrote to defts. saying : "I have cabled the order over to-day & I hope soon to be able to give upon cable acceptance." Subsequently he wrote : "I am glad in being able to inform you that the above-mentioned order has been booked by my principals & will send you official confirmation in due course." 2546a. —— —— Unnamed principal.]—Appelts., pltfs. in the action, were English timber brokers. In Oct. 1929, they, as brokers acting on behalf of a foreign seller, sold to resp., an English buyer, a quantity of timber. The contract of sale was signed by applts. as brokers & was expressed to be made "on account of our principals," but the name of the seller was not disclosed. Delivery was to be made by instalments, & the first instalment was accepted & paid for by resp. without question. The second instalment was then delivered, but before paying for it resp. discovered that the seller was a merchant at D. with whom he had previously been in litigation & against whom he had a judgment which was still unsatisfied. Resp. thereupon refused to pay for the second instalment but offered to set off the price against so much of his unsatisfied judgment. Applts. had meanwhile paid the foreign seller themselves & had obtained the documents from him, and they brought this action in their own name to recover the price from resp. :— Held : dismissing the appeal (1) as applts. had only signed the contract in their capacity as brokers they had not themselves either rights or liabilities under it; & (2) on the evidence there was no custom in the trade under which the ct. could imply an independent contract by the buyer to become liable to pay the brokers instead of their principals.—FLATAU, DICK & Co. v. KEEPING (1931), 36 Com. 2549a. —— —— Agents also described as charterers.]—A charterparty was expressed to be made "between T. H. S. & Co., agents for the owners" of a steamer, "& J. McK. & Co., charterers," & was signed "For & on behalf of J. McK. & Co. (as agents), J. A. McK." The steamer was to load a cargo of coal on the Tyne & proceed to a foreign port, & provision was made for the payment by the charterers of demurrage in the event of the steamer being detained beyond the stipulated time either at the port of loading or at the port of discharge. The charterparty contained numerous other provisions imposing obligations on the charterers. The owners were aware at the time when the charterparty was signed that J. McK. & Co. were acting for other persons. In an action by the owners against J. A paper was produced & signed by pltfs. containing particulars of the proposed sale & purporting to be made between pltfs., as sellers, & N. & L., or their agents, as buyers. Pltfs. delivered their apples to deft., & received payment on account in cheques of deft. co. 2753a. —— Sale of goods—Principal not entitled to sell.]—Where an agent purports to make a contract for a principal to buy goods, whether ascertained or not, or to sell unascertained goods, disclosing the fact that he is acting as agent, but not disclosing the name of his principal, he is personally liable to the purchaser if it afterwards appear that the principal had no right to sell, it being presumed that the purchaser would be unwilling to contract solely with an unknown man. But this presumption does not exist where a specific chattel is so sold, it being impossible to suppose that a purchaser would impose or an agent accept such a liability.—BENTON v. CAMPBELL, PARKER & CO., [1925] 2 K. 2755a. Authority to compromise action.]—T., who owned a paper, formed a co. with a capital of £500 in £1 shares, & transferred his paper to the co. in consideration of the allotment to him of the 500 shares. T. gave Miss P., who was the editor of the paper, 475 shares, retaining 25 shares himself. T. & Miss P. were the directors of, & the only shareholders in, the co. Defts. published in one of their papers two articles which T. considered to be a libel upon himself & the co. to which he had transferred his paper. T. & the co. commenced actions for libel against defts. There was a meeting between T. & H., a representative of defts., with the object of settling the litigation, & eventually terms of settlement were arranged on Oct. 10, 1932, & initialled by T. & H. The terms, which were headed with the names of two actions, provided : " I accept the sum of 1,000 guineas on account of costs & expenses incurred in full discharge & settlement of my claims against " defts. " & the claims of the " co. " & the officers of that co., arising out of the articles published in the Daily Mail . . . & I will forthwith instruct my solrs. to serve notice of discontinuance, or to take such other steps or to agree to such other steps being taken to end the proceedings now pending." Provision was also made for a letter in the terms of an agreed draft to be written to T. by H. Pltf. co. & Miss P. did not agree to the proposed settlement, although defts. were ready & willing to carry out the settlement, & the actions proceeded to trial. Defts. counterclaimed against T. for breach of warranty of authority. The jury returned a verdict for both T. & pltf. co., & judgment was entered for each of pltfs. with costs. The Ct. of Appeal, however, held that the alleged libel was not a libel on pltf. co., & set aside the judgment in favour of pltf. co. The judge at the trial held that T. represented & warranted that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co., whereas in fact he had no such authority, & defts. were entitled to an inquiry as to the damages they had thereby sustained. Defts. appealed (inter alia) by leave of the trial judge, on the question of costs in both actions. Pltf. T. appealed against the judgment against him for damages for breach of warranty of authority on the ground that he had never represented that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co., & because the transaction relied on in the counterclaim was only an executory accord giving rise to no rights :—Held : inasmuch as T. warranted that he had the authority that he professed to have, whereas in fact he had not that authority, he had

Pltf. then sued the present deft. for damages for breach of warranty of authority. 2814a. Agent receiving proceeds of sale of goods for credit of foreign Government.]—In 1917 pltfs., under licence from the Russian Imperial Govt. exported timber to this country, &, in accordance with the conditions of the licence, paid the purchases money received by them for the timber to deft. bankers for the credit of the Russian Govt. They then became entitled to receive from the Govt. in Russia an equivalent amount in roubles at a fixed rate of exchange. In Mar. 1917, the Imperial Govt. was overthrown by a revolution, & was succeeded by a Provisional Govt., which in its turn, was, on Nov. 7, 1917, displaced by the Bolshevists, who, on Dec. 13, forcibly dissolved the Constituent Assembly & established a Soviet Republic. Pltfs. having received no roubles in Russia, brought actions against the bankers to recover two sums of money, one of which was paid to them by pltfs. in the second action before Nov. 7, & the other by pltfs. in the first action on Nov. 9, at which date they did not know of the Bolshevist revolution. Pltfs. in both actions alleged that the bankers & the Russian Govt. were merely trustees for them, & the money having been paid under a contract, the consideration for which had entirely failed, they were entitled to recover. Pltfs. in the first action further contended that they had paid the money under a mistake of fact, & on that ground also they were entitled to recover it : —Held : (1) this money had been paid to the bank as agents for the Russian Govt., & the ct. would not order payment of it in the absence of that Govt. or its representatives ; (2) the bank were entitled to keep the money in their hands, but must undertake not to part with it without notice to pltfs. & an order of the ct.—STEAM SAW MILLS CO. v. BARING BROTHERS & CO., ARCHANGEL SAW MILLS CO. v. BARING BROTHERS & CO., [1922] 1 Ch. 244; 91 L. sr. Breach of trust.]—Under an agreement between pltf. finance co. & deft. co. which was a retail dealer in motor cars, the former co. financed for the latter co. certain shipments of cars consigned by the manufacturers, under bills of lading with draft attached, to the deft. co. By the terms of said agreement deft. co. covenanted not to sell, mtge., etc., the cars without first having paid in cash the unpaid balance of the purchase-price, & to hold the cars in trust for pltf. until their price had been paid in full, & by the latter clause deft. co. also expressly admitted that until such amount was paid it had no right or title in the cars. The cars were never in the possession of pltf., nor did pltf. have any dealings with the manufacturers with respect to them. The agreement was signed for deft. co. by deft., M., its president; & through him deft. co. sold the cars without having made the payments called for by the agreement. Pltf. sued both defts. for damages for conversion. The defence of the co. was struck out & the action proceeded against M.:—Held: by the agreement deft. co. became at least a trustee for pltf., & that the sale of the cars in violation of the agreement was a breach of the trust, for which deft. M., as well as deft. co., was liable in damages.—DEALERS FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. MASTERSON MOTORS, LTD. & MASTERSON, [1931] 1 W. W. R. 214; 4 D. L. R. 730; revsg., [1931] 1 W. W. R. 194; 25 S. L. The jury found that the representations made were untrue, that they had been made by deft. recklessly & without regard to their truth or falsehood, & that they had induced pltf. to purchase the business:—Held: the jury was justified in treating deft.'s statements as definite representations & in concluding that they were made to induce & did induce, pltf. to buy the business.—EASTERBROOK v. HOPKINS, [1918] N. 3040a. —— ——.]—By an underwriting contract dated Dec. 3, 1919, a syndicate agreed with a co. in consideration of a commission to subscribe for 150,000 of 350,000 shares to be offered to the public by a prospectus then about to be issued, & all allotments to the public were to be applied in relief of the syndicate's obligation to take up the 150,000 shares. By a sub-underwriting letter applt. agreed with the syndicate to subscribe 10,000 of the 150,000 shares underwritten by them & stated : "We now hand you application for the shares hereby underwritten by us together with cheque for £1,256, being deposit of 2*s.* 6*d.* per share." The letter also provided that applt. was only to be allotted & pay for so many of the 10,000 shares as should be his due proportion of the shares not taken up by the public, & that he was to receive a commission on the shares sub-underwritten by him. The letter also contained this clause : "This contract & our said application shall, notwithstanding any withdrawal on our part &/or any repudiation of our responsibility hereunder, or under the said application form, be sufficient to authorise & empower the directors to allot to us the above-mentioned shares & enter our name in the register of members in respect thereof." Applt. did not in fact sign or hand to the syndicate any written application to the co. for the 10,000 shares as contemplated by the sub-underwriting letter, but he handed to the syndicate the letter together with his cheque for £1,250 in their favour. On the issue of the prospectus only 55,000 shares were applied for by the public. On Dec. 12 the syndicate verbally applied in their own name & in the names of several sub-underwriters including applt. for an allotment of the total amount of the shares

29b. —— —— ——.]—In Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 16 (1), which specifies the various kinds of question, difference, or claim to be determined by arbn. under the Act, the words "arising out of the termination of the tenancy of the holding" apply to a question, difference, or claim of any of the kinds previously mentioned in the sub-sect., &, consequently, no question, difference, or claim of any of these kinds can arise for determination by arbn. under the Act until after the termination of the tenancy.

The landlord of an agricultural holding gave to the tenant a notice to quit on a certain day. The landlord alleged that before that day the notice to quit was withdrawn by mutual consent. The tenant denied that he ever consented to a withdrawal of the notice to quit, & continued to occupy the holding after that day. Subsequently, on the application of the tenant the Minister of Agriculture & Fisheries appointed an arbitrator to determine in accordance with Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, the following claims, questions, or differences between the parties—namely, (a) whether the tenancy had been determined by the notice to quit; (b) whether the tenant was entitled to compensation for disturbance, &, if so, the amount thereof; & (c) the amount of the compensation to the tenant for improvements & certain other matters:—Held: questions such as these were not questions which under sect. 16 (1) of the Act should be determined by arbn. in accordance with the Act, unless were questions "arising out of the termination of the tenancy"; that inasmuch as it did not appear that the tenancy had been terminated by the notice to quit or otherwise, these questions could not be said to arise out of the termination of the tenancy, & consequently that the arbitrator should be prohibited from proceeding with the arbn.—R. v. POWELL, Ex p. CAMDEN (MARQUIS), [1925] 1 K. one for part of farm.]—On May 20, 1912, T. let a farm to C. from year to year from Oct. 11, 1911, at an annual rent of £150. On Dec. 23, 1914, T. conveyed about half the farm to pltfs., subject to & with the benefit of the tenancy agreement. T. died on Jan. 4, 1919, & C. continued to pay the whole rent to her exors., as he had since the conveyance paid it to T. After Oct. 11, 1922, the rent fell into arrear. By a notice to quit dated Oct. 10, 1923, the agents of T.'s exors. & the agent of pltfs. jointly gave C. notice to quit the whole holding on Oct. 11, 1924. By an agreement dated Oct. 1, 1924, T.'s exors. agreed to sell their part of the farm to C., & it was conveyed to him on Apr. 17, 1925. C. refused to give up possession to pltfs. of their part of the holding, contending that under sect. 26 of the above Act the contract by T.'s exors. to sell to him rendered the notice to quit null & void. Pltfs. brought an action for a declaration that the notice to quit was effective, & to recover possession of their land:—Held: as the contract to sell a part was not made by the persons who gave notice to quit the entire holding, but only by some of them, sect. 26 of the above Act did not apply; the tenancy had been duly determined as regards pltfs.' land, & pltfs. were entitled to the declaration which they asked & to an order for possession of their land.—ROCHESTER & CHATHAM JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. CLINCH, [1925] Ch. 753; 95 L. J. Ch. 49; 134 L. T. 139.

30f. —— To what holdings applicable—Holding let for horse breeding.]—A holding let for the breeding of pedigree horses is not necessarily an agricultural holding within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9).

A lessor sold to pltf. the freehold of certain property subject to a lease to deft. The lease described the property as the P. stud farm; it contained covenants to repair, varnish, & distemper paddock boxes, stables, & coach-house, to graze down turf by stocking & moving, & not to use the premises otherwise than as a stud farm: & the schedule contained a description of the stud farm. The tenancy was due to expire by effluxion of time shortly after the sale to pltf., but deft. refused to give vacant possession, alleging that the lease created an "agricultural holding" within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), & that the holding had not been terminated by twelve months' notice, as required by sect. 23 of that Act. Upon a summons by pltf. for a declaration that the lease did not create a holding within the meaning of that Act, & that no notice was required for the termination of deft.'s tenancy:—Held: the main purpose of the letting was the breeding of race-horses, &, although there were in most of the fields plots of grass or portions of pasture land, the holding was not "wholly pastoral," & therefore Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 23, did not apply.—Re JOEL'S LEASE, BERWICK v. BAIRD, [1930] 2 Ch. 359; 99 L. 30g. —— Sale of holding—Agreement that notice to quit shall be valid—Form.]—The agreement of a tenant from year to year of a holding, by writing, that a notice to quit shall be valid, within sect. 26 (1) of 1923 Act need not be in the express words of the sub-sect. Where the landlords of such a holding gave the tenant notice to quit stating that they contemplated selling the property, a reply by the tenant acknowledging the receipt of the notice to quit & continuing: "We are sorry to leave & will give you possession of the farm & buildings" on the dates mentioned in the notice to quit, was held an agreement, by writing, that the notice to quit should be valid within the sub-sect.—RIGBY v. WAUGH'S EXORS. 56a. —— —— Grass land laid down by tenant.]—By a tenancy agreement made in 1894 the trustees of an estate, of which pltf. was the present tenant for life in possession, agreed to let to deft. certain farm lands & house buildings comprising 138 acres more or less, as described in a schedule attached to the agreement, on a yearly tenancy, at the rent of £48. The tenant covenanted to manage & cultivate the land in a husbandlike manner, & that he would not plough or otherwise break up "any grass land" without the consent of the landlord. In the schedule to the agreement the premises were described as consisting of 130 acres 1 r. 31 p. of arable & 8 acres of grass land. In 1898 the tenant laid down 40 acres more to permanent grass. On notice being given to him to determine the tenancy on Sept. 29, 1919, he claimed the right to plough up this 40 acres of permanent grass which had been arable at the commencement of his tenancy. In an action by pltf. to restrain him from so doing in breach of his covenants an interim order was made granting the injunction on the usual undertaking as to damages. Deft. counterclaimed for damages by reason of the interim order:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the agreement, the covenant not to plough up any grass land was not restricted to the 8 acres of grass at the date of the demise but

SUB-SECT. 16.—OTHER MATTERS (Vol. II., p. 28).

Add the following case:—

166a. Tenant to perform "team-work" for landlord.]—An agreement for an agricultural lease contained a stipulation that the tenant should perform each year for the landlord, "at the rate of one day's team-work with two horses & one proper person for every £50 of rent when required, except at hay & corn harvest, without being paid for the same." In ejectment for a forfeiture:—Held: (1) the work thus to be performed meant any work for which teams are generally used, & therefore included drawing coals to B. Palace; (2) the tenant was not bound to supply a car or other vehicle for the purpose of the work.—MARLBOROUGH (DUKE) v. OSBORN (1864), 5 B. & S. 67; 3 New Rep. 568; 33 L. J. Q. B. 148; 10 L. 173a. Right of vendor to reimbursement from purchaser.]—By an agreement for the sale of real estate it was provided that if from any cause whatever other than wilful default on the part of the vendors the purchase was not completed on Jan. 2, 1899, the purchase-money should bear interest at 5 per cent. A dispute arose about the wording of the conveyance, & the purchase was not completed on the day fixed; the purchaser brought an action for specific performance, & the judge held that the vendors had been wrong in the dispute & gave judgment for specific performance with costs. After the commencement of the action one of the farms agreed to be sold fell vacant. The vendors did not let it, but occupied it themselves, paid the valuation of the outgoing tenant, & farmed the land:—Held: under the account of rents & profits directed by the order for specific performance, which was not on the footing of wilful default, the vendors were entitled to be allowed what they had paid for the valuation & the expenses of realising the crops, but not for the losses incurred in farming.—BENNETT v. STONE, [1902] 1 Ch. 226; 71 L. Part V.—Compensation.

226a. —— ——.]—Where the tenant of a farm held on a verbal tenancy becomes bkpt., & the trustee, having entered into possession of the farm, subsequently disclaims the tenancy, he is excluded from all benefit as well as liability thereunder, including the tenant-right or right to compensation under custom of statute for unexhausted improvements by the tenant, & the amount fixed for compensation having been paid by the incoming tenant to the landlord, to whom arrears of rent are due, the landlord is not bound to account for such payment.—Re WADSLEY, BETTINSON'S REPRESENTATIVE v. TRUSTEE (1925), 94 L. 227a. Assignee of farming stock or other agricultural assets—Under Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43).]—The tenant of an agricultural holding by a charge under Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43), dated Apr. 29, 1933, charged in favour of a bank his farming stock & other agricultural assets as defined in sect. 5 (7) of 1928 Act. The charge was duly registered & became a fixed charge on Oct. 14, 1933. The tenant quitted the holding on Oct. 11, 1933, & subsequently became bkpt. The bank made a claim to the whole of the sums due from the landlords to the tenant at the termination of the tenancy free from deductions. The landlords disputed the right of the bank to make the claim, & in any event claimed to deduct from any sums to which the tenant was entitled at his outgoing all sums due from him in respect of arrears of rent & dilapidations. An arbitrator was appointed by both parties under the provisions of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9). At the arbn. the landlords contended that the bank were not the tenants of the holding within the definition of " tenant " in sect. 57 (1) of 1923 Act, & that there could be no arbn. under that Act between the landlords & the bank. The arbitrator stated a special case, & a county ct. judge held that the bank never were tenants of the holding within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), the charge, on which the arbn. was based, did not vest the land or the benefit of the contract of tenancy in the bank, & sect. 16 (1) of 1923 Act only provided for an arbn. between landlord & tenant, & therefore there was no valid submission to arbn. On an appeal by the bank :—Held : the definition of " tenant " in sect. 57 (1) of 1923 Act did not include a mere assign of " farming stock & other agricultural assets " or a person who was the assign of a right to compensation under 1923 Act, & therefore the bank were not entitled to proceed to arbn. with the landlords.—ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. 229a. Incoming tenant agreeing to repay compensation paid by landlord—Action by landlord on agreement—When cause of action arises.]—By an agreement dated Dec. 24, 1915, made under seal, pltfs. let to deft. a small-holding from year to year from Feb. 2, 1916, at a rent of £132 10*s.* a year payable by half-yearly payments on Feb. 2, & Aug. 2, each year. The tenant agreed " to pay on entry any allowance or compensation which may be due from the council to the outgoing tenant in respect of feeding stuffs or manures or any improvements mentioned in A. H. Act, 1908, Sched. 1, Part III." Deft. entered into occupation of the small-holding on Feb. 2, 1916. At that date the amount of the compensation payable to the outgoing tenant had not been fixed, & it was not until Feb. 11, 1918, that the amount of compensation was agreed to. It was then agreed that the council should pay the outgoing tenant £30 17*s.* 6*d.*, & that sum was paid by the council to the outgoing tenant on Mar. 17, 1921. On Jan. 13, 1923, pltf. council brought an action in the county ct. claiming to recover from deft. the sum of £30 17*s.* 6*d.* under the agreement of Dec. 24, 1915. Deft. pleaded that pltfs.' cause of action had arisen on Feb. 2, 1916, the date of his entry on the holding, & that therefore the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations, s. 3, because the action was not brought " within six years next after the cause of such action or suit " :—Held : pltfs.' cause of action against deft. did not arise on Feb. 2, 1916, when

These two arable fields were in 1919 laid down by the tenant as temporary pasture. On a claim by the tenant, who had left the farm in 1930 on a notice to quit by the present landlord who had purchased the farm in 1929, for disturbance under sect. 12 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 12, he included particulars for an improvement of laying down those two arable fields as temporary pasture:—Held: the claim was enforceable as coming within the exact words of Sched. PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—H. (b).

254 i. Award—Particulars not specified in.]—The proprietor of a farm & the outgoing tenant, entered into a submission, whereby they referred the valuation of certain crops, stocks, & implements, agreed to be taken over by the proprietor, to two arbiters, & to an oversman to be appointed by the arbiters to act in the event of their differing in opinion. An award was issued signed by the two arbiters & the oversman, which contained nothing to show in respect of which, if any, of the items under valuation the arbiters had differed in their estimate, thereby rendering necessary a devolution on the oversman:—Held: the valuation belonged to a class of arbn. where a rigid conformity with formal procedure was not exacted; &, accordingly, that the award was not invalid because it did not distinguish between items valued by the arbiters alone & items upon which the decision of the oversman had been rendered necessary.

A. Compensation to Tenant.

See A. H. Act, 1923, s. 9.

B. Compensation to Landlord.

See A. H. Act, 1923, s. 10.

264a. Notice of claim—Time for giving—Agriculture Act, 1920 (c. 76).]—Held : the meaning of sect. 19 of the above Act taken as a whole was that the landlord should have a right of compensation for deterioration under the sect. if he gave a notice before the termination of the tenancy & not otherwise ; but if he had a right under contract to claim for deterioration apart from the sect., nothing in the sect. should interfere with that right.

A tenant held a farm as a yearly tenant under the landlord upon the terms, as the arbitrator found, of an agreement in writing under which the father of the tenant had originally held the farm. On Aug. 20, 1920, the landlord served a notice to quit upon the tenant, which expired as to the land, other than the boozy pasture, on Feb. 2, 1922. The tenant gave up possession of the land except the boozy pasture, the tenancy of which did not expire until May 1, 1922, upon that date. On Mar. 28, 1922, the landlord gave notice of & particulars of a counterclaim against the tenant for waste wrongly committed or permitted by the tenant & for breach of contract or otherwise, whereby he claimed for neglect in the care of hedges & ditches on the land & dirty land :—Held : (1) the landlord's claim was not barred by sect. 19 of the above Act ; (2) the boozy pasture & the rest of the farm were held under one contract of tenancy ; the contract did not finally cease under sect. 10 (7) of the above Act until May 1, 1922, the date of the termination of the boozy tenancy, & the landlord's notice therefore in time.—Re ARDEN & RUT [1923] 2 K. 264b. —— —— Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 16 (2)—Claims independent of Agricultural Holdings Acts.]—As the term of a lease of an agricultural holding was coming to an end the lessee made a claim in respect of tenant right, & the lessor made various counterclaims in respect of dilapidations. An arbitrator appointed under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), to settle all matters & questions between the parties in respect of the holding, stated a case under sect. 16 (4), for the opinion of the county ct. in which he found that particulars of some of the lessor's claims were given within two months of the end of the lease, but that particulars of others of the claims were not given within that time. The claims related in whole or in part to acts & omissions which were in fact breaches of agreements in the lease. The county ct. judge held that the arbitrator could only entertain those claims of which particulars were given within the two months : —Held : the provision in sect. 16 (2) of the Act, barring claims unless particulars are given within the time therein specified, does not apply to claims arising from breaches of the agreement of tenancy & giving ground for actions at law independently of the Agricultural Holdings Acts, & the arbitrator must deal with those claims without attributing importance to the fact that particulars thereof were not given within the time specified in the sub-sect.

With regard to the sufficiency of the particulars, I am of opinion that in the present case, as in most other cases, that is a question of fact which the arbitrator should decide for himself (SCRUTTON, J.).—OLIVE v. PAYNTER, [1932] 2 K. B. 666 ; 101 L. J. K. B. 786 ; 148 L. T. 65, C. A.

265b. —— Liability to pay compensation—"Landlord"—Purchaser entitled to rents—Purchase not completed till after claim.]—Certain landowners let a farm to tenants. In 1917 they gave notice to the tenants to quit at Michaelmas, 1918, with a view to the sale of the farm. In Oct. 1917, they agreed to sell the farm to a purchaser. On July 5, 1918, the tenants gave to the purchaser, who was then entitled to the rents & profits, notice in writing under sect. 1 (1) of the Act of 1914 of their intention to claim compensation in terms of sect. 11 of the Act of 1908. On July 18, 1918, the sale of the farm was completed:—Held: (1) the purchaser was the "landlord" within the Acts; (2) the notice of intention to claim compensation was rightly given to him; (3) he was liable to pay compensation.—BRADSHAW v. BIRD, [1920] 3 K. 265c. —— —— —— Person entitled to rents at end of tenancy.]—(1) Where the tenant of an agricultural holding, who has been disturbed in his tenancy, becomes entitled under sect. 11 of the above Act to compensation for loss in connection with the sale or removal of his household goods, implements, or stock on the condition, among others, of giving to the landlord a reasonable opportunity of making a valuation of such goods, etc., the question whether he has given such a reasonable opportunity is in each case a question of fact depending on the circumstances. The mere lapse of an interval of several months between notice of intention to claim compensation & sale or removal is not of itself sufficient to satisfy the condition.

(2) Where the tenant of an agricultural holding has given notice to his landlord under sect. 11, proviso (b), of his intention to claim compensation for disturbance, & the landlord before the appointment of an arbitrator under that sect. assigns the reversion, the person who is liable to pay such compensation as may be awarded is the person who is entitled to receive the rents at the termination of the tenancy, & the notice of intention to claim so given to the original landlord will enure for the benefit of the tenant as against such last-named person.

(3) Assuming sect. 48 (2) of the above Act to apply to proceedings for compensation for disturbance as well as for improvements, the commencement of the "proceedings" is not the service of notice of intention to claim compensation, but the appointment of the arbitrator.—DALE v. HATFIELD CHASE CORPN., [1922] 2 K. If you choose to give me the same, you are most welcome to continue the tenancy":—Held: having regard to sect. 10 of the above Act, the letter of Dec. 31, 1920, did not constitute an offer in writing to withdraw the notice to quit within the proviso to sect. 10 (1) of that Act.—Re PERRETT & BENNETT-STANFORD, [1922] 2 K. 266f. —— —— Ejectment proceedings following notice to quit.]—The landlord of a farm served on the tenant a notice to quit on Mar. 25, 1923. Owing to the illness of his wife, the tenant did not quit the farmhouse at the expiry of the notice, but he quitted the land, save as under the custom of the country, immediately after the expiry of the notice. Ejectment proceedings were brought by the landlord & judgment was obtained by default of appearance. On being served with the notice to quit, the tenant duly served on the landlord a notice of intention to claim compensation for disturbance under sect. 10 of the above Act:—Held: if the tenant was ejected, the ejectment was in

(c. 76), s. 10, was an amount equal to one year's rent; &, although as the matter had gone to arbn. a "dispute" had not been avoided, the tenant was still entitled to one year's rent & was not limited to the amount of damage actually proved.—M'HARG v. SPEIRS, [1924] S. C. 272.—SCOT.

sn. —— Loss from error in valuation of waygoing grain crop.]—Under the lease of a farm the landlord took over the waygoing crop of grain from the outgoing tenant at flars prices, the quantity of the growing crop being ascertained by arbn. After threshing it was found that the quantity had been underestimated by the arbiters. The outgoing tenant claimed, under the above sect., as compensation for loss in connection with the sale of the farm produce, a sum representing the difference between the price he had received & the price of the actual quantity threshed:—Held: the loss was not "directly attributable to the quitting of the holding," but had arisen from an error of the arbiters.—MCGREGOR v. BOARD OF AGRICULTURE FOR SCOTLAND [1925] S. consequence of the notice to quit, &, therefore, the tenant had quitted the farm in consequence of the notice to quit terminating the tenancy, & the tenant was accordingly entitled to compensation under sect. 10 of the Act.—MILLS v. ROSE (1923), 68 Sol. Jo. 420, C. A.

266g. —— —— Necessity for proof of loss or expense—Entire holding in occupation of sub-tenants.]—The effect of sect. 10 (6) of the above Act is that as a condition precedent to his right to compensation for disturbance a tenant must prove that he has incurred some loss or some expense of the kind indicated in the sub-sect.; that on proof of that he is entitled as a minimum to one year's rent of the holding; but that unless he proves some loss or some expense of the kind indicated he does not bring himself within sub-sect. 6 & is not entitled to compensation. Therefore where a lease of a holding under the Act was duly determined by notice to quit & the holding was entirely in the occupation of sub-tenants whose sub-tenancies terminated without notice on the termination of the lease, & the lessee did not sell or remove any household goods, implements of husbandry, fixtures, farm produce or farm stock on or used in connection with the holding:—Held: he was not entitled to compensation for disturbance under sect. 10.—AGRICULTURE & FISHERIES MINISTER v. DEAN, [1924] 1 K. 266h. —— Notice of claim—Time for giving—"Termination of tenancy"—Tenancy of different parts of holding expiring at different times.]—A landlord let a farm, according to the custom of the country, upon a yearly tenancy on the terms that the tenant should enter into occupation of the main portion of the land on Apr. 6, & of the farmhouse, farm buildings, & the remainder of the land on May 13, & that "on the termination of the tenancy" he should give up possession of the different portions of the farm on the respective dates, there being one rent reserved for the whole farm:—Held: the "termination of the tenancy" for the purposes of sect. 10 (7) of the above Act took place on May 13, notwithstanding that the main portion of the premises had to be surrendered at the earlier date.—Semble: the proviso to sect. 18 (2) of the above Act applies only to a case where the tenant has been allowed by a landlord to remain on, after the cesser of the agreement of tenancy, under a new agreement.—SWINBURNE v. ANDREWS, [1923] 2 K. 266i. —— —— Given under Act subsequently repealed—Necessity for notice under repealing Act.]—A tenant who had on Sept. 29, 1920, received notice to quit his farm on Sept. 29, 1921, gave notice on Nov. 17, 1920, to his landlord of his intention to claim compensation for disturbance under A. H. Act, 1908, s. 11. That sect. was repealed by the Act of 1920, which came into force on Jan. 1, 1921, & by sect. 10 substituted a new right to compensation for disturbance. The tenant gave no notice of his intention to claim compensation under that sect. as required by sub-sect. 7 (b) thereof:—Held: not having given notice under sect. 10 of the Act of 1920, he had no right of claim under that sect., but his right of making a claim under A. H. Act, 1908, s. 11, was preserved by Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 38, notwithstanding the repeal of sect. 11.—HAMILTON-GELL v. WHITE, [1922] 2 K. B. 422; 91 L. J. K. B. 875; 127 L. 266j. Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9)—Right to compensation—Refusal or failure to agree to arbitration.]—(1) A landlord of a holding gave the tenant notice to quit, & in the same document stated that he had no desire to terminate the tenancy if the tenant would agree to his demand that the rent should be fixed by arbn. The tenant did not agree to arbn.:—Held: the tenant did not thereby disentitle himself to compensation, for the refusal or failure to agree to arbn. dealt with by sect. 12 (1) (e) of the above Act is a refusal or failure which has taken place before the date of the notice.

(2) It cannot be laid down as a matter of law, that in no case can the minimum compensation of one year's rent provided by sect. 12 (6) be reduced under the provisions of sect. 12 (8) if the tenant, having held two or more holdings as tenant, remains in possession of one of them. But the provisions of sect. 12 (8) have no application to a case in which the tenant remains in possession of the other holding or holdings, not as tenant, but as owner.—WESTLAKE v. PAGE, [1926] 1 K. 266m. —— Liability to pay compensation—"Landlord"—Agreement for sale—Whether purchaser entitled to rents.]—In July, 1924, the owner of an estate, which included a farm in the occupation of tenants, agreed to sell the farm to a purchaser, who agreed to pay the purchase money in Oct. 1924. The agreement was subject to conditions of sale, by one of which the purchaser agreed to pay the balance of the purchase money on the day named in the contract, & in that respect time was to be of the essence of the contract; & it was further agreed that "all rents & periodical outgoings" should be "apportioned up to the completion," & added to or deducted from the purchase money as the case might require. On Sept. 23, 1924, notice was given to the tenants to quit the farm on Sept. 29, 1925. The purchase was not in fact completed until Oct. 1925:—Held: (1) "completion" in the condition of sale meant actual completion, & not the date named for completion; (2) on Sept. 29, 1925, the vendor was the "person entitled to receive the rents & profits" of the farm within sect. 57, & he, & not the purchaser. was the "landlord" within sect. 12 & th person to pay compensation to the tenants.—RICHARDS v. PRYSE, [1927] 2 K. B. 76; 96 L. J. K. B. 743; 137 L. T. 170, C. A.

266n. —— Notice of claim—By whom given—Joint tenancy.]—W., who had been tenant of a farm for many years, entered into negotiations with his landlord to have his tenancy agreement, upon the termination thereof, transferred to himself & B., & as the result of those negotiations W. became joint tenant of the farm with B. at the request of, & for the protection of, the landlord Upon the termination of W.'s tenancy B paid W. for the tenant right & also provided the whole of the finance necessary for carrying on the farm. On Feb. 21, 1924, W. alone gave notice to quit. On Mar. 21, 1924, the landlord served notice to quit upon both tenants, upon the ground that they were not cultivating the farm according to the rules of good husbandry. Thereupon B. gave notice to the landlord of his intention to claim compensation:—Held: (1) the notice given by B., being the one of the joint tenants who owned the household goods & agricultural implements & had suffered loss by their removal or sale upon the expiration of the joint tenancy, was sufficient to give the arbitrator jurisdiction; (2) it being the object of sect. 12 (7) (b) of the above Act that the landlord should have notice of what compensation was claimed against him, it would, in the case of a joint tenancy, be a great hardship upon the tenant who had a proper & valid claim for compensation which was to be defeated because his joint tenant, who had no such claim, had not joined in the notice.—HOWSON v. BUXTON (1928), 97 L. J. K. B. 749; 139 L. T. 504, C. A.

266o. —— Notice to quit—Reason must be stated—Effect of notice giving alternative reasons.]—A tenant in giving a notice to quit under sect. 12 (3) of above Act, on account of the landlord's refusal or failure to agree to the tenant's demand for arbn. as to the rent of the holding, is, as a condition precedent to his right to compensation for disturbance, bound to state correctly the reason for the notice which in fact exists, but he may put himself right by putting his notice in the alternative by stating that the notice given was either for the reason that the landlord had refused or that he had within a reasonable time failed to agree to the demand made on him by the tenant for arbn.

Where the landlord had within a reasonable time failed to agree to such a demand but had not refused to do so & the notice to quit wrongly stated that it was given by reason of the landlord's refusal to agree:—Held: the tenant could not succeed in his claim for compensation for disturbance.—SELLECK v. HELLENS (1928), 98 L. 266p. —— —— —— Form of notice.]—The landlord of a holding served on the tenant notice to quit in the following form: "In accordance with sect. 12 (1) (a) & (b) of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), we hereby as agents for" the landlord "give you notice to quit," etc. The tenant, in accordance with this notice having quitted the holding, claimed compensation for disturbance, contending that the notice did not sufficiently state that it was given for any of the reasons specified in sect. 12 (1) of the Act, or did not specify for which of those reasons it was given:—Held: the notice to quit sufficiently stated that it was given for the reasons indicated in sect. 12 (1) (a) & (b), & was an effective notice to bar the tenant's claim to compensation if the allegations were sustained.—Re DIGBY & PENNY, [1932] 2 K. 266q. —— —— —— Reasons in accompanying letter.]—A notice to quit under 1923 Act may be validly contained in two documents—one a formal notice to quit & the other an accompanying document which refers to that formal notice & states as the reason for giving it one or more of the causes set out in sect. 12 (1) of the Act.—TURTON v. TURNBULL, [1934] 2 K. 266r. —— —— By purchaser before completion—Estoppel.]—Pltf. was the tenant of two farms on a yearly tenancy. The owner of the property died in 1928, & on July 17, 1930, his personal representatives agreed to sell deft. the farms. The date fixed for completion was Sept. 15, 1930, but the purchase was not completed till Oct. 30, 1930. Meanwhile deft. had on Oct. 9, 1930, sent to pltf. a notice to quit the premises on Oct. 11, 1931, & pltf. duly gave up possession on that date. Deft. disputed pltf.'s claim to compensation under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), on the ground that the notice to quit was invalid, because the purchase was completed only after the notice was given. Pltf. therefore brought proceedings claiming declarations that the notice to quit was valid; that, if not, deft. was estopped from denying its validity; & that he was entitled to compensation under the Act:—Held: (1) on the facts the pltf. was estopped from denying the validity of the notice to quit; (2) the ct. had jurisdiction to determine the matters at issue, notwithstanding the provisions for arbn. contained in sect. 16 of the Act.—FARROW v. ORTTEWELL, [1933] 1 Ch. 480; 102 L. 266s. —— Determination of rent—Notice of application for arbitration—Effect of delay.]—On Jan. 16, 1929, the tenant of an agricultural holding made to the landlord a demand in writing for arbn. under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), as to the rent to be paid for the holding as from Apr. 6, 1930, the next ensuing date at which the tenancy could have been terminated by notice to quit given by the tenant at the date of the demand for arbn. The landlord consented to the matter being referred to arbn., but after a long delay, due to the fault of the landlord & his advisers, he refused to concur in the appointment of an arbitrator, to take part in the arbn. or to recognise the award. At the request of the tenant the Minister of Agriculture appointed an arbitrator who, on Sept. 23, 1931, made an award fixing a reduced rent for the holding as from Apr. 6 1930:—Held: the award was good & enforceable as between the parties.—GRUNDY

SUB-SECT. 3*a*.—COMPENSATION FOR ENFORCEMENT OF PROPER CULTIVATION.

266u. Corn Production Act, 1917 (c. 46), s. 9 (9)—Who is person interested—Tenant.]—(1) A notice to convert certain land into tillage, made under sub-sect. 1 of the above sect. & Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914, reg. 2 M, was served on the owner of land who was in occupation. After the service of the notice the owner agreed to let the land to a tenant who entered into occupation & carried out the requirements of the notice. The notice had not been served on the tenant. The tenant claimed compensation for loss alleged to have been suffered by him by reason of his having carried out the requirements of the notice, & the claim was referred to arbn. under the Act, & the arbitrator stated a case in which he asked the ct. certain questions:—Held: the tenant was a "person who was interested in the land in respect of which the notice was served," within sub-sect. 9 of the above sect., inasmuch as he was interested at the time when the loss was alleged to have occurred; & the tenant came within the words of the sub-sect. "who suffers any loss by reason of the exercise of the powers conferred by this sect." & was entitled to compensation for the loss, if any, though the notice had not been served on him, as he had carried out the requirements of the notice.

(2) Two notices were served, each in respect of a different field in a separate farm occupied by the same tenant:—Held: in the circumstances, the loss, if any, in respect of each field should be assessed separately.

(3) The tenant of certain land in respect of which a notice to plough had been served under the Act sent in a claim for compensation on Sept. 28, 1918, for the year 1918, & in 1919 he sent in a claim for compensation for 1919. The arbn. to assess compensation was held after both claims had been sent in:—Held: the assessment should not be based on the loss, if any, in each year separately; (BANKES, L.J.) the arbitrator should take the experience of the two years, setting off any profit in one year against any loss in the other; (SCRUTTON & ATKIN, L.JJ.) the whole effect of the exercise of the powers conferred by the sect. had to be considered by the arbitrator, including an estimate of the probable loss or profit in the future—Re TODD & NORTH RIDING OF YORKSHIRE AGRICULTURAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, [1921] 1 K. 266y. In respect of what holdings compensation payable—Tenant sub-letting farmhouse.]—By an agreement of tenancy a landlord demised to the tenant a farm of 1,000 acres together with a farmhouse & some cottages. There was a provision that the tenant should use the demised premises for farming purposes. The tenant subsequently, with the permission of the landlord, sub-let the farmhouse to a lady who used it as a house for paying guests. Upon the determination of the lease, the tenant made a claim for compensation under A. H. Act, 1908:—Held: the ct. must have regard to the substance of what had been done; by the lease the holding was an agricultural one, & the fact that the farmhouse had been let to a sub-tenant did not cause it to cease to be a "holding" within the Act.—Re RUSSELL & HARDING (1922), 128 L. In May, 1922, the landlord contracted to sell the holding, subject to the tenancy, to resp., completion to take place on Sept. 29, 1922. The completion in fact took place on Nov. 2. The contract of sale contained a general condition that the rents, profits or possession of the property should be received or retained & the outgoings discharged by the vendor up to the time appointed for completion, & that current rents should be apportioned. By a special condition it was provided that for the purpose of this general condition any rent payable on Sept. 29 was to be deemed "current rent," & was to be payable by the purchaser on completion. 266dd. —— ——.]—On Mar. 19, 1931, the tenant of an agricultural holding was served by his landlord with a notice to quit expiring on Apr. 6, 1932. On Nov. 23, 1931, during the currency of the notice to quit the tenant gave notice to his landlord of his intention to make a claim for compensation for disturbance under sect. 12 of A. H. Act, 1923, "for loss or expense directly attributable to my quitting the holding which I may unavoidably incur upon or in connection with the sale or removal of my household goods, implements of husbandry, fixtures, farm produce or farm stock on or used in connection with the holding, including any expenses reasonably incurred by me in my claim for compensation." On Apr. 6, 1932, the tenant quitted the holding. On May 21, 1932, he gave notice under sect. 16 (2) of the Act, that the amount of his claim for disturbance was "one year's rent, viz.: Two hundred & twenty-five pounds (£225)." The county court judge held that the particulars were sufficient:—Held: no sufficient particulars had been delivered & therefore that the claim was barred, on the grounds: (1) the notice of Nov. 23, 1931, was merely a notice that a claim would be made & not a rendering of particulars, & (2) the notice of May 21, 1932, although it quantified the claim at the minimum sum to which the tenant was entitled under sect. 12 (6) of the Act, did not furnish particulars of some loss or expense to which the tenant had been put.—SPRECKLEY v. LEICESTERSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL, [1934] 1 K. That jurisdiction was not excluded by Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), & when the jurisdiction under that Act with reference to arbn. proceedings under the A. H. Act, 1908, was transferred to the county ct. by that Act, the inherent jurisdiction of the High Ct. in those matters was neither expressly nor by implication transferred to it.—Re JONES & CARTER, [1922] 2 Ch. 599; 91 L. PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3b.

266aa i. Particulars of claim—Sufficiency—Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1923 (c. 10), s. 15 (2).]—By a letter, written on receipt of a notice from the tenant of his intention to terminate his tenancy of a sheep farm, the landlord intimated that he reserved his claim in respect of depletion of the sheep stock; & by a second letter, written within two months after the termination of the tenancy, in which he referred to his former letter, he stated that only 51 per cent. of the sheep stock had been delivered to the incoming tenant, & that the amount of the claim would be intimated when the exact shortage was determined:—Held: (1) in view of the severity of the penalty attached to non-compliance, the requirements of the above sub-sect. were sufficiently complied with if fair notice was given to the opposite party of the nature of the claim against him & of the case he had to meet; (2) the letters gave such notice, although they did not state the legal basis of the claim or its actual amount.—MONT ROSE (DUKE) v. HART, [1925] S. There was no rule either under County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), or under A. H. Act, 1908, dealing with the time within which a notice of motion to set aside an award must be given:—Held: the words "principles of practice" in County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 164, did not refer to specific rules of the High Ct., & the time limit of six weeks under R. S. C., Ord. 64, r. 14, was not a "principle of practice" within that sect. of the Act; therefore the only time limit applicable in the present case was under Stat. Limitations & under the doctrine of laches, & the motion to set aside the award was made in time.—McCreagh v. Frearson (1921), 91 L. J. K. B. 365; 126 L. T. 601, D. C.

266kk. Costs—Agreement as to—Validity.]—The parties to an arbn. under A. H. Act, 1923, agreed beforehand that the successful party should have costs on the High Ct. scale. The agreement was not communicated to the arbitrator, who gave his award in favour of the landlord, & awarded that each party should pay his own costs. In an action by the landlord to enforce the agreement the judge gave judgment for the tenants, on the ground that the Act gave discretion to the arbitrator as to costs:—Held: the agreement was valid & enforceable.—Mansfield v. Robinson, [1928] 2 K. B. 353; 97 L. J. K. B. 466; 139 L. T. 349; 92 J. P. 126; 44 T. L. R. 518, D. C.

267a. —— "Treated as a market garden."]—(1) Held: the word "treated" in sect. 42 (1) of the above Act, in the collocation in which it was there used did not mean simply that the holding should be in use or cultivation as a market garden, but that it should be let by one person as landlord & occupied by the other as tenant as a market garden, & so treated as between them for the purpose of govening their rights in respect of the holding as a market garden.

By an agreement in writing dated Dec. 31, 1919, & made between the landlord of the one part & the tenant therein described as "market gardener" of the other part, it was agreed (clause 1): that the landlord should let & the tenant should take the farm therein described for the term of one year from Sept. 19, 1919, & so on from year to year at the yearly rent of £185 by half-yearly payments on Mar. 25 & Sept. 29 in each year, & that the tenant should pay to the landlord as a further rent at the rate of £6 per cent. per annum on all sums of money expended by the landlord in the supply of any fruit trees during the tenancy. By clause 7 the tenant was to cultivate the land on the best & most approved system of gardening in general practice in the neighbourhood, & was not to cut down, grub up, or destroy any fruit trees growing in or upon the land, or at any time to be planted thereon, under the provisions of the agreement, without the consent in writing of the landlord or his agent first had & obtained. By clause 9 the landlord was during the term to supply the tenant at his own expense with all fruit trees which might at any time be agreed between the landlord & tenant to be necessary, & the tenant was to pay a certain additional rent in respect of the fruit trees so supplied. Clause 11 contained the following proviso: "That nothing herein contained shall be deemed to be an agreement by the landlord that the premises hereby demised or any part thereof shall be let or treated as a market garden or give rise to a claim for compensation for fruit trees or bushes under A. H. Act, 1908, or any statutory modification thereof": —Held: (2) clause 11 of the agreement contained the clearest possible expression of the intention of the parties that the holding was not to be treated as a market garden; there was therefore no agreement in writing within sect. 42 (1) of the Act, by which it was agreed that it should be let or treated as a market garden, & therefore no claim to compensation on that basis arose, because the existence of such an agreement was a condition precedent to such a claim; (3) the agreement was not one which was avoided by sect. 5 of the Act, because the condition precedent to the tenant having the right to claim compensation had not been satisfied.—Re Masters & Duveen, [1923] 2 K. 267d. "Let or treated as a market garden"—Part of premises treated as market garden.]—By lease made in 1904 a private residence at Sunbury, Middlesex, with gardens, pleasure grounds, & meadow lands, being about 27 acres in all, was demised to deft.'s predecessor in title for twenty-eight years at a yearly rent of £126. The lessee covenanted to keep the premises in repair & not to commit waste. He also covenanted not to occupy use or employ the premises for any trade except that of a nurseryman, market gardener, florist or farmer, without the written consent of the lessors. The lessee during the term ploughed up the grass land & cultivated it as a market garden. In 1924 deft., in whom the term was then vested, let the house & garden on a yearly tenancy, but continued to cultivate the rest of the land as a market garden. On the termination of the lease in 1931, the reversioners brought an action for damages for waste & for declarations that neither the demised premises nor any part thereof constituted a "holding" or "market garden" within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9):—Held: the premises, excluding the house & grounds let in 1924, constituted a separate holding under the Act; they were let upon an agreement in writing made after Jan. 1, 1896, which provided that the holding should "be let or treated as a market garden"; it was therefore a "market garden" within sects. 48, 57 of the Act, & the claim failed.—SAUNDERS-JACOB v. YATES, [1933] 2 K. A lease of a farm contained a covenant by the lessee to deliver up at the end of the term all the demised premises & all new & other buildings & erections thereon & all such fixtures as were in anywise affixed or fastened to the freehold of the premises:—Held: the covenant effectually excluded the provisions of sect. 21 of the Act, & the tenant was not entitled to remove certain buildings & fixtures erected & affixed by him during the term.—PREMIER DAIRIES v. GARLICK, [1920] 2 Ch. 17; 89 L. 286 vi. —— Dependent on terms of contract.]—The question whether a contract relating to timber constitutes a sale of chattels or relates to an interest in land depends on the terms of the contract. A contract for the sale of standing timber to be cut & removed by the buyer, who is given " as much time as he desires " to remove it, is one which deals with an interest in land within the meaning of sect. 34 of Land Registry Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, &, therefore, it is one which must be registered thereunder in order to pass such interest.—CARLSON v. DUNCAN, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 343 ; 3 D. L. R. 570 ; 44 B. C. R. 14.—CAN.

The crop became infected with a disease & deft. did not put his sheep on to eat any part of the crop. Pltf. required the use of the 30 acres for cultivating for the 1932 harvest, & alleging that he was prevented from so doing by deft.'s neglect to clear off the turnips, claimed £20 damages for breach of contract in addition to £180 purchase price :—Held : the crops were "goods" within Sale of Goods Act, 1908, & the second contract, being oral, was unenforceable.—SCULLY v. SOUTH, [1931] N. free on rails. . . . Cutting & tieing to be done by Hedley Bros. Delivery of same to be taken when convenient, & only good marketable hay clear of mould to be delivered in a dry condition." H. paid L. at the time of entering into the contracts the estimated value of the stacks of hay. At the time L. entered into these contracts he was still the tenant of the farm & could not in the ordinary course determine his tenancy before May 13, 1934. In Oct. 1932, however, L. asked to be allowed to terminate his tenancy on May 13, 1933, & on Nov. 18, 1932, the landlord's agent agreed that the tenancy should terminate on May 13, 1933. In Jan. 1933, the landlord's agent informed H. that L.'s tenancy agreement would terminate on May 13, 1933, & that the hay would not be allowed to be removed from the farm. On Feb. 13, 1933, the landlord levied a distress upon the farm for arrears of rent. The bailiff found that H. were in process of cutting into the eight stacks of hay & taking the hay away, & notwithstanding the presence of the bailiff they removed all the hay in the eight stacks. On Feb. 14, 1933, H. served upon the landlord a declaration under Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908 (c. 53), s. 1, that the tenant had no right of property or beneficial interest in the goods distrained. The landlord, thereupon, brought an action against H. alleging that their acts amounted to poundbreach & claiming treble damages therefor; in the alternative the landlord claimed £102 damages for the removal of the hay contrary to Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816 (c. 50), s. 11. At the trial it was proved that it was a common practice in the hay market for dealers to buy hay in stacks, sometimes for a lump sum, & sometimes for a price per ton, & that purchases of stacks, even though weight & price necessarily remained to be determined at the time of delivery, were regarded by all persons interested in the market as passing the property in the stacks to the buyers at the time of the bargain:—Held: Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816 (c. 50), s. 11, has not been impliedly repealed by the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9); L. was not freed from his obligation under his tenancy agreement not to dispose of any hay grown on the farm but to consume it by stock on the farm by Act of 1923 (c. 9), s. 30 (1), as there was no evidence that he had made adequate provision to return to the holding the full equivalent manurial value to the holding of crops sold off or removed from the holding, & further the hay had been removed from the farm in the year before L. quitted the holding. He ought, therefore, not to have disposed of the hay otherwise than as provided for in his tenancy agreement. The purchasers of the hay stood in L.'s shoes & had therefore committed a breach of the Act of 1816, & the landlords were therefore entitled to damages for the removal of the hay.—ELDON (LORD) v. HEDLEY BROS., [1935] 2 K. 311b. —— ——.]—At an auction sale of grass & crops held at a farm pltf. purchased the crop of swedes in one of the fields, & deft. purchased the grass on an adjoining field. One of the conditions upon which pltf. purchased the crop of swedes was that he should not remove from the field more than one-half of the crop of swedes, the other half having to be consumed on the field. Deft. put a number of sheep into his field of grass, & the sheep got into pltf.'s field of swedes & did considerable damage to the swedes:—Held: the fact that the right of pltf. to remove the swedes from the field was limited to one-half of the crop did not prevent him from maintaining an action of trespass in respect of the damage done by deft.'s sheep, as pltf. had such an exclusive right of possession in the crop as would entitle him to maintain an action of trespass.—WELLAWAY v. COURTIER, [1918] 1 K. 652a. —— —— ——.]—(1) By a settlement certain hereditaments were settled to the use of certain trustees during the life of A. without impeachment of waste upon the trusts, & with & subject to the powers thereinafter declared, with remainders as therein mentioned, & it was declared that the hereditaments were thereby limited to the trustees upon trust, during the life of A., that if at the time of such limitation taking effect in possession A. should not be or have been bkpt. the trustees should allow him to enter into & remain in the possession or receipt of the rents & profits of the settled estates during his life or until he should become bkpt. By an agreement, dated Dec. 7, 1920, A. agreed to sell all the timber standing in certain portions of the settled estates. On Jan. 18, 1922, a contract was entered into by A. for sale of part of the settled land, subject to the agreement of Dec. 7, 1920, & on Mar. 14, 1922, such land was conveyed to the purchaser, subject to the agreement :—Held : the proceeds of sale of the timber belonged to A.

(2) At the date of the contract for the sale of land & at the date of the conveyance, part of the timber, to the value of about £500, remained uncut :—Held : although as regards the purchaser of the land the timber was divided from the freehold, yet nevertheless it remained part of the inheritance & subject to the limitations of the settlement ; accordingly, it did not vest in A., but being however part of the inheritance & still remaining subject to the limitations of the settlement, on severance it became the property of A., & therefore the £500 belonged to him.—Re LONDESBOROUGH (EARL), SPICER v. LONDESBOROUGH (EARL), [1923] 1 Ch. 500 ; 92 L. 804 i. Contract to take timber by valuation—Valuation by joint valuers—Subsequent valuation by valuers of vendor.]—Deft. agreed to purchase all merchantable timber whether "standing or down" on four lots belonging to pltf. at $7 per M., deft. to do his own logging & take the timber off. After logging for two years, deft. decided to cease work & as some merchantable timber remained the parties agreed that two cruisers, one appointed by each party, should estimate the quantity left & deft. should pay pltf. $7 per M. for what remained. The cruisers reported, but pltf. being dissatisfied with their finding, had two of his own cruisers to make an estimate & they found that more than double the amount of merchantable timber remained. On examination, the joint cruisers admitted they did not cruise two of the lots, as these lots had been logged by deft. & they concluded, without examination, there was no merchantable timber there. Pltf.'s own cruisers reported that there were 80,000 feet of "down" timber on these two lots which were merchantable. Pltf.'s action to recover the value of the remaining timber as found by his own cruisers was dismissed :—Held : the joint cruise was such a partial estimate of the remaining timber that it could not be regarded as a cruise contemplated by the parties, & it was not binding.—REINSETH v. NICOLA PINE MILLS, LTD. & MCDOUGALL, [1928] 1 D. Confiscation by foreign State—Frustration.]—By a contract the vendors agreed to sell & the purchasers to purchase the timber then standing uncut in a forest in the Republic of Latvia, the purchasers to have fifteen years in which to cut & remove it, such time to be extended if the purchasers were prevented by an act of the Govt., or otherwise by force majeure, or by war, from cutting or disposing of the timber. Merchantable timber was to mean & include all trunks & branches of trees not less than six inches in diameter at a height of four feet from the ground. The purchasers took possession of the forest, but shortly afterwards an agrarian law was passed in Latvia under which the forest & all the timber therein became the property of the Latvian State, the agreement became annulled, & all the rights of vendors & purchasers in the forest & the timber became entirely confiscated:—Held: the contract was not an executed contract on the part of the vendors at the date when it was signed, & the property in the timber had not passed, to the purchaser; the performance of the contract was entirely frustrated by the act of the Latvian State, & the parties were released from it.—KURSELL v. TIMBER OPERATORS & CONTRACTORS, [1927] 1 K. covenant—Waiver.]—A timber license over an area in Newfoundland for ninety-nine years was issued in 1915 under the local Crown Lands Act, 1903, as amended in 1911, the licensee agreeing to pay an annual rent & royalties. The license provided that it was subject to the express condition that the licensee should erect a saw mill or pulp factory to be completed by 1920, also to the conditions of the Act, & that if the licensee should make default in performing "any of the conditions herein contained" the license should be null & void. One of the conditions in the Act was that a licensee was to work the licensed area in a bonâ fide manner, & operate the mill or factory erected, in each year; but that condition was not set out in the license. The Act, as amended in 1911, provided for forfeiture only for non-payment of rent or royalties; for any breach of the other conditions the licensee was to be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10,000, & a penalty not exceeding $100 for every day the breach continued. By an amending Act of 1918 a breach of any condition was made a cause of forfeiture. The licensee & his assign did nothing under the license except to pay the rent. Rent paid in 1928 was accepted, but was returned later. In 1930 the Crown sued for a declaration that the license was null & void, or was forfeited, & for penalties & damages:—Held: (1) the license was subsisting, because (a) the provision that upon relevant default it was to be void was to be treated as making it merely voidable at the option of the Crown; (b) the words "conditions herein contained" meant the conditions set out, & did not include the incorporated statutory conditions; (c) the condition set out as to the erection of a mill or factory had been broken once & for all in 1920, & forfeiture on that account had been waived by the acceptance of rent in 1928, & there had not been any later breach of a condition for which there was a right of forfeiture, as the Act of 1918 applied only to licenses issued after it was passed; (2) damages could not be recovered, as there was no contractual obligation by the licensee to perform the conditions, nor daily penalties, as there was no continuing breach; but, by agreement, the case should be remitted for the trial ct. to decide the amount of lump sum penalty to be imposed.—JARDINE v. A.-G. NOTE.—Fertilisers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1906 (c. 27), was repealed by Fertilisers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1926 (c. 45).

971a. Feeding stuffs—Act of 1906, s. 1 (4).]—In Sept. 1922, pltf., a pig-keeper, saw defts.' managing director, who offered to sell him the bakery sweepings as pig food at 2*s.* 6*d.* a bag. Pltf. accepted the offer & purchased the sweepings from defts. & fed five pigs with it successfully from Sept. 1922 to Jan. 1923, when the pigs became ill & four of them died. The sweepings consisted of ingredients used in making bread, together with dust & dirt & other odds & ends & string:—Held: the words "on the sale of any article" in the above sub-sect. were wide enough to cover the sale of these bakery sweepings; the effect of the sub-sect. was to put the risk upon the seller, who, knowing the constituents of the article which he chose to sell as food for cattle, was made responsible if in fact it contained some article deleterious; if the seller desired to protect himself against the stringent provisions of the Act, it was competent to him to do so by a special contract made for that purpose.—PULLING v. LIDBETTER, LTD., [1924] 2 K. 974a. —— —— ——.]—A seller who in fact delivers a false invoice commits an offence under sect. 6 (1) (b) of the above Act, whether the nature of the article is such as to make it obligatory on him under sect. 1 to deliver an invoice or not.—HARVEY & CO. v. HEREFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL, [1920] 2 K. 975a. —— Sending of sample to seller—Act of 1906, s. 3 (3).]—It is a condition precedent to a prosecution of the seller under sect. 6 (1) (a) of the above Act, on a charge of not sending an invoice on the sale of a fertiliser of the soil according to the provisions of sect. 1 (1), that a prescribed portion of the sample thereof taken with a view to the proceedings under sect. 3 (3) shall have been sent to the seller.—VAUGHAN v. GRINDELL, [1921] 3 K. 978a. —— Effect of—"Reasonable excuse."]—(1) As the object of the Act of 1906 in requiring the vendor to give the statutory invoice & imposing on him a penalty in the event of his default is to protect the purchasers of fertilisers, the effect of non-compliance the requirement is not merely to render the vendor liable to the penalty, but also to make the sale illegal & preclude the vendor from suing for the price. (2) The fact that, owing to the nature of the article sold as a fertiliser, an analysis of it would necessitate so expensive a process as to make it impossible to sell it after analysis at a profit, affords no "reasonable excuse" within sect. 6 (1), for omitting to give the invoice required by the Act. Semble: neither will impossibility of analysis afford any excuse, the intention of the statute in that event being to prohibit the sale of the article altogether. (3) The expression "without prejudice to any civil liability" in sect. 6 (1) refers to the civil liability of the vendor, not to that of the purchaser.—ANDERSON, LTD. v. DANIEL, [1924] 1 K. 978b. —— Fertilizers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1926 (c. 45)—Implied warranty of fitness—Sale for purpose of resale.]—Pltfs. bought from defts., both being cattle food merchants, a quantity of linseed cake. Defts. sold in their own name, but they were in fact acting in the transaction as brokers for a bank to whom the goods had been hypothecated as security for certain bills of exchange which had been refused acceptance by the drawees. The sale note stated (inter alia) that the cake was sold "tel quel," & that the analysis, for which defts. said they accepted no responsibility, showed that the cake was "castor free." Pltfs. resold portions of the cake to their customers as food for cattle. It then appeared on further analysis that portions of the cake contained castor seed, a constituent injurious to cattle; & in fact cattle which were fed on some of the cake were injured. Claims were thereupon made upon pltfs. by their purchasers in respect of the damage so caused to their cattle, & pltfs. then claimed damages from defts., including in their claim the amounts they had to pay to the sub-purchasers:—Held: (1) the sale of the cake by defts. to pltfs. was a sale for use as food for cattle, within sect. 2 (2) of above Act, notwithstanding that pltfs. themselves did not intend to use the cake for that purpose but intended to resell it to those who would so use it; (2) the sale, though in fact effected by defts. on behalf of the bank, was not a sale "in exercise of a statutory power to enforce a right or to satisfy a claim or lien," within sect. 24 of above Act, so as to be exempt from the operation of the Act; (3) pltfs. were entitled to damages from defts. for the breach of the statutory warranty, & were entitled to include in those damages the amounts they were liable to pa[illegible] to their sub-purchasers.—DOBELL (G. See Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43); Agricultural Credits Act, 1932 (c. 35).

979a. Restrictions on enforcement of charge—When charge enforced.]—A bank, having advanced money to a farmer on an agricultural charge within Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43), in the year 1930 called in the money & threatened a sale, but did not until after Jan. 1, 1931, appoint an agent for sale or proceed to a sale :—Held : the bank's charge was not enforced until after Jan. 1, 1931, & accordingly the restrictive provisions of Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43), s. 12, which applied only until Jan. 1, 1931, did not govern the case, & the bank was therefore entitled to retain out of the proceeds of sale the whole amount of its debt without regard to those restrictive provisions.—Re JONES (JOHN), Ex p. NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK, [1932] 1 Ch. 548; 147 L. SECT. 13.—AGRICULTURAL MARKETING.

See Agricultural Marketing Acts, 1931 (c. 42); 1933 (c. 31); (No. 2) 1933 (c. 1).

979c. Validity of Scheme—Power to "buy" product—What amounts to purchase.]—Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), provides that schemes may be framed & boards constituted for the marketing & disposal of agricultural produce, &, by sect. 5, a scheme may empower the board "to buy the regulated product, to produce such commodities from that product as may be specified in the scheme, & to sell, grade, pack, store, adapt for sale, insure, advertise & transport the regulated product." A board elected by hop growers framed a scheme by which all hops were to be sold through their agency, &, after paying expenses, etc., the money so received was to be pooled & divided amongst the growers according to the value of the produce taken from each one :—Held : although the 1931 Act authorised the board to "buy" the regulated product, the taking, pooling, sale & division constituted what in fact was a purchase from the producer & a sale on his behalf, & the scheme was therefore not an infringement of the terms of the Act.—R. v. MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & FISHERIES, Ex p. BERRY (1932), 101 L. 979d. Hops—"Owner occupier"—Who is—Not lessee.]—An "owner occupier" of land within proviso (a) to para. 46*c* of Hops Marketing Scheme (Amendment) Order, 1934, is a producer who owns the land in fee simple, & does not include a leaseholder.—AMOS v. HOPS MARKETING BOARD (1935), 154 L. 979e. Potatoes—Validity of charge.]—Pltfs. were the Board constituted under S. R. & O., 1933, No. 1186, to administer the Potato Marketing Scheme. Under the scheme they had power to charge any registered producer who exceeded his "basic potato acreage," if such excess was likely in the opinion of the Board to increase their expenditure. The Board in 1934 passed a resolution that their expenditure was likely to be increased if in that year the potato acreage of any registered producer exceeded his basic potato acreage. The resolution then proceeded thus : "& whereas in the opinion of the Board each registered producer ought to contribute the sum of £5 per acre in respect of each acre of his excess acreage towards defraying such increased expenditure, . . . the Board hereby require every registered producer to pay to the Board on or before Aug. 1, 1934, the sum of £5 per acre in respect of each acre by which his potato acreage for the year 1934 exceeds his basic potato acreage" :—Held : this was not dealing with the registered producers collectively, but with each one separately. SECT. 14.—WHEAT.

See Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24).

979g. Middlings—Whether flour or offals—Effect of Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24).]—The Wheat Commission, as empowered by Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24), demanded quota payments from applts. in respect of fifteen consignments of certain goods produced by the milling of wheat imported by the applts. from Germany & described by them as wheat offals known in the trade as "middlings" to be used as animal or poultry food. The Commission contended that the alleged wheat offals contained a percentage of flour in excess of that permitted by the Act, & were therefore liable to quota payment. Payment of the quota on each consignment was made under protest by applts. who thereafter brought an action against the Commission to recover the money thus paid on the ground that the imported goods were not flour, but wheat offals exempt from liability under the Act. The Commission alleged that: (i) the consignments consisted of flour within the Act; (ii) no action lay against the Commission because provision was made by the Act & the bye-laws made thereunder by the Commission for the matters in dispute to be determined by arbn. to which, in accordance with the bye-law in question, the Arbn. Act, 1889, should not apply; and (iii) the payments in respect of three of the consignments having been made more than six months before the commencement of the action, the claim for recovery thereof was barred by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61):—Held: (1) Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24), contained no express words ousting the jurisdiction of the ct., & resps. therefore exceeded their powers by making a bye-law that every dispute as to whether any substance was flour should be determined by arbn. to which Arbitration Act, 1889, should not apply; (2) applts. having proved that all the consignments consisted of wheat offals & not of flour within the Act, they were not liable to make any quota payments; (3) as resps. were a public authority the quota payments made by applts. in respect of three of the consignments were not recoverable on the ground that applts. did not sue for their recovery within six months of payment as required by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61).—PAUL (R. & W.), LTD. v. WHEAT COMMISSION, [1937] A. 13a. —— ——.]—By an Order in Council made on Nov. 5, 1914, Cyprus was annexed, & by a Proclamation made thereunder on Mar. 3, 1915, revoking an earlier Proclamation, it was provided that " all Ottoman subjects, resident in Cyprus on Nov. 5, 1914, have become British subjects." An amending Order in Council made on Nov. 27, 1917, after reciting that doubts had arisen as to the effect of the Order & the proper interpretation of the Proclamation, ordered that the following persons (inter alios) should be deemed to have become British subjects by virtue thereof : " any Ottoman subject who was ordinarily resident & actually present in Cyprus on Nov. 5, 1914." Resp., an Ottoman subject by birth, carried on business in Cairo from 1893 to 1913. In Dec. 1913, he went to Cyprus, & after three or four months brought his family there. He rented a house in Cyprus monthly, & while there discontinued his business in Cairo. He was present in Cyprus on Nov. 5, 1914, & remained there until Oct. 1915, when he returned to Cairo, his family following in December. He received a passport describing him as a British subject, & was so registered at the British Consulate at Cairo, but after annual renewals registration was refused in 1919. He sued for a declaration that he was entitled to registration :—Held : if there were any difference between " resident " & " ordinarily resident " the latter became the test by virtue of the interpretative Order of 1917 ; but on the facts resp. was both " resident " & " ordinarily resident " in Cyprus on Nov. 5, 1914, whether or not Cyprus was then his domicil ; & whatever may have been his motive for going there, he was a British subject by virtue of the Order in Council.—GOUT v. CIMITIAN, [1922] 1 A. 20a. —— —— —— Legitimation by subsequent marriage—Effect of Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60).]—The meaning of the term " father " as applied in Statutes extending from 1730 to 1926 to the parentage of those who are entitled to the status of natural born subjects of the Crown & to be regarded as of British nationality is limited to a father whose children are legitimate at the date of birth. Legitimatio per subsequens matrimonium cannot be imported into these Statutes under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60).

Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), does not ipso facto by the mere use of the terms father & mother confer upon either parent or child a lawful or legitimate character. A petitioner seeking a declaration pursuant to that Act that he is of British nationality must show that his father was a natural-born subject, & if in the circumstances existing at the date of his birth petitioner according to our law has not had a lawful father, he is not entitled to the benefits of legislation providing for a declaration of his status as a natural-born subject of the Crown.—ABRAHAM (B. & J.) v. A.-G., [1934] P. 17 ; 102 L. Under the Orange Free State Constitution of 1878 Free State burghership was lost by residence abroad for more than two years :—Held : as at the time of the annexation of the Orange Free State & Transvaal in 1902 applt. did not become a British subject either as being a burgher of the Orange Free State or as a resident in the Transvaal, he was by inference still a Bavarian [1919] App. D., 336.—S. 49b. —— —— —— Burden of proof.]—(1) In 1893 pltfs. were admittedly German nationals, & on the bonâ fide assumption that they were still German nationals on Jan. 10, 1920, when the charge under Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi) attached, deft. was in possession of their London property as custodian. In an action to obtain release of their property:—Held: the onus was on pltfs. to show that they had lost their original German nationality before Jan. 10, 1920, & not on deft. to disprove it.

Pltfs. had left their birthplace, Idar, in the district of Birkenfeld, about 1893, & with the exception of short annual visits to their mother, &, in the case of one, six weeks' military training in 1896, they had resided uninterruptedly out of Germany from 1893 to 1917 or 1918, when they were repatriated, after war internment, to Idar, where according to the police register entries, if genuine, they were registered as stateless on their arrival, & also on their departure for Amsterdam in 1920. On Jan. 29, 1923, the Birkenfeld Govt. after inquiry as to the period of pltfs.' absence from Germany, & as to their German visits during that period, granted them certificates to the effect that during that period they had forfeited their German nationality by ten years' "uninterrupted" residence abroad within North German Nationality Law, 1870, s. 21, & were therefore stateless on Jan. 10, 1920. These certificates were based on the view of the Administrative Cts. which, in considering whether German visits break the ten years' period, look to the number, length, purpose & intent of those visits. They were, however directly contrary to the view of the Leipzig Reichsgericht, which holds that the smallest visit, accidental or otherwise, breaks the period:—Held: (2) the certificates, which were admittedly only primâ facie evidence & open to review in any German ct., were not conclusive in an English ct., & the onus was on pltfs. to substantiate them; (3) if the Leipzig ct. view was right, the certificates were invalid; (4) even if the Administrative Ct. view was right, pltfs. had failed to satisfy the English ct. that an Administrative Ct. on being informed of all the circumstances, including fraudulent conduct by pltfs., applications as German nationals in 1915 & 1921, & previous false statements as to their German visits, would necessarily uphold the certificates; (5) having regard to the conflict of opinion in the German cts., pltfs. had failed to discharge the onus of proving that by unquestionable & undoubted German law they had lost their nationality on Jan. 10, 1920.—HAHN v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1925] Ch. 715; 95 L. 49c. —— —— British subject marrying German —& naturalised as German during war.]—By a settlement dated in 1902 a fund of £5,000 was vested in trustees on trust to invest & pay the income of the trust funds to H. during his life or until he should become bkpt. or charge it, "or until some event shall happen . . . whereby the income or any part thereof if belonging absolutely to him would become vested or charged in favour of some other person or persons or corpn.," & in the event of the determination during the life of H., of the above trust in his favour the trustees were given a discretion to apply the income for the benefit of all or any the said H., & his present or any other after-taken wife & his issue & the persons interested for the time being under the ulterior trusts, &, subject thereto, were directed to hold the capital & income of the trust funds upon trust for the benefit of the issue of H. & in default of issue upon trust for H.'s nephews & nieces. H. was born in England of English parents but had resided in Germany since 1906 & had been twice married there to German wives. During the war, on Aug. 8, 1916, he obtained a certificate of naturalisation as a German. In these circumstances a summons was taken out by the trustees to have it determined whether the life interest of H. in the funds was forfeited by the charge imposed on property of German nationals in this country on Jan. 10, 1920, by the Treaty of Peace with Germany, art. 297, or Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, & how the income accrued since Aug. 4, 1914, ought to be disposed of. It was admitted at the hearing on behalf of H. that in a German ct. applying German law he would be recognised as a German citizen. No question arose as to the income before Nov. 4, 1915, which had been paid over to H.'s agent:—Held: (1) the decision whether a person was a German national within the Treaty & Order fell to be determined exclusively by German municipal law, & accordingly H. was a German national; (2) H.'s interest under the settlement was forfeited as on Jan. 10, 1920, & subject to the payment of costs the accumulations of income in the trustees' hands from Nov. 4, 1915, to Jan. 10, 1920, must be paid to the custodian; (3) as the question raised was one that might affect a large section of the British public the A.-G. was a proper party to the proceedings.—Re CHAMBERLAIN'S SETTLEMENT, CHAMBERLAIN v. CHAMBERLAIN, [1921] 2 Ch. 533; 91 L. Pltf., who was born in Ireland, having become a naturalised American citizen, returned to Ireland in 1916 & took part in the rebellion of Easter, 1916, & was interned. who was a British subject naturalised in this country & denationalised in Germany, at the election to be held in March of that year, on the ground of his enemy birth. Upon the invitation of the committee applt., first in a letter & afterwards at an interview, set forth various facts in proof of his loyalty to the country of his adoption, but eventually the committee refused to re-elect him. Applt. impeached this decision on the ground that the committee had acted arbitrarily & capriciously & had been influenced by irrelevant considerations:—Held: the decision of the committee had proceeded solely upon the ground of applt.'s enemy birth, & before deeming him ineligible for re-election on that ground he had been given an opportunity of being heard. 198a. ——.]—In Jan. 1914, pltfs. entered into a contract with defts., who were a co. incorporated under the laws of Belgium & had their registered office at Antwerp, to sell to them manganese ore deliverable in certain quantities during the second half of 1914 & the three following years alongside steamer in Bombay. In Sept. 1914, when the German armies were threatening Antwerp, the managing director of deft. co. removed all the co.'s goods & the money in bank to London & came himself to London, & there, without any formal authority from the co., carried on business in his own name, but for the benefit of the co. After the German occupation of Antwerp the German authorities placed the co. under compulsory administration. During the German occupation, meetings of the directors & shareholders were held at which formal business was transacted. These meetings were held so as to comply with Belgian law & to keep the co. in existence. The co. also collected & paid debts due to & owing by it in order to prevent the German authorities from winding up the co. & investing the uncalled capital in German War Loan, & with the like object it created a debt against its uncalled capital in favour of its bankers for the purpose of paying arrears of dividend on its preference shares. Pltfs. contended that the co. was an enemy, & they claimed a declaration that the contract was dissolved & was no longer binding on them:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to the declaration claimed; though acts which were necessary merely for the purpose of keeping the co. in existence might not amount to "carrying on business" within the Proclamation of Sept. 14, 1915, the collection of debts & discharge of liabilities with the intention of continuing the business amounted to a "carrying on business," & constituted the co. an "enemy" within the Proclamation.—CENTRAL INDIA MINING CO. v. SOCIÉTÉ COLONIALE ANVERSOISE, [1920] 1 K. 198c. Registered in allied country—Government overthrown—Non-recognition of usurping Government.]—Pltfs., an insurance co. with its registered office at Petrograd & a branch office in England, in Apr. 1917, entered into a reinsurance treaty with defts., an English insurance co., whereby pltfs. reinsured part of the risks of defts. At the end of the first year there was a balance in favour of pltfs. In an action to recover the amount of the balance defts. pleaded that as the Bolshevists had in Nov. 1917, usurped supreme power in Russia, & as the British Govt. was carrying on warlike operations against them pltfs. were alien enemies, & that owing to the entire suspension of business in Petrograd by reason of the usurpation the basis of the contract had been destroyed:—Held: as the Bolshevist Govt. had not been recognised by this country as the Russian Govt., & as pltfs. had not adhered to the Bolshevists pltfs. were not alien enemies; & as defts. with knowledge of the facts had continued to treat the contract as alive by crediting pltfs. with premiums & debiting them with losses, the Bolshevist revolution had not so destroyed the basis of the contract as to put an end to it, & pltfs. were entitled to recover. —EASTERN CARRYING INSURANCE CO. v. NATIONAL BENEFIT LIFE & PROPERTY ASSURANCE CO., LTD. 208a. —— —— —— Effect of Trading with Enemy Acts, 1914-1916.]—(1) Under the common law of England the Crown has always had &, subject to the effect of the above Acts, still has the right to seize & forfeit private property, including choses in action & equitable interests therein, found in this Kingdom belonging to subjects of an enemy State. That right has not been abandoned by desuetude. The powers conferred by the above Acts, however, are so inconsistent with the exercise of the common law right of forfeiture that that right must be treated as being thereby, at least temporarily, superseded.

215a. Treaties of Peace & consequent Orders—What property subject to charge under—Right to assessment of damages in collision action.]—Before the outbreak of war, defts., the German owners of the steamship M., recovered judgment against the British ratified the claim & vouchers were filed, but by consent they were treated as having been filed after the ratification. Thereupon pltfs. took out a summons for an order to set aside the filing & service of the claim & vouchers on the ground that under arts. 296 & 297 of the Treaty & Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi & xvii), the parties had no right to litigate the claim in the registry, inasmuch as, being a debt owing to German nationals, it had to be settled through the intervention of clearing houses:—Held: (1) defts.' claim was not a debt but a right, which by the Peace Treaty, art. 297, was subject to the right to be retained & liquidated "in accordance with the law of the allied State . . . concerned," namely, Great Britain; (2) not being a debt, art. 296 did not apply; (3) although defts. would not be able to handle the sum awarded, there was nothing in art. 297 or in Treaty of Peace Order, s. 1 (xvii) to deprive defts. of their right to proceed to a reference, or to prevent pltfs. paying money into ct. with a notice that it was in satisfaction of the claim of German subjects.—THE MARIE GARTZ, [1920] P. 172; 89 L. 215 i. Licensed to trade for limited purposes—Banking transactions.]—The London agency of a German bank, which at the outbreak of war in 1914 became an enemy, held a bill, drawn by a German subject & accepted by a Scotsman, which had been sent from Germany for collection. It had been the practice of the bank that, if bills so sent were dishonoured, no legal proceedings were taken against acceptors in Great Britain, but the bills were retransmitted to the German office so that proceedings might be taken in the German cts. against the German indorsers. Licences covering the whole period of the war were issued to the London agency, empowering it to carry on banking business under supervision, to the extent of completing current transactions, so as to make its realisable assets available to its creditors, "so far as those transactions would in ordinary course have been carried out through" the London establishment. The bill having been dishonoured on presentation, was retained by the London agency, which debited the German office with the amount, & filed a letter, which owing to war conditions could not be sent, to the German office intimating the circumstances. In an action on the bill brought in 1922 by the Public Trustee against the Scottish acceptor:—Held: as an action on the bill was not a transaction that would in ordinary course have been carried out through the London agency, the licences conferred no right to sue.—PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. DAVIDSON, [1925] S. 215g. —— —— —— ——.]—Under the trusts of a marriage settlement of 1908 & in the events that had happened certain infant children, German nationals, were on Jan. 10, 1920, when the Peace Treaty came into operation, entitled contingently on attaining twenty-one or marrying to an annuity of £150 a year. If neither infant attained a vested interest the annuity passed to the husband, also a German national. The annuity was secured by the covenant of the wife's parents with the trustees, all British subjects, & was payable during the lives of the surviving covenantor & the surviving child, but the trustees were not to be liable for any loss occasioned by their neglect to enforce the covenant. The infants' contingent title accrued in possession on the wife's death on July 17, 1918, but the trustees had not enforced the payment of any instalment since then. The custodian having claimed the annuity, the trustees submitted the matter to the ct. The custodian had not obtained a vesting order:—Held: both the arrears & the contingent future instalments payable after Jan. 10, 1920, were property rights or interests within Peace Treaty Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi), &, notwithstanding the infants' personal incapacity, were caught by the charge.—Re NEUBURGER'S SETTLEMENT, FORESHEW v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1923] 1 Ch. 508; 92 L. Testator died on Aug. 22, 1914, during the war. The annuity was therefore accumulated in the hands of his legal personal representative, who made the proper returns to the custodian under Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 3, but no vesting order was made under sect. 4. By Treaty of Peace (Austria) Order, 1920, the annuity & its accumulations were, as from July 16, 1920, charged in favour of the administrator of Austrian Property, to secure (inter alia) payment of debts owing by Austrian to British nationals:—Held: (1) the accumulations up to July 16, 1920, passed to the administrator of Austrian property; (2) the charge created by Treaty of Peace Order was not an involuntary alienation or encumbrance within the meaning of the will, so that the current annuity since July 16, 1920, was not forfeited, but was payable to the administrator of Austrian property.—Re BIEDERMANN, BEST v. WERTHEIM, [1922] 1 Ch. 31; 91 L. Art. 249 of that Treaty provided that " subject to any contrary stipulation " in the Treaty, the British Govt. might retain & liquidate the property in this country of " nationals of the former Austrian Empire " which expression, as the ct. found, included the Austro-Hungarian Bank, & charge it with the payment of claims by British nationals in respect of (inter alia) debts due to them by Austrian nationals. By the same article Austria undertook to compensate her own nationals for the retention of & charge upon their property. Defts. were the custodian of enemy property in this country & the administrator appointed by Order in Council to liquidate the property of Austrian nationals in this country & administer the above-mentioned charge. Pltfs. claimed that art. 206 was a " contrary stipulation " within art. 249, that the property of the bank in this country was consequently not subject to the charge, & that they & not defts. were entitled to administer that property :—Held : there was no inconsistency between the two articles, which dealt with different subject matters, the only effect of art. 249 upon the liquidation under art. 206 being to replace the assets of Austrian nationals in this country by assets of equal value in Austria if the Austrian Govt. carried out its undertaking, & the action must be dismissed.—LUXARDO v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1924] 2 Ch. 147; 93 L. In regard to one of the above cos. no vesting order was ever obtained by the Canadian Custodian, but as to the others vesting orders were obtained subsequent to the action by the American Custodian, namely, in 1919, but none of the " securities " were ever transferred to him nor is it in evidence that such orders were served on the cos. :—Held : (1) the beneficial ownership in or title to the securities herein was in him who held the paper, & that it is the law of the place where the paper was that determined who was the holder. The contention that certificates of securities are but evidence of ownership, is not inconsistent with the idea that an assignment & delivery of the certificates carries the title and property in the securities; (2) under the Canadian Consolidated Orders enemy property was not automatically confiscated, but the owners' enjoyment thereof was suspended until the restoration of peace, &, subject to any legislation to the contrary or anything to the contrary contained in the Treaty of Peace, such enemy was then entitled to his property, or if liquidated, to its proceeds. It was only the transfer of securities by or on behalf of an enemy that was prohibited by the publication of these Orders; (3) under the Peace Order only two classes of enemy property passed to Canada : (a) property in Canada belonging to an enemy on Jan. 10, 1920, & not in the possession or control of the Custodian, & (b) enemy property in the possession & control of the Custodian on that date; (4) there was nothing to be found in the Canadian War Measures prohibiting or avoiding the transfers of the securities in issue as made by the American Custodian; on Jan. 10, 1920, the property, right or interest in the securities mentioned & the title to the same did not belong to an enemy, & was not at that date in the control or possession of the Canadian Custodian; & the property, right or interest in such securities & the title to the same belonged to the Alien Property Custodian of the United States.—SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA v. ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN FOR THE UNITED STATES & TORONTO POWER CO., LTD., & SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA AS CUSTODIAN OF ENEMY PROPERTY v. ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN FOR THE UNITED STATES & MONTREAL, CITY OF, [1930] Ex. two of his sons, naturalised British subjects, with the necessary capital to establish a business in London. The agreement, under which he handed to his sons for that purpose for 20 years certain American securities valued at over nine million marks, further provided (inter alia), that after the father's death, but not in any event until after the expiration of 20 years from the date of the agreement, the two brothers should divide the value of the securities—the fund representing the securities having been in law throughout in this country—equally between themselves & their brother & their four sisters & the descendants of such of them as might previously have died. By his will the father later stipulated that if through political or other crises the two sons were not able to distribute the funds promptly in Apr. 1919—20 years from the date of the agreement—they should be entitled to wait until such time as they were in a position to do so. Acting under that testamentary provision the two sons prolonged the period under the agreement to Dec. 1927, but in Nov. 1927, the present applts., German nationals, who were two of their sisters & six children of a deceased sister, instituted proceedings claiming that they possessed beneficial shares in the securities which constituted them creditors of their two brothers. They further alleged that the Administrator of German Property in this country, who came in as a party claiming that applts.' interests constituted "property, rights, and interests" in this country within Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, had no claim upon the property. The question whether applts. enjoyed rights under the agreement of Apr. 4, 1899, admittedly depended on the construction & effect of the agreement on applying the law of the Saxon Civil Code :—Held : under the German law it was only on proving both an intention on the part of the promisor to be bound to the third parties & the adoption of the contract by the third parties that they could become parties to the contract, & in the present case neither by intention in the agreement itself nor by adoption did the applts. possess rights under the agreement, & whatever claims existed under it could only be enforced against the two brothers who were parties to it by a duly constituted representative in this country of the estate of the father. According to German law applts. had no interest except as members of the community of heirs, & inasmuch as there had been no partition of the estate no member of that community of heirs had any right to any specific asset or share, & the action was misconceived.—HARTMANN v. KONIG (1933), 50 T. 215n. —— —— Policy money—Payable in England.]—Pltf. co. was incorporated by special Act of the Legislature of New York, & had its central office & the bulk of its assets in New York. The co. had a branch in London, & in most of the capitals of Europe, the branch in Paris being its head office for Europe. The general manager of the London branch had no general authority to issue policies in this country. Certain life policies signed by the president & secretary of the co. & countersigned by the general manager for Europe were issued in London to German nationals before the outbreak of the war. The policies were not under seal. The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law. In an action to determine whether the policy moneys payable under the policies in question, which had matured on or before Jan. 10, 1920, the date when the Treaty of Peace with Germany came into force, were "property, rights & interests within His Majesty's Dominions" belonging to German nationals, & as such were subject to the charge created by Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi) :—Held : (1) there was nothing in art. 299 of s. V. of the Peace Treaty, or in par. 11 of the annex thereto, to indicate that the property, rights, & interests of the assured under such contracts were to be excluded from the general charge under par. 4 of the annex to s. IV. ; (2) inasmuch as a corpn. might have a dual residence, & there was evidence that pltfs. were resident both in New York & in London carrying on business in both places & in both places being subject to the jurisdiction of the cts., it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable. Applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable, &, that being so, they were situate within His Majesty's Dominions & became subject to the charge.—NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1924] 2 Ch. 101 ; 93 L. 215p. —— —— Chose in action.]—In Feb. 1912, three parcels of goods were shipped in a British steamship from Baltimore for Hamburg. The ship sailed & was never heard of again. The goods were insured with M., who were German nationals carrying on business in New York. The assured claimed against M., & some time before Nov. 1918, were paid by M. for a total loss ; whereupon the bills of lading were handed over to M. by the assured.

Actions on the contract of carriage against the shipowners were commenced in England for the benefit of M. & other insurers by the owners of the goods & damages were recovered, of which the sum of £4,538, being that portion which corresponded with M.'s share in the insurance, was claimed by deft. to be subject in his hands to the charge created by the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919. On Nov. 18, 1918, after the outbreak of war between the United States & Germany & after proceedings had been commenced in England, pltf., in pursuance of the American Trading with the Enemy Act, 1917, & executive Orders made thereunder, made a demand upon M., the effect of which was to vest in him as Alien Property Custodian all the property, rights, claims & assets of M. within the United States. In an action by pltf. claiming payment by deft. of the said sum of £4,538 so recovered by M. & in the hands of deft. as Administrator of German Property :—Held : (1) on the crucial date, Nov. 18, 1918, M. had by subrogation an equitable interest as against the owners of the goods in the right of action which those owners had for the loss of their goods to the extent that was necessary to recoup to M. the amount paid on the policies of insurance ; (2) that right of action came within the general rule that choses in action must be taken to be situate in the country where they are properly enforceable ; (3) notwithstanding the fact that the bills of lading & other documents relating to the claim against the shipowners were at the material time in the hands of pltf. in the United States as Alien Property Custodian, the situs of the right of action was in England, & therefore the sum recovered for M. therein passed to deft. & not to pltf.—SUTHERLAND v. GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1934] 1 K. 215q. —— Joint decisions of Clearing Offices—Effect.]—In 1913 defts. had entered into contracts with German sellers for the purchase of a quantity of nitrate, delivery of which was to be made to defts.' agent alongside the vessel at Iquique, & payment for which was to be made in London after presentation of bills of lading. Several cargoes were shipped, but war broke out before the vessels arrived at their destination & before the bills of lading, which were made out to order, could be presented. In these circumstances defts. procured delivery to their sub-purchasers by giving an indemnity to the ships, & presumably received payment for the nitrate from their sub-purchasers. After an interval the German sellers duly notified their claim for the price of the nitrate & for interest to the German clearing office, which in turn passed it on to the British clearing office. Defts. were prepared to pay what the Germans claimed as the price of the goods, though they disputed the existence of any debt, either in the strict legal sense or in the sense in which the expression is used in Treaty of Peace, art. 296, & they disputed the claim for interest. As the Treaty only contemplated the admission of debts, & defts. were prepared to pay the amount claimed as the price of the goods, the British clearing office admitted the debt, & the principal money was cleared in 1923. At a later period the claim for interest was again put forward. This claim defts. still disputed, but the two clearing offices arrived at a joint decision that interest was payable upon the principal sum admitted by the British clearing office. Notice of the decision was conveyed to defts. in a letter dated Sept. 13, 1923. The decision took the form of an intimation that the British & German clearing offices had jointly agreed that interest in accordance with par. 22 of the annex to sect. III. of Part X. of the Treaty was payable upon the admitted debt at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum calculated from dates specified, The notice then continued as follows : " In default of a notice of appeal under r. 22 of the Rules of Procedure of the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal, the interest on the said sum of . . . at the rate of 5 per cent. from (the date named) to the date of crediting & advice to the German clearing office will be credited by the British clearing office to the German clearing office." No appeal was brought, &, after the expiry of the time for appealing, pltf., the controller of the British clearing office, sought to enforce this joint decision by action on the ground that a joint decision unappealed from should, on a true construction of the Peace Treaty, be regarded in the same light as if it was a foreign judgment, or the award of an arbitrator, & should, therefore, be enforced by the cts. of this country on the same principle as either a foreign judgment or an award is enforced :—Held : under Treaty of Peace, art. 296, as carried out by Treaty of Peace Act, 1919, & Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, the joint decisions of the clearing offices were not in the nature of judgments or of awards under an arbn., so as themselves to be enforceable by action, & therefore the action failed.—CLEARING OFFICE CONTROLLER v. WEIR & Co. Defts. to the action were the trustees & the three children, all German nationals, of a daughter of the testator who had married a German national in 1877 & had remained a German national until her death in 1927 :—Held : (1) as the result of the Treaty of Peace with Germany, the Treaty of Peace Act, 1919, & the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, the property of German nationals which was in the United Kingdom at the date of the coming into force of the treaty was taken from them, & can be returned to them only by a conveyance or transfer; (2) in the agreement dated Dec. 28, 1929, between the British & German Governments as to the liquidation of German properties, & the agreement concluded with Germany at the Hague Conference, both ratified in May, 1930, there is nothing to show that the German Government was thereby expressly or by necessary implication purporting to act as agent or trustee on behalf of its nationals so as to give its nationals a right of action.—GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR v. KNOOP, [1933] Ch. 439; 102 L. 215x. —— —— Liability of trustees for payment of income to German national.]—Subject to a life interest for B., trustees held part of a trust fund in trust for D. for life with remainder to her children. D., an Englishwoman married to an Englishman, at all material times lived with her family in Germany. B. died in 1917 & thereafter there was no communication between D. & her relatives in England, some of whom were the trustees, until 1927, when the trustees were informed that D. & her family had adopted German nationality during the war. D.'s income from the trust fund had been paid regularly since the end of the war into a bank in England at which D. kept an account, & continued to be so paid until D. died in 1934. The fact of D.'s German nationality was then communicated to the Administrator of German Property, who claimed against the trustees the amount of the income received by D. from 1927, when the trustees first heard of D.'s change of nationality, to Aug. 31, 1929, when all German-owned property which had been under the control of the administrator was released. Other claims had been made, but were abandoned during the hearing. The administrator claimed that the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919 (as amended), s. 1 (17) (ccc) & (e), effected a statutory assignment to the administrator of D.'s life interest, that after 1927 it became the duty of the trustees to pay the income thereafter accruing to the administrator, & that in paying such income to D., the trustees committed a breach of trust & that they were accordingly accountable to the administrator as the rightful beneficiary for the income thus wrongly paid to D. The trustees, in addition to denying that there was a statutory assignment, pleaded that they acted honestly & reasonably within the Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 61, & ought fairly to be excused :—Held : (1) the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, as amended, did not effect a statutory assignment of D.'s life interest; (2) if there were such a statutory assignment, the trustees ought, in the circumstances of the case & notwithstanding that they ought to have known the illegality of paying income to a German national, fairly to be excused for their breach of trust.—HOLLAND v. GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1937] 2 All E. 221a. —— —— Liability of third party to put business in funds to meet bills.]—In June, 1914, defts. by their Paris branch, drew ten bills of exchange, payable in London three months after date, on the Dresdner Bank. The Dresdner Bank accepted the bills at their London branch & received as security Russian promissory notes. Defts. provided no funds to meet the bills when they fell due &, under an arrangement between the Treasury & the Bank of England, the amount payable was discharged by the Bank of England. By 1917 the Dresdner Bank in London had repaid the sum due for principal & interest to the Bank of England. In 1918 the Board of Trade, under the above Act, ordered the business carried on by the Dresdner Bank in London to be wound up, & appointed a controller to wind up the business, with power to collect all moneys owing to the bank & to bring actions in the name of the bank:—Held: (1) the transaction was part of the "business" of the London branch of the Dresdner Bank; defts.' liability to put the Dresdner Bank in funds to meet the bills was an asset of the London branch within the above sect., even if the London branch accepted the bills on the instructions of the head office in Berlin & debited the current account of the head office with the amount paid on the bills, & defts. were liable to repay pltfs. the money paid by them to the Bank of England in respect of the bills with simple interest at 5 per cent. on each instalment from the date of payment; (2) the action by the controller in the name of the Dresdner Bank (London Agency) was not an action in the name of a branch of that bank but an action in name of the Dresdner Bank, & the of the words "London Agency," beir descriptive, did not change pltfs. from the Dresdner Bank into something unknown to the law as a legal person.—DRESDNER BANK v. RUSSO-ASIATIC BANK, [1923] 1 Ch. 209; 92 L. At that date H. had in his possession certain moneys of the business, which he claimed to retain, as against the controller, to satisfy his claim for damages for breach by the co. of the agreement :—Held : the claim was against the co., & not against the business, & H. was not entitled to retain the moneys as against the controller.—Re VULCAAN COAL CO., HARRISON v. HARBOTTLE, [1922] 2 Ch. 60 ; 91 L. 237c. —— —— Part of trust income—Payable to enemy.]—(1) Held: sect. 2 (1) of the above Act related only to moneys payable under contractual obligations arising out of loans, partnership or membership of a co., & not to trust income payable by trustees to an enemy even when the income was derived from dividends on shares.

(2) By his will a testator, who died in 1904, bequeathed his estate upon trusts whereby the residue & the proceeds of sale thereof were to go in equal shares to his children; & he directed his trustees to retain the share of each of his daughters upon trust during the life of the daughter to pay the annual income to her for her separate use without power of anticipation & until she should do or suffer any act or thing whereby the same, if payable to her absolutely or any part thereof, might have become payable or forfeited to or vested in any other person. In the event of a forfeiture under this provision the income was given upon a discretionary trust during the remainder of the life of the daughter, & subject thereto the daughter's share was to be held in trust for her children & issue as therein mentioned, One of the testator's daughters had intermarried with a German in 1908, & had since resided in Germany. Since the coming into force of the above Act, the trustees had accumulated the income of her share, which amounted on Jan. 10, 1920, the date of the ratification of the Treaty of Peace with Germany, to about £4,000 :—Held : the daughter's life interest was not determined on the coming into force of the above Act, but ceased on Jan. 10, 1920, by reason of the Treaty of Peace charge, & the accumulations of income up to that date were subject to the charge.—Re HALLENSTEIN, HALSTED v. BLANK, [1922] 1 Ch. 355 ; 91 L. 237d. —— Liability of custodian for super tax.]—Property belonging to an enemy which is paid to or vested in the custodian under the above Act is, pending its disposition by Order in Council after the termination of the war, removed from the control & beneficial ownership of the enemy. During the interval the beneficial ownership is in statutory suspense or abeyance, the custodian having meanwhile limited powers of dealing with the property.

When war broke out in 1914, M., an enemy within the Act, owned real estate in England & shares & securities in British cos. By orders under sect. 4 of the Act the real estate, shares & securities were vested in the custodian. The Special Comrs. for Income Tax assessed the custodian to super tax as agent or receiver for M. The custodian disputed the legality of the assessment :—Held : (1) M.'s beneficial ownership of the property having ceased on the making of the vesting orders, the profits & gains received by the custodian were received by him in respect of M., but did not in his hands belong to M. ; he did not receive or hold them as agent or receiver or trustee for M. within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 41, &, therefore, he was not liable to be assessed to super tax ; (2) as M. could not, after the war, ask to receive back the property except on the footing that a sum equal to the amount of super tax which, but for the war, he would have been liable to pay was paid, the custodian must, under the discretion given to the ct. by sect. 5 (1) of the Act of 1914, pay that sum to the Comrs. as analogous to payment of a debt under sect. 5 (2).—Re MÜNSTER, [1920] 1 Ch. 268 ; [illegible] J. 389a. —— What amounts to "assignment"—Abandonment by enemy insured to neutral insurer.]—In 1916 a firm in Germany despatched to a firm in Lima, both consignors & consignees being at that date enemies within the meaning of the Trading with the Enemy Acts, a parcel of diamonds by a Dutch steamship sailing from Amsterdam, the diamonds being insured against war and other risks with a Swiss insurance co. The British authorities, acting under the Reprisals Order of Mar. 11, 1915, required the Dutch vessel to put in to Kirkwall, where her cargo was examined, & the diamonds being found they were in due course placed in the custody of the Marshal of the Prize Ct., which, in Feb. 1918, ordered their detention & sale. After that order was made, but before the sale was carried out, the assured gave notice of abandonment of the diamonds & ceded all their rights therein to the insurance co., which accepted the notice & paid the assured as for a total loss. In 1919 the diamonds were sold, & the proceeds were ordered by the Prize Ct. to be handed to the predecessor in title of the Administrator of German property to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles & the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919. The Swiss insurance co. claiming that as a result of the abandonment to them by the assured the diamonds became their property, now sued the Administrator of German Property to recover the proceeds of the sale :—Held : the action was not maintainable, inasmuch as (1) the notice of abandonment & its acceptance constituted an " assignment " within " Act B.," s. 6 (1); (2) the proceeds of sale of the diamonds constituted a " chose in action " within the same sub-sect.; & (3) the Administrator of German Property, as representing the Crown, was entitled to rely on the provisions of that sub-sect. as precluding the insurance co. from recovering.—ALLGEMEINE VERSICHERUNGS-GESELLSCHAFT HELVETIA v. GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1931] 1 K. The diamonds were returned to England by the postal authorities & were seized in the Postal Censor's office in Nov. 1917. They were condemned on the ground that the transaction was a trading with the enemy :—Held : the diamonds were properly condemned, since under Trading with the Enemy (China, Siam, Persia & Morocco) Proclamation, 1915, applts.' agent was for the purpose of " Proc. A," an " enemy " & the transaction was a supplying with goods contrary to cl. 5 (7) of the latter Proclamation.—SALTI ET FILS v. PROCURATOR-GENERAL, [1919] A. C. 968; 88 L. J. P. 209; 121 L. The bill purported to be drawn upon defts. against fifty bales of goods per a German steamer. The bill was accepted by defts. on July 20, 1914, payable at the office of pltfs. in Bombay. The steamer reached Bombay just before the outbreak of war, & in order to evade capture left Bombay & took shelter in a neutral port. The bill was presented for payment on the due date with the shipping documents attached but was dishonoured by non-payment. —— ——.]—Pltf. was a British subject carrying on business as an exporter of Manchester goods to Turkey. At the outbreak of war between Great Britain & Turkey deft. bank, a Turkish subject, was the holder of sight bills for the invoice amount in sterling of goods consigned by pltf. to Beyrout, which had arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, & were subsequently delivered to the customers by deft. bank against payment in piastres. At the conclusion of the war deft. bank claimed the right to pay to pltf. an amount in sterling representing the then value of the piastres which they had received in payment for the goods. Pltf. claimed to be paid the sterling amount of the bills, or, in the alternative, damages for their conversion :—Held : (1) as the bank in Beyrout accepted the payment in lawful money from the Syrian merchant & handed over the goods, it constituted itself, as in a question with the drawer, debtor for the sterling amount on the face of the bill ; (2) it was not every contract that was abrogated by the war ; it was only a contract which was still executory & which for its execution required intercourse between the British subject & the enemy, & as the contract had been partially carried out, the bills had been indorsed, & the bank had been handed them together with the indorsed bills of lading, from that a subsidiary contract arose, namely, that on payment of the bills the shipping documents should be handed over, to execute which no intercourse between a British subject & the enemy was necessary ; & the bank was entitled to do what it did, & there could be no question of conversion, & having constituted themselves debtors in sterling, in sterling they must pay. —Ottoman Bank v. Jebara, [1928] A. 405a. —— —— ——.]—For many years there existed in Germany works for the manufacture of dyestuffs (Farbenfabriken), belonging to a German concern which carried on business in England through agents. In 1878 the agents were a partnership firm consisting of A. & two other persons. In 1895 A. was the sole partner. In that year a limited co. was formed & registered in England, & in 1898 its name was changed to B. Co. Its original capital was £5,000, divided into 500 shares of £10 each of which A. held five shares & the German concern 470. In 1905 the capital was increased to £25,000 by the issue of 2,000 new shares fully paid, & in 1909 it was increased to £100,000, by the issue of 7,500 like shares. At the times material the German concern held 9,912 shares & A. twenty shares. By an agreement dated in 1910 between the German concern & B. Co., the district of the German concern was defined as the whole world outside the United Kingdom with the Channel Islands & the Isle of Man, & the district of B. Co. as the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands & the Isle of Man. The German concern bound itself not to import

None of the goods had at that time been delivered. Thereafter the goods were completed & sold in Great Britain at an enhanced price. Third parties having obtained a decree against the purchasers of the goods arrested money in the hands of the sellers of the goods :—Held : (1) the contract was dissolved by the outbreak of war ; (2) the sum paid to account of the price of the goods belonged to the buyers & was validly arrested in the hands of the sellers.—Davis & Primrose, Ltd. v. Clyde Shipbuilding & Engineering Co., Ltd. goods into B. Co.'s district except for the purposes of B. Co., & B. Co. bound itself not to import into the German concern's district except for the purposes of the German concern. By an agreement, dated in 1912, between the same parties & operative for seven years, the German concern bound itself to sell to B. Co. & to no one else in the United Kingdom for sale in the United Kingdom anilines & chemicals manufactured by the German concern, & B. Co. bound itself to buy from the German concern & from no other manufacturer such dyestuffs. By unwritten agreement B. Co. was bound from its inception to import only from the German concern. From the time of the registration of B. Co. A.'s firm ceased to act as agents for the German concern. B. Co. sold not in the name of the German concern, but in its own name, & as a principal; but it announced to the world on its office windows, & to its customers on notepaper & other documents & by books, catalogues & samples, that it was the sole importer in England of the manufactures of the German concern. It was thus brought home to the customers that they were buying the produce of the German concern as before. The new régime was in effect a continuation of the agency though legally the agency had ceased. The business of B. Co. was conducted by A. & another director, both resident in England. The German concern supplied them with lists of prices to be charged by the German concern to B. Co., B. Co. making a profit by selling to customers at a price higher than the list. If an English customer offered to buy at a price lower than the list, the German concern would reduce its price to B. Co. accordingly. The overwhelming shareholding of the German concern in B. Co. caused it to be vitally interested, as seller & buyer, in the contract between itself & B. Co. & as seller in the contract between B. Co. & its customer. Down to the outbreak of war between England & Germany on Aug. 4, 1914, the control of B. Co., its business, affairs & acts, were in the hands of the German concern. On Apr. 1, 1914, B. Co. entered into a contract with a British firm for a supply to the firm of dyestuffs, identified by letters & numbers as the manufacture of the German concern or of other German manufacturers, of which samples from Germany were in the possession of the British firm. It was provided that any duties imposed by the British Govt. on the goods should be paid by the British firm or the price should be advanced accordingly. It was further provided that deliveries or orders off the contract might be suspended by either party if any contingency should arise beyond the control of the parties, such fire, as accidents, war, strikes, or the like. The contract covered a period unexpired at the outbreak of war. At that date quantities of dyestuffs remained undelivered & were never afterwards delivered. An order was made by the Board of Trade, under Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916 (c. 105), s. 1, for the winding up of the business of B. Co., & a controller appointed. In the winding up the British firm claimed damages for breach of contract in the non-fulfilment of deliveries. The controller resisted the claim on the grounds: (a) that the contract was dissolved at the outbreak of war, because B. Co. was an enemy or of enemy character, because the parties contracted on the footing that the goods should come from Germany, & because continued existence or performance of the contract would involve intercourse with, or tend to assist the enemy; (b) that owing to the suspension clause no right to damages had yet arisen; (c) that the object of the contract had been frustrated, because the period of suspension was indefinite & beyond the contemplation of the parties, because performance of the contract was prevented by Govt. action or embargo, & because the basis of the contract was that the importation of the goods to be supplied should continue to be possible & by reason of war it was rendered impossible. On application to the ct. by the controller for directions whether the claim should be admitted as a debt due from B. Co.:—Held: (1) at the date of the outbreak of war B. Co. assumed enemy character, &, accordingly, the contract became dissolved by the outbreak of war as being a current contract entered into with a co. which eo instanti assumed enemy character; (2) the abrogation of the contract by outbreak of war being founded on public policy, the presence of a suspension clause in the event of war did not assist the claimant, & if "war" in the clause included war between England & Germany the clause was void as against public policy, & the claim must be rejected; (3) assuming that B. Co. had not assumed enemy character at the outbreak of war, the claim must fail on the following grounds: that, the contract being for the supply of goods to be obtained from Germany, further performance on the outbreak of war involved intercourse with the enemy & became illegal accordingly; that, the contracts having been made on the basis that the existing commercial conditions would continue & that the basis having ceased to exist by outbreak of war between England & Germany, the commercial object of the contract had been frustrated, & the contract was dissolved at the outbreak of war; (4) the suspension clause was not intended by the parties to apply to war between England & Germany; (5) the doctrine of frustration applied to contracts for the sale of unascertained goods.—Re BADISCHE CO., LTD., Re BAYER CO., LTD., Re GRIESHEIM ELEKTRON, LTD., Re KALLE & CO., LTD., Re BERLIN ANILINE CO., LTD., Re MEISTER LUCIUS & BRUNING, LTD., [1921] 2 Ch. 331; 91 L. He knew that the recommendation could not be carried out, but intended by it to direct the attention of the Secretary of State to the question of whether he should make an order under Aliens Order, 1920, Art. 11, imposing restrictions on the activities of the prisoners in this country :—Held : the Deputy-Chairman had no jurisdiction to recommend deportation in these circumstances, & his recommendation should be quashed.—R. v. GOLDFARB, R. v. SZCZENSLIVE, [1936] 1 All E. 558a. —— —— —— Aliens Order, 1920.]—(1) The word "keeper" in the above Order of 1920, art. 20 (2), includes the lessee of a house who lets unfurnished rooms in the house in separate lettings to tenants at weekly rentals & employs another person to manage the house for him.

(2) A flat let on a seven years' lease would not constitute "premises" within the above Order of 1920, art. 6, but that art. does not apply to rooms in a leasehold house let unfurnished on weekly tenancies, there being a manager of the house employed by the lessee whose duties include cleaning the common stairs, ways & places, the maintenance of electric light, & so on.—RODDA v. GODFREY (1926), 95 L. Apart from the laundry business resp. continued to be known as Karel Kollross, & he was registered in that name as the proprietor of the Widmore Laundry under Registration of Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58). An information having been preferred against resp. for using the name Widmore Laundry, being a name other than that by which he was ordinarily known on Aug. 4, 1914, contrary to sect. 7 of the Act of 1919, the justices dismissed the information:—Held: the justices were right, as resp. had committed no offence against sect. 7 (1), by taking over an old-established business with a pre-war name & continuing to carry it on under that name.—BRUNNING v. KOLLROSS, [1923] 1 K. 558e. —— —— Prosecution under—Whether offences triable on indictment.]—(1) On a prosecution for an offence against a statutory Order, an objection that the Order has not been proved must be taken before the ct. at the trial. It is too late to take the point for the first time on appeal.

(2) In cases under the Act of 1914, s. 1 (4), & the Act of 1919, s. 13, when any question arises whether the person charged is an alien or not the onus lies upon him to prove that he is not an alien.

(3) Offences against the Act of 1914 & the Act of 1919 are punishable only in the manner prescribed by the statutes, namely on summary conviction, unless the person charged with the offence claims the right under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, to be tried with a jury. When before the magistrate he was asked "Are you an Egyptian?" to which he answered "Yes." He was then asked "Did you tell the registration officer that you intended to change your residence, & tell him when & where you were going?" to which he answered "No." Thereupon the magistrate entered a plea of guilty & sentenced appct. to imprisonment for one month & recommended the making of a deportation order against him:—Held: appct. had not pleaded guilty or admitted the truth of the charge within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 19, or Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (c. 58), s. 37, &, therefore, he had a right of appeal to quarter sessions by virtue of those sections.—R. v. GRAHAM CAMPBELL, Ex p. AHMED HAMID MOUSSA, [1921] 2 K. The husband was a waiter of Italian nationality & was registered as an alien in England, & as such was subject to the restrictions & liabilities imposed by the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), & the Aliens Order, 1920 :—Held : the provisions of the Act of 1914 & the Order of 1920 did not preclude petitioner from acquiring an English domicil of choice.—BOLDRINI v. BOLDRINI & MARTINI, [1932] P. 9; 101 L. 558k. —— —— Prosecution under—Effect of receiving inadmissible evidence.]—At the trial of applt. who was a British subject by birth, for an offence against art. 6, para. 1 (a) of Aliens Order, 1920, & for making an untrue statement for the purpose of procuring a passport, the prosecution endeavoured to prove by means of a photostatic copy of a certificate of naturalisation authenticated by the seal of the United States of America that applt. had lost his British nationality. Applt. was convicted on both charges, & on appeal it was conceded by the Crown that the document ought not to have been admitted in evidence, inasmuch as the mode of authenticating the document did not fulfil the requirements of Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 7 :—Held : though the prosecution might have proceeded at the trial on the basis that under Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 1 (4), the burden of proving that he was not an alien lay on applt., they had not taken this course, but had themselves accepted the burden of proof & endeavoured to discharge it by putting in evidence an inadmissible document, & accordingly the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. BEADON (1933), 24 Cr. 561a. —— Restrictions as to change of name—Validity.]—Applt., a foreigner by birth, became a naturalised British subject in 1912, & changed his name by deed poll in 1915 from Ernst to Ernest. In 1919 he was convicted under reg. 14h of the above regulations, for that, not being a natural-born British subject, he used a name other than that by which he was ordinarily known at the beginning of the war. He contended that reg. 14h was ultra vires, on the ground that it was not competent by Order in Council, issued under Defence of the Realm Act, 1914 (c. 8), to deprive him of any rights, powers, or privileges which were not at the same time taken away from all British subjects; & that the regulations purported to override an Act of Parliament, although there was no power under the Act of 1914 to do so :—Held : reg. 14h was not ultra vires because it discriminated between naturalised & natural-born British subjects.

103 iii. —— No actual interference with sheep.]—The accused was prosecuted under sect. 537 (a) of the Criminal Code for the killing of a dog. It was admitted that the dog was shot & killed by the accused while on accused's premises. The accused alleged that the dog was chasing & worrying his cattle :—Held : no danger to sheep being involved, Sheep Protection & Dog Licensing Act, R.S.S., 1930, s. 3 (c) did not afford a defence ; & the accused must prove that he fired the shot either because the dog was molesting his cattle or because he had reasonable apprehension that it was about to injure his cattle & he believed they could be protected in no other way ; the mere fact that the dog was trespassing was no excuse. On the evidence the defence failed.—R. (STEEL) v. STEWART, [1937] 1 W. W. R. 400.—CAN.

sd. Straying bull tied up during night—Released & driven away next day—Subsequently found dying.]—Deft. tied up over night a bull which had strayed on his premises, to prevent it damaging his cows & released it next day & drove it away. In the evening it was found castrated near the boundary of deft.'s farm & died the next day. In an action for damages :—Held : deft.'s actions were justified, & in the absence of evidence as to when or how or by whom the animal was injured, pltf. could not succeed.—FICOWICH v. MALESHCHAK, [1924] 4 D. 86. Claim against custodian of animal—Onus of proof as to absence of negligence.]—The onus is upon the custodian to show that the injury did not occur through his act or negligence only where it is shown that the injury occurred when the animal was or should have been in his custody or control, or that he was under an obligation to account for it to the owner.—FICOWICH v. MALESHCHAK, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 585; 3 W. W. R. 308.—CAN.

126 v. —— ——.]—Pltf.'s cow died from choking over an onion from a dump of culled onions which deft. had dumped in the space occupied by an "A" fence between the adjoining fields of pltf. & deft. It was found that the onions were closer to deft.'s side of the fence than to pltf.'s, & there was a break in the rail on pltf.'s side through which the cow got access to them & that if it had not been broken the accident would not have happened:—Held: as it was the duty of pltf. to keep his side of the fence in repair the cow was a trespasser, &, therefore, deft. was not liable for its loss.—SCHNEIDER v. HEE FONG, [1935] 1 W. W. R. 366; 2 D. L. R. 812.—CAN.

132 ii a. —— Animal falling in well—Animal lawfully at large.]—Pltf.'s horse while lawfully running at large was killed by falling into an open well on deft.'s land. Deft., who knew of the open well, was residing outside the province, the land being occupied by a tenant:—Held: deft.'s breach of Open Wells Act gave pltf. a right of action "on a tort committed within the jurisdiction," justifying allowance of the issue of a writ for service on deft. ex juris.—BROTHERSON v. KENNEDY, [1919] 2 W. 132 ii b. —— —— What is an "open well."]—Whether a well is an "open well" or not is a question of fact to be proved at the trial. While it might be an "open well" if insecurely covered, the fact that an animal falls into it without any evidence of how it occurred does not prove it such, nor does the fact that the material of the covering was seven years old.—DRYSDALE v. REID, [1920] 3 W. 132 iv. —— Animal falling in excavation.]—Deft. & pltf. were neighbours. Pltf.'s cow while running at large fell into an excavation on deft.'s land:—Held: pltf. could not recover damages.—PITTZEN v. SHOKLUK, [1921] 2 W. W. R. 686; 16 Alta. L. R. 482.—CAN.

132 v. —— ——.]—The owner or occupier of land will be liable in damages for any loss of stock resulting from failure to guard against access to an excavation.—KELLOGG v. DAPPEN (1922), 69 D. L. R. 528; [1922] 3 W. W. R. 573.—CAN.

132 vi. —— —— Cellar of unused house.]—Deft. owned unfenced land on which was an unused open house with a cellar beneath. Pltf.'s horse, running at large, got into the house, &, while there, one of its feet broke through the floor above the cellar &, being unable to withdraw it, it died:—Held: the animals must take the land as they find it, & Open Wells Act did not apply.—WRUBLESKI v. LOFT, [1923] 2 W. z ii. —— On racecourse—Injury to racehorse.]—Applt.'s racehorse was injured on resp.'s racecourse by a splinter from a stake used to flag off a portion of the regular course, which had become dangerous owing to heavy rain:—Held: resp. having taken proper steps to ensure that the course was as safe as reasonable care & skill could make it, & the risk not being in the nature of a "trap," no liability attached for the injury.—WACKROW v. TAKAPUNA JOCKEY CLUB, [1928] N. 145a. Animal killed—Meaning of "external & visible injury."]—A policy of insurance provided that an insurance co. should indemnify the insured against death solely attributable to accidental external & visible injury to any horse the property of the insured, duly certified by a veterinary surgeon, & further provided that the due observance & fulfilment of the conditions of the policy should be a condition precedent to any liability of the co. under the policy. The insured's horse, drawing a loaded van, got out of the driver's control, bolted, & fell into a ditch with the van on top of it, & died in consequence of the pressure of a shaft upon its windpipe. There was no mark visible on the skin of the horse, & no certificate of a veterinary surgeon was obtained :—Held : (1) it was not necessary that there should have been any mark visible on the skin of the horse, & the injury was external & visible ; & (2) it was a condition precedent to the insured's right to recover that the death of the horse should be duly certified by a veterinary surgeon, but, on the facts of the case, the co. had waived compliance with such condition.—BURRIDGE & SON v. HAINES (F. w iii. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. & deft. were farmers & occupied adjoining lands separated by a three-strand wire line fence, secured by posts. Deft.'s servant in the course of spreading grasshopper poison on deft.'s land, left an open bag of the composition on the ground at five feet distance from the fence. A horse & a number of cattle, property of pltf., pasturing on his land, were attracted by the smell of the poison, which consists in part of bran & salt, & having broken down one of the strands, were able from pltf.'s land to reach the bag, &, eating the poison, they died. Pltf. sought to hold deft. liable for negligence. Deft. & his servant knew that the mixture was poisonous to horses & cattle, & that pltf.'s horse & cattle were loose on pltf.'s land. Whether they knew that the poison was an allurement to cattle was not gone into. Judgment for pltf. Deft. appealed :—Held : the appeal should be allowed & the action dismissed.—PEROZEK v. SINCLAIR, [1933] 2 W. W. R. 484 ; 4 D. L. R. 317 ; 41 Man. L. R. 263.—CAN.

197a. —— —— Liability of each owner for whole damage.]—Two dogs, the property of different owners, acting in concert, attacked a flock of sheep & injured several. An action of damages brought under this Act by the owners of the sheep against the respective owners of the dogs, craving for a joint & several decree against the defenders, was defended by one defender only, who claimed that he was liable for one-half only of the damage :—Held : when once liability under the Act was established, the ordinary measure of damages had to be applied; in law each of the dogs occasioned the whole of the damage as the result of the two dogs acting together, & consequently each owner was responsible for the whole.—ARNEIL v. PATERSON, [1931] A. C. 560; 100 L. J. P. C. 161; 145 L. T. 393; 47 T. L. R. 441; 75 Sol. Jo. 424, H. L.

bye-law was to permit cattle, other than those excepted in it, to run at large between certain dates, & in this it ousted the common law liability of the owner of the cattle for damages caused by them when so running at large, & such damages were not recoverable even if the land where the damage was done was surrounded by a lawful fence.

(2) The bye-law also provided that nothing therein contained should prevent the owner of any lands trespassed upon or of any property destroyed from waiving rights created by that bye-law & bringing his action in any competent ct. in consequence of any trespass :—Held : that provision gave no right of action taken away by the other bye-law provision.—JUKES v. MISKELLY, [1923] 2 D. Pltf.'s son on horseback was chasing the cattle out when pltf. proceeded on foot to drive a steer through a gateway & was charged by the steer & injured. Deft. had no knowledge that the steer was of a vicious nature or liable to attack persons :—Held : pltf. could not recover damages, as the injury was not an ordinary consequence of the trespass; the damages claimed were too remote, & the proximate cause of the injury was pltf.'s action in approaching the animal on foot which he should not have done.—HATTON v. MORTON, [1921] 2 W. 205a. —— —— Attempt to stop horse—Volenti non fit injuria.]—A horse belonging to defts. & attached to one of their vans was seen by pltf. running past his house without the driver. It entered a field immediately adjoining, & separated by a hedge from, pltf.'s garden, & the driver, who had followed it, was trying to pacify it, but as it continued very restive, the driver, who was excited, shouted "Help, help!" whereupon pltf. went over the hedge & attempted to hold the horse, but it suddenly reared & threw him to the ground causing him serious injuries, in respect of which he sued defts. There was evidence that the horse had bolted once, if not twice, before. The jury found (a) that pltf. did not freely & voluntarily, with full knowledge of the nature of the risk he ran, impliedly agree to incur it; (b) that defts. were guilty of negligence in employing the horse to draw the van; & (c) that negligence was the cause of the accident :—Held : the negligence (if any) of defts. in employing the horse could not be said to be the cause of the accident, inasmuch as there was a novus actus interveniens—namely, pltf.'s attempt to hold the horse, which he must have known was attended with risk, & therefore that the principle of volenti non fit injuria applied & precluded the pltf. from recovering.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: If a horse bolts in a highway & a bystander tries to stop it & is injured, the owner of the horse is under no legal liability to the injured person.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: If a man sees his child in great peril in the street from a runaway horse, &, moved by paternal affection, dashes out & is injured in attempting to stop the horse, it may in those circumstances well be said that there is in law no novus actus interveniens. — CUTLER v. UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD., [1933] 2 K. Seeing defts.' runaway horses with a van attached coming down the street he rushed out & eventually stopped them, sustaining injuries in consequence, in respect of which he claimed damages :—Held : (1) on the evidence defts.' servant was guilty of negligence in leaving the horses unattended in a busy street; (2) as defts. must or ought to have contemplated that some one might attempt to stop the horses in an endeavour to prevent injury to life & limb, & as the police were under a general duty to intervene to protect life & property, the act of, & injuries to, pltf. were the natural & probable consequences of defts.' negligence; (3) the maxim "volenti non fit injuria" did not apply to prevent pltf. recovering.—HAYNES v. HARWOOD, [1935] 1 K. The driver saw the horses move off, ran out of the shop, & a few seconds later caught the reins. 219a. Dog left inside motor car.]—Deft. parked his saloon car in a street with its back against the pavement. The car was left shut with a dog inside it. There was no evidence that the dog had a vicious propensity. When pltf., who had parked his car near deft.'s car, was walking past deft.'s car the dog, which had been barking & jumping about the car, jumped up against the window in the rear of deft.'s car, smashing a panel, whereby a glass splinter flew out & entered pltf.'s eye, with the result that pltf. lost his eye. In an action for damages for personal injuries :—Held : the danger of a piece of glass being knocked by a dog out of a small window at the back of the car, & of a splinter of glass hitting a passer-by on the pavement, was such an unlooked-for event that no reasonable man could say that a person ought to be convicted of negligence for not taking any precautions against it. A person must guard against a reasonable probability of danger; he was not bound to guard against a fantastic possibility.—FARDON v. HARCOURT-RIVINGTON (1932), 146 L. T. 391; 48 T. L. 219b. ——.]—Where a pltf., aged five, when leaning over a motor car, stationary upon the highway, which she had been warned by her father not to approach, after a general warning by deft., the owner of the car, to the children accustomed to play nearby, was bitten by a dog owned by deft., confined to the car by a leash so that it could project its nose only 3 inches over the rim of the door, & where the evidence that the dog was of a ferocious disposition towards mankind, & that deft. knew of it, was so slight that no reasonable jury could act upon it :—Held : judgment must be entered for deft.

Per SCRUTTON & LAWRENCE, L.JJ.—The doctrine of scienter, applicable to the liability of the owner of a dog let run in the street, was applicable also to the liability of the owner of a dog confined in a motor car.

Per GREER, L.J.—The owner of a dog might be liable to a person bitten, apart from any scienter, if he placed it in such a position & under such circumstances as rendered it likely that the dog would get excited, would lose its temper, & would cause damage to persons lawfully passing along the highway. But here deft. had tied up the dog in the way proved, had warned the children of the neighbourhood, & this warning had been expressly conveyed to pltf. Had pltf. not been so expressly warned, his Lordship stated that he did not know what his view would have been.—SYCAMORE v. LEY (1932), 147 L. T. 342, C. A.

215 iii. —— Liability of dog owner.]—Deft.'s dog, to his knowledge, had for long had a habit of running after & barking at horses & carriages travelling upon highways :—Held : deft. was liable in damages for injury caused by the running away of horses frightened by the dog so acting.—BIRDSALL v. MERRITT (1917), 38 O. L. R. 587; 35 D. L. R. 260.—CAN.

215 iv. —— —— Scienter.]—Deft.'s dog jumped from an automobile & ran at pltf.'s horses & barked causing the horses to jump sideways, the pole strap to break, & the team to run away, causing loss & bodily injuries. The ct. found that the dog had, to deft.'s knowledge, the mischievous propensity of doing such acts, & deft. was held liable in damages.—SPAT v. HODGSON, [1919] 3 W. W. R. 210.—CAN.

221 ii. —— ——.]—In Saskatchewan the principles of the common law govern liability for damage done by a bull when at large, with the exception that there is no difference, as there apparently is in England, between the case of damage on a highway & damage on private property. Therefore, although there is a statutory prohibition against allowing bulls to run at large, yet, in the absence of evidence that the bull in question was vicious or possessed characteristics different from those of bulls generally, there is no liability in damages for damage done by it when at large unless the damage was such as might reasonably have been anticipated as the result of its being at large.—RICHARDSON v. DORN, [1937] 1 W. W. R. 143.—CAN.

225 iii. —— ——.]—Pltf.'s motor car collided with a dark brown heifer belonging to deft. which had strayed from deft.'s unfenced land & came suddenly out on to the highway from the land of an adjoining owner; the car was overturned & pltf. sustained injury. There was no negligence in the driving or management of the car :—Held : deft. was not liable to pltf.—HALL v. WIGHTMAN, [1926] N. 92.—IR.

225 iv. —— ——.]—Held : permitting one's cattle to run at large on a provincial highway being forbidden by Highway Improvement Act, 1927, s. 73, the presence of the calves on the road was unlawful, quite as much so as if forbidden by a municipal bye-law; &, where an animal is unlawfully upon a highway in this Province, the owner is liable in damages for any injury which is the natural result of the unlawful straying.—MCMILLAN v. WALLACE, [1929] 3 D. L. R. 367; 64 O. L. R. 4.—CAN.

225 v. —— ——.]—The owner of a cattle farm in Southern Rhodesia, a cattle country with large open spaces, is not negligent if he allows his cattle to roam over his farm though such cattle may stray on a public road running across the farm, & if a bull in his possession & accompanying such cattle injures a person lawfully using the road, the owner of the farm is not liable unless he knew or ought to have known that the bull was vicious.—MOUBRAY v. SYFRET (1935), App. D. 199.—S. AF.

226 i. —— Sheep—Defective fence—Natural propensity.]—A motor cyclist was injured by a collision in daylight with a sheep upon a public road. Pursuer averred that defender was negligent in knowingly failing to keep his fences in such repair as would prevent his sheep from straying on to the road, &, in any event, in allowing his sheep to graze upon the road :—Held : the accident was not the natural & probable result of the negligence alleged.—FRAZER v. PATE, [1923] S. C. 748; 60 Sc. L. R. 470.—SCOT.

226a. —— Duty of owner.]—No duty is cast upon the owner of an animal mansuetæ naturæ, which is being depastured on land adjoining the highway, to prevent it from straying on the highway, unless it is known to be of vicious habit. But a person who brings an animal on the highway must take reasonable care to prevent it from doing damage to other persons thereon. What constitutes reasonable care is a question of fact in each case, & the standard of reasonable care may not be the same in the country as in a town. In this respect the duty to the public is the same in the case of one who leaves an animal in the street, & of one who places it in a stable or yard adjoining the street without taking proper steps to prevent it from straying into the street, where it would naturally go. In either case the owner is liable for the conduct of the animal if he puts it in a position in which it is likely to cause damage to persons lawfully using the highway.—DEEN v. DAVIES, [1935] 2 K. q i. —— ——.]—Applt. kept about seventy hives of bees on a small piece of land adjoining resp.'s farm. While resps. were reaping close to the apiary, bees in great numbers attacked resps. & their horses, causing serious injuries. In an action for damages, the magistrate found as a fact that applt. was guilty of negligence; &, further, apart from negligence, the liability of a bee-keeper was coextensive with the liability of a person keeping on his land water, wild & dangerous animals, or poisonous fumes. From this judgment deft. appealed :—Held : (1) Apiaries Act, 1927, being restrictive & not permissive, does not exempt a registered apiarist from common-law liability for injuries inflicted by his bees; (2) applt. was guilty of negligence in keeping so many hives of bees on the boundary, & this negligence was the effective cause of the injury & damage.—ROBINS v. KENNEDY & COLUMB, [1931] N. W. R. 135; 14 Sask. L. R. 226; 59 D. L. R. 177.—CAN.

245 ii. —— ——.]—In an action for damages for the death of a person killed by a bull known to be dangerous allowed to be at large on the farm where deceased lived, a defence of contributory negligence cannot be supported by the fact that deceased, though knowing of the possible danger, went about her ordinary business on the farm, in the course of which she was killed.—TARASOFF v. ZIELINSKY, [1921] 2 W. W. R. 135; 14 Sask. L. R. 226; 59 D. L. R. 177.—CAN.

245 iii. —— ——.] — Liability attaches to the owner if, knowing of the mischievous tendencies of his dog, he neglects reasonable precautions to prevent such tendencies causing damage.

Pltf. walking in the street was passing deft.'s house, when his dog rushed out, knocked her down, & injured her. At the trial of an action for damages for her injury, the jury found that deft. knew that the dog was of a vicious disposition & assessed damages to pltf. :—Held : there was evidence to sustain the jury's finding, deft.'s wife, who was in control of the dog, having knowledge of its propensity to rush out & jump at persons passing.— NORTON v. FITZGERALD, [1928] 3 D. L. R. 474; 62 O. L. R. 314.—CAN.

246a. Bull attacking cow—Bull in auction yard.]—In an action for damages arising out of an attack on a cow in an auction yard by a bull which was in charge of deft.'s servants, but otherwise unsecured:—Held: there was no presumption in law that a bull would attack a cow in such circumstances, & for pltf. to succeed it was necessary for him to prove negligence in not having anticipated a probable danger; further, if such negligence were proved, it would be no answer for deft. to set up absence of scienter.—HINCKES v. HARRIS (1921), 65 Sol. 254a. —— Person in control of dog liable—Not owner of premises.]—Pltf. was a charwoman who was employed as a cleaner at a school owned by defts., the London County Council, & was bitten by a dog, an Airedale, while doing her work at the school. The dog belonged to & was under the control of the school-keeper, who lived on the school premises, & was forbidden to keep any domestic animal except a cat or a dog. He kept the dog in question as a pet, & not as a watch-dog or otherwise for the benefit of defts. The school-keeper was aware that the dog had formerly attacked a boy, & the county ct. judge found as a fact that he knew the dog to be accustomed to attack mankind. Defts. did not know that the school-keeper had a dog. In an action by pltf. for keeping a dog which was known to be of a fierce & mischievous nature & accustomed to attack & bite mankind:—Held: the knowledge of the school-keeper that the dog was accustomed to attack mankind was not acquired by him as the servant of defts., & pltf. showed no cause of action against them.

Per LORD WRIGHT: "I think both the common law & the Legislature in Dogs Act, 1906 (c. 32), have recognised that a dog, which has been described as 'a familiar animal,' is naturally so associated with a particular master that responsibility for its acts should depend on ownership or possession & control."—KNOTT v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1934] 1 K. 258a. Mare attacking horse—Strange mare turned into field with horse.]—Trespass to person or goods by an animal in which there is at common law a valuable property, such as horses & cattle, does not generally render its owner liable.

Deft. put a mare into a field in which there was a horse belonging to pltf. without notifying pltf. The mare kicked the horse, which had to be destroyed. No scienter was proved in deft., but it was found by the deputy county ct. judge that the propensity of horses running loose to injure one another in sport or quarrel was common knowledge:—Held: (1) the mare was not within the class of dangerous animals which the owner must keep at his peril according to the rule in Fletcher v. Rylands (see No. 195); (2) deft. was entitled to assume that the mare, being mansuetæ naturæ, was an innocent animal, &, having no notice of any fact indicating the contrary, was not under any duty towards pltf. to give notice of his intention to place the mare in the field, or to have a person on the watch or in charge of her, & on the whole deft. was not liable either for breach of an absolute duty or for negligence.—MANTON v. BROCKLEBANK, [1923] 2 K. d i. —— —— Whether proceedings civil or criminal.]—The summary proceedings, before a justice of the peace, authorised by sect. 13 of Sheep Protection Act, 1926-27, for the recovery of damages for the loss of or injury to sheep, etc., killed or injured by a dog, are entirely civil in character, although the Summary Convictions Act is made applicable thereto.—R. st. Dog & Goat Act (N. S. W.), 1898, s. 19—Dog jumping up & biting over fence.]—Applt. while looking over resp.'s fence from a public footpath placed his hand on the top of the fence. Resp.'s dog, from inside resp.'s premises, jumped up & bit applt.'s hand, inflicting serious injury :—Held : applt. was entitled under Dog & Goat Act, 1898, s. 19, to recover damages for the injury received.—SIMPSON v. BANNERMAN, [1932] Argus L. sv. Dog Registration Act, 1908, s. 27.]—C., a blind man, went to visit a friend & chained his dog upon the veranda with a very short chain. H., also as a visitor, walked up the flight of concrete steps to the veranda in felt slippers. As she reached the top step the dog suddenly becoming aware of her approach sprang towards her & attempted to bite her, but was unable to do so as the chain was too short. H., thinking the dog could reach her, moved back, lost her balance, fell down the steps, and sustained injuries. In an action by H. :—Held : sect. 27 does not place upon dog-owners in New Zealand an absolute liability for all damages, direct or indirect done by their dogs; the fact that the Legislature has dispensed with the necessity of proof of scienter, & proof of negligence on the owner's part to impose liability on a dog-owner for injury done by his dog, does not mean that all dogs are to be deemed dangerous animals & in the same class as wild beasts; sect. 27 takes away from a dog-owner the benefit of the common law exemption from liability for trespass injuries caused by his dog; it is still open to the dog-owner, if he can, to establish one or other of the defences open to persons who harbour animals of evil disposition—e.g., want of negligence on his part; the injury to pltf. was due to accident, & not to any negligence on the part of deft.

The judge drew attention to the fact that, as in England proof of scienter brings a domestic animal into category of wild animals, the English cases dealing with injuries inflicted by wild animals are applicable to cases of injuries by dogs in New Zealand by reason of the abolition in the Dominion of the necessity of proof of scienter in cases of injuries inflicted by dogs.—CHITTENDEN v. HALE, [1933] N. sw. Destruction of unlicensed dogs—Validity of bye-law.]—Resp. municipality was empowered by statute to pass bye-laws "for restraining, prohibiting & regulating the running at large of dogs, for imposing a tax on the owners, possessors or harbourers of dogs, & for impounding, selling or killing dogs running at large in contravention of the bye-laws." A bye-law imposed a licence of $20 on dogs wholly or in part of the breed known as police dogs, of $4 on male dogs of any other breed & of $10 on female dogs of any other breed; & provided that an unlicensed dog shall be liable to be destroyed, & that an owner or harbourer of an unlicensed dog should be liable on summary conviction to a fine &, in default of payment, to imprisonment :—Held : the bye-law was valid & must stand except in so far as it provide (1) for the killing of unlicensed dogs for any other reason than that they are found running at large; & (2) for the imprisonment of any convicted offender under the bye-law for default of payment of fine imposed on such conviction; & those two provisions must be quashed.—Re SHOAL LAKE VILLAGE BY-LAW, 192, [1933] 3 W. sy. Discrimination between breeds of licensed dogs—Validity of bye-law.]—Under a statute authorising municipal bye-laws imposing a tax on the owners, etc., of dogs :—Held : a dog-licensing bye-law was not invalid because it imposed a higher licence fee for dogs of the breed known as police dogs than for other breeds of dogs or because it imposed a higher fee for female dogs than for male dogs.—Re SMEATON & SHOAL LAKE VILLAGE BY-LAW 192, [1934] 1 W. b i. —— Construction.]—By a contract for agistment pltf. agreed to make available certain properties for the agistment of deft.'s sheep. The terms of payment were 1½*d.* per head per week, £500 to be paid when the sheep arrived, £500 in six months, & the balance when the sheep were removed : —Held : the payment contemplated by the contract was 1½*d.* per head per week, according to the number of sheep on the properties from time to time ; the contract was one for making available the area of land agreed on for the sheep, & included the taking care of the sheep agisted at the above remuneration while they were in pltf.'s custody.—SPRING v. YOUNG, [1923] S. c i. —— Whether agister liable to supply water.]—Pltf. having bought horses from deft., the latter agreed at pltf.'s request to winter them. The terms of the agreement were set out in a letter from deft. to pltf. in which deft. said : "I will winter them as usual, that is, bring them in straw 3 times a week." The horses were given no water by deft. & pltf. sued for damages, the horses being in poorer condition when he took delivery of them than they would have been had they been watered :—Held : in view of the terms of said letter & all the facts of the case, deft. was under no obligation to supply water.—RUDGE v. STAUFFER, [1929] 1 W. 344 xii. —— Loss of animals.]—Pltf. was the owner of a mare which he delivered to deft. for agistment in his paddock of 6,000 acres, which paddock was heavily timbered & covered with blackboys. After the mare had remained in the paddock for some time, pltf. requested the delivery of the mare in two months' time. Deft. made endeavours to find the mare, but only saw it on one occasion, & thereafter made many attempts to locate the mare, but without success : —Held : deft. was not liable to pltf. for the value of the mare, there being no evidence of negligence.—ROBINSON v. WATERS (1920), 22 W. 344 xiii. —— —— Failure to detect loss within reasonable time.]—A large number of sheep were lost, & there was evidence rendering it probable that these had been driven off the run :—Held : an agister of sheep must show that he took reasonable care to see the sheep were on the agistment area, & failure to detect this loss within a reasonable time was clear evidence of negligence.—SPRING v. YOUNG, [1923] S. 369 xv. —— —— —— ——.]—If a hired horse is in a sound condition when taken out, & it is brought back injured, the onus of proof in a claim for damages for negligence is on deft. The hirer is bound to treat the horse with the degree of care which a person of ordinary discretion would use towards his own, but if the horse is so treated & nevertheless receives an injury the hirer is not liable in damages for such injury.—REINSETH v. CAMPBELL (1920), 52 D. 369 xvii. —— —— ——.]—Deft. hired a horse from pltf. to drive from T. to L. & return. At a distance of between six & eight miles from S., the horse fell lame in the right hind leg. Deft. drove it to S., put it in a livery stable & gave instructions to have the hoof of the right hind leg re-shod. Deft. hired another horse & continued his journey to L., a distance of over eight miles. He returned next day, took the horse out, & finding that it was not then lame, started with it on the return journey. After travelling about three miles, the horse again fell lame & kept getting a little lamer all the way to T. The journey from S. to T., a distance of twenty-two miles, took seven & one-half hours. There was no evidence as to what caused the horse's lameness. There was no evidence that there was, between the place where the horse fell lame & T. any suitable place in which the horse could have been placed & cared for, or where deft. could have hired another horse to continue the return journey:—Held: as the lameness when it first developed on the return journey was not shown to have been of a more serious nature than often happens to a horse which may nevertheless walk, or even trot slowly, fifteen to twenty miles without serious distress, deft. could not be held guilty of negligence until he had travelled a sufficient distance to satisfy himself that the lameness was increasing so as to make it dangerous to the welfare of the horse to continue the journey.—GAGNON v. LANGIS (1920), 48 N. B. R. 76.—CAN.

374 ii. —— Bill of sale granted by bailee—Rights of grantee.]—A., the owner of twenty-seven cows depasturing on his farm, agreed to lease his farm & cows to G. for a term of years, & it was agreed that G. should have the right to purchase the farm & stock at any time during the term. G. was given possession of the stock & farm. G. gave to applt. a bill of sale over the cows. A. recovered possession of his farm & cows from G., & shortly thereafter applt. seized & sold the cows under his bill of sale. Thirty-four cows were seized & sold, only nine of which were of the original herd, the balance having been bought by G. during the time he had possession of the farm. A. claimed damages for the seizure:—Held: it had not been shown that the cattle substituted by G. for those originally bailed to him had become the property of A., who was entitled to damages only in respect of the cows originally bailed.—NORFOLK CO-OPERATIVE DAIRY CO., LTD. v. ALLEN, [1924] N. Z. L. R. 136.—N.Z.

374 ii. —— Loss by bailee—Negligence.]—In an action for the value of a horse which was lost after it had been hired to deft. under an agreement whereby the latter undertook to take "good care in every way" thereof, it appeared that the horse, which was unbroken, was received by deft. & put into a pasture belonging to a neighbour of deft., & deft. went to see it every other day The pasture was surrounded by a fence of two strands of wire, & the horse got out twice during the winter but was put back. It disappeared about the end of the following April. The fence was down in one place, & the evidence showed a custom among the farmers in the neighbourhood to allow horses not in use to run at large during the winter. While deft. was given the right to work the horse, it was shown that it was not customary in that locality to break horses until the spring:—Held: deft. had taken sufficiently good care of the horse & was not liable for its loss.—ZIMMERMAN v. ARCHER (1922), 63 D. The conditions of sale expressly negatived the existence of any warranties on the vendor's part. At the time of the sale the bull had not been used, but subsequently was found to be sterile. This condition was shown to be a latent defect not discoverable upon examination. In an action by resp., claiming damages:—Held: as the capacity for procreation was not, by implication, a part of the description, & as the bull complied in all other respects with the description, resp. was without remedy.—DELL v. [1924] N. as " in dispute," & without a warranty, when it was sold for about £40 less than the contract price. In an action for the difference between the price realised at the auction & the contract price :—Held : (1) this was not the proper form of action ; (2) the action must be for damages ; (3) the conditions of the auction sale were not a test of the value of the horse, the auction being of a horse " in dispute," & without warranty, & quite different from the original contract conditions ; (4) pltf. was not entitled to more than nominal damages, as he had failed to prove his damages to be the difference between the contract price & the price realised at the auction.—MACKLIN v. NEWBURY SANITARY LAUNDRY (1919), 63 Sol. sale of a stallion provided that the only "guarantee" by which the seller bound himself was that the horse was serviceably sound as a serving stallion, and it also provided that if the horse "after a fair trial on sure breeding mares" should prove not to be so sound the buyer would return it to the seller & receive another horse of equal value in exchange, but that the seller should not be bound by "the conditions of this guarantee" unless the buyer submitted a monthly report in writing showing the condition of the horse, etc., & that the contract should expire & the seller be released from any further obligation to the buyer after Apr. 1, 1929, except in the event of the death of the horse within three years. In an action, begun after Apr. 1, 1929, for the balance of the purchase-price the buyer claimed a set-off for damages for loss of service fees which he would have earned with the horse had it been as guaranteed & counter claimed for the excess of said damages over the amount of pltf.'s claim :—Held : deft.'s only remedy for the difference between the purchase-price & the actual value of the horse was that expressly agreed to in the contract, viz. the return of the horse and the taking of another in its place, said provision, however, did not affect his right to sue for other damages, such as loss of service fees, which he had suffered up to Apr. 1, 1929, through the breach of the guarantee, but that his failure to submit the monthly report provided for in the contract would preclude him from recovering said other damages, & the trial judge's conclusion that there had been a reasonable compliance with that requirement could not be sustained.—HEAD v. LINTON, [1930] 2 W. It was subsequently established that they died of arsenic poison. An action against deft. railway co. for negligence was dismissed, as there was no evidence connecting the cause of injury with any alleged negligence. A race horse, exceeding £50 in value, was delivered to the co. for transit by the sender's groom, who informed the booking clerk that he had got "a very valuable 'chaser, worth about £1,000," a figure arrived at by the groom himself from casual gossip. The clerk gave the groom the co.'s form of "consignment note & waybill" for live stock, & the groom filled it in for carriage at the ordinary rate, & signed it, with full knowledge of its contents. The horse having been injured in transit :—Held : (1) the above conditions were not unreasonable; (2) the contract of carriage, which was signed by the groom under a direction by his employer that the horse was to be carried at the ordinary rate, exempted the co. from liability for any greater amount than £50; (3) in order to make the co. liable for the full value of the horse, the declaration of value must have been made with the intention of paying the higher rate, & the statement of value made by the groom to the booking clerk was insufficient.—FOX v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. si. —— Train run in contravention of Lord's Day Act.]—Pltf. shipped goods, including horses, by defts.' line, & signed a special contract providing that defts. should not be liable for any loss or damages in respect of the live stock by reason of injury except such as might arise from a collision, & should in no case be responsible for any amount exceeding certain small sums named. Pltf. accompanied his goods, & the train was lawfully proceeding on a Sunday, notwithstanding the Lord's Day Act, when a collision occurred with one of defts.' trains, which was being run unlawfully because in contravention of that Act, & some of the horses & other goods of pltf. were destroyed or damaged. Pltf. sued in tort for the amount of his loss, claiming much more than the limited amounts stated in the special contract. Defts. set up the special contract :—Held : the provision of the contract limiting the liability of defts. in the case of a collision to a stated sum did not sustain the defence, because that provision must be taken not to have contemplated a collision occurring by reason of the breach of a statute distinctly prohibiting & making unlawful the act which caused the collision.—RISE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. 563a. —— —— —— Birds lawfully taken elsewhere.]—Applt. was charged under Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880 (c. 35), s. 3, as extended under s. 8 in the county of London by the Wild Birds Protection (Administrative County of London) Order, 1909, par. 4, with having in his possession some goldfinches recently taken. The magistrate found that the charge was proved & dismissed it under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907 (c. 17), ordering applt. to pay the costs. The birds were lawfully caught in Ireland on or immediately before Dec. 3, 1918, &, after being kept there for upwards of a month to enable them to recover their condition, & travel safely, were sent to applt. in London by post. They were found in applt.'s possession in a wild & terrified state on Jan. 15, 1919 :—Held : the magistrate was justified in taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, including the condition of the birds when exposed for sale & the fact that they had to be kept in Ireland for some time in order to endure the journey & arrive alive, & also the length of the journey, in order to arrive at the conclusion that the birds were recently taken.—HARRIS v. LUCAS, [1919] 2 K. 587a. —— Liberation in exhausted condition.]—On a prosecution of A. & G. for cruelly ill-treating a live wild rabbit contrary to Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (c. 27), s. 1, it appeared that A. had dangled the rabbit by its hind legs three or four yards away from two greyhounds, held in leash by G., & that the greyhounds having been taken thirty or forty yards away, the rabbit had been thrown on the ground, where it had remained, only hopping a couple of yards when flicked by a hat. The magistrate held that there was no cruel ill-treatment within the sect. ; that what had been done by resps. was ordinary coursing & so protected by sect. 1 (3) (b), & that there was no evidence of the rabbit having been liberated in an injured, mutilated, or exhausted condition. 694a. Compensation—On commercial basis of valuation—Failure to object—Valuation binding.]—By Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 15 (2), " The Board shall for animals slaughtered under this section pay compensation as follows : (i) Where the animal slaughtered was affected with foot-&-mouth disease the compensation shall be the value of the animal immediately before it became so affected. (ii) In every other case the compensation shall be the value of the animal immediately before it was slaughtered."

Pltf. was the owner of a herd of pedigree Friesian cattle which became infected with foot-&-mouth disease, & the Minister of Agriculture & Fisheries provisionally decided that it was not a case for slaughter, but was a case for isolation which would have caused expense to pltf. together with possible risk of losing his stock. Subsequently, however, after certain conversations between the Govt. inspector & pltf. the Minister decided to have the cattle valued & slaughtered. The cattle were valued on behalf of the Minister on a commercial & not a pedigree basis at £993, & notice of this valuation was given to pltf. & he signed the valuation form. The cattle were accordingly slaughtered on the following day & pltf. was paid the sum of £993. Pltf. did not give within 14 days, as required by clause 39 of Animals (Transit & General) Order, 1912, a counter-notice that he disputed the valuation. Afterwards pltf. claimed from the Minister the difference between the £993 & the pedigree value. The latter was agreed at the trial to be £2,162. The claim was based (inter alia) on the provision in s. 15 (2) that " the value " of the slaughtered animals should be paid as compensation :—Held : as pltf. & the Minister had agreed that the valuation should be on a commercial basis, the agreement was binding & the claim of pltf. failed.—BLIGH v. MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & FISHERIES (1931), 47 T. 705a. —— —— Burden of proof—Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), ss. 4 (1), 57 (1).]—A farmer who was summoned under Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 4, for not giving notice with all practicable speed to a constable of the fact that two of his cows were suffering from foot & mouth disease, contended before the justices that as there was no evidence that he knew before the day on which he gave notice that the animals were affected, he had discharged the onus which lay upon him under sect. 4 by giving notice on that date. The justices accepted this contention, & dismissed the summons :—Held : this contention was in direct conflict with sect. 57 of the Act, which cast on the accused the onus of proving absence of knowledge, & that the justices ought to have convicted.—WILSON v. YATES (1927), 91 J. Between the times of the filing of the provisional & complete specifications, the patentee, under a verbal agreement, entered the service of a co. engaged in making windlasses as technical adviser & engineer draughtsman; & the co., while the patentee was in their employment, made & sold the patented windlasses. In 1919 the patentee commenced an action against the co., alleging that it was a term of the verbal agreement that, during pltf.'s service, the co. should have pltf.'s licence to make & sell windlasses under the patent, at a reasonable royalty, &, failing agreement between the parties, at such royalty as might be settled by arbn. He contended that he would have received at least 5 per cent. on the selling price of the windlasses. Defts. denied that they had agreed to accept a licence from pltf.:—Held : pltf. had pro that the agreement for a licence had been made; he was entitled to a reasonable royalty; &, as the agreement was verbal, & defts. refused to refer the matter to arbn., the matter could not go to arbn. By reg. 51 of the regulations, "Where under the provision of these regulations or of any agreement made between the committee & a practitioner . . is referred, or any appeal from a decision of the committee is made to the Comrs. the Comrs. shall determine such questions or appeal in such manner as they think fit, & if in the opinion of the Comrs. a hearing is required they may authorise any two or more of the Comrs. to hear & determine such question or appeal, & any decision of the Comrs. or any of them made under this article shall be final & conclusive." A dispute having arisen under the agreement, the practitioner brought an action against the committee in respect thereof, & the committee applied under the Act of 1889, s. 4, to stay the action: —Held : the action must be stayed

44b. —— —— Enforcement.]—Pltf. issued a writ in the Ch. Div. claiming an account & payment of all sums due to her under a contract entered into by pltf. with deft. An order was accordingly made for an account. At the request of both parties, the master gave a decision on a matter which was not covered by the judge's order for an account, & he issued a certificate to the effect that a certain sum was due from deft. to pltf. Deft. sought to have the certificate discharged or varied by a judge of the Ch. Div., but the judge treated the certificate as a nullity, on the ground that the master had no power to consider matters not within the scope of the original order for an account. Pltf. then sought unsuccessfully to enforce the master's certificate, asking for the payment of the sum alleged to be due to her. Pltf. then brought an action in the K. B. Div. claiming payment of the amount awarded by the master :—Held : as both parties had requested the master to decide a matter not covered by the order for an account, the master's certificate was in the nature of an award by an arbitrator, & therefore binding upon the parties.—WYNDHAM v. JACKSON, [1937] 3 All E. It was further provided that the N. B. Co. should be bound to contribute to the F. Co. a sum sufficient to make up a dividend of 4 per cent. on the "paid-up share capital" of the F. Co., & that all questions which might arise between the parties in relation to the agreement, or the import or meaning thereof, or the carrying out of the same, should be referred to arbn. in terms of Railway Companies Arbitration Act, 1859. The line of railway was thereafter constructed & worked in terms of the agreement. In an action at the instance of the N. B. Co. against the F. Co., concluding for declarator (inter alia) that the pursuers were freed & relieved of all liability to make up the dividend of the F. Co. to 4 per cent., & that the articles of the agreement thereanent were null & of no effect, the pursuers averred that the ex facie capital of defenders' co. was not the "paid-up share capital" on which the dividend had been guaranteed in respect that defenders had raised that capital in a manner which was illegal & ultra vires of their statutory authority, the pursuers maintained that this depended on a legal interpretation of matters outwith the agreement, & consequently that the clause

Pltf. having failed to appoint an arbitrator after due notice given, M. made an award in favour of defts., & defts. thereupon counterclaimed to enforce the award :—Held : (1) the words " to be settled by arbn. in London in the usual way " meant the way in which disputes arising as to the particular commodity were settled in London, & there was ample evidence that the dispute had been settled " in the usual way " ; (2) any objection to the award upon the ground of irregularity or misconduct on the part of the arbitrator could only be taken by motion to set aside or remit the award, & pltf. having failed to move within the limited time, his remedy in that respect had lapsed.—SCRIMAGLIO v. THORNETT & FEHR (1924), 131 L. Danish & Norwegian merchants, to whom, as endorsees of the bills of lading, the property in part of a cargo of grain had passed, claimed in respect of short delivery from defts., the owners of the Yugo-Slavian steamship N. By a charterparty entered into in London by an English registered co. as agents for defts., & the London branch of a Paris firm as agents for the charterers, an Argentine co., the N. was chartered to load the grain in the River Plate for delivery at Scandinavian ports. The charterers were the shippers. The charterparty was in English on the Chamber of Shipping River Plate (" Centrocon ") form. The bills of lading, in an English form & in the English language, incorporated " all the terms, conditions & exceptions " of the charterparty " including the negligence clause." The charterparty contained the usual English arbn. clause. The cargo was damaged by fire on board the N. due, as pltfs. alleged, to the ship being unseaworthy. Defts., who counterclaimed for a general average contribution, in an amended defence pleaded that the law governing the bills of lading contract was Yugo-Slavian law, the law of the flag, under which it was alleged that, if they had exercised due diligence to keep the ship seaworthy, the exceptions in the charterparty would apply without the implied warranty of seaworthiness. It was admitted that the proper law of the charterparty was English law. The question of the law applicable to the bills of lading was tried as a preliminary issue :—Held : (1) the arbn. clause, which would have been decisive as to the application of English law, was not incorporated into the bills of lading ; but (2) those clauses, which were incorporated, & particularly the exceptions clause, could not be isolated from their context & incorporated without any indication of the proper law of the contract from which they were taken ; (3) the inference was that sensible business men must have intended that the bills of lading should be read with the English interpretation attaching to the charterparty ; & (4) both on what should be presumed to be the intention of the parties & on the ground of business efficacy the proper law of the contract was English & not Yugo-Slavian law.—THE NJEGOS, [1936] P. 90 ; 105 L. 147a. —— ——.]—In a proposal for insurance against accident the intending assured stated his occupation & signed a declaration that the answers to the questions therein were true, & that he agreed that the declaration should be the basis of the contract between him & the insurance co. whose policy, subject to the terms & conditions thereof, he agreed to accept. The policy recited the proposal & declaration "which proposal & declaration warranted to be true it is agreed shall be the basis of this contract . . . & be considered as incorporated herein, & any suppression, misrepresentation, or misstatement of fact in such written proposal & declaration shall ipso facto render this policy null & void"; & it provided that it was a condition precedent to the recovery of any sum under the policy that the conditions indorsed thereon should be strictly observed. Condition 8 provided that the policy might be renewed from year to year but only upon condition that nothing had happened to increase the risk, & if the risk was increased by (inter alia) the assured engaging in some other occupation, then "unless notice in writing of such increased risk is given to the co. . . . & any extra premium that may be required paid . . . the policy is void & no claim can be made." By condition 11, "If any question shall arise touching this policy or the liability of the co. thereunder or the extent or nature of such liability or otherwise howsoever in connection herewith then the assured & all persons claiming through the assured may refer & shall be bound, if the co. shall so require, to refer the same to arbn. by one arbitrator to be agreed on or in default of agreement by two arbitrators & their umpire under the Act of 1889 . . . & no person shall be entitled to bring or to maintain any action or proceeding on this policy except for the sum awarded under such arbn." During the currency of the policy the assured was killed by an accident. The co. denied liability on the policy on the ground that the assured either had misstated his occupation in the proposal, or, if not, had changed his occupation for one involving increased risk of which notice as required by condition 8 had not been given to the co., & contended that the policy was therefore void, & they required the dispute to be referred to arbn. under condition 11. In an action on the policy:—Held: (1) upon the co. requiring arbn. condition 11 made the obtaining of an award a condition precedent to a right of action; (2) the co. by relying on the terms of the policy which rendered it void in certain events did not thereby repudiate the policy as a binding contract between the parties, & were entitled to rely upon the arbn. clause as a defence to the action.—WOODALL v. PEARL ASSURANCE CO., [1919] 1 K. 164a. ——.]—By two contracts made in 1919, applt. bought from resps. a large quantity of "American Fresh Eggs." The contracts provided that in case of any dispute as to the quality or condition of the goods, the question should be referred to arbn., provided that, "such reference shall be claimed in writing within three days after the goods have been landed." It was also provided that the award in writing of any two arbitrators should be conclusive & binding on all parties, subject to the right of appeal. The goods arrived in England, & were not examined at the port of landing, but were sold by applt. to sub-purchasers. More than three days after the goods had been landed applt. wrote to resps. complaining that the goods were of inferior quality, & some time later he wrote a letter claiming a reference to arbn. Resps. did not then take the objection that the claim was out of time, but signed a submission to arbn. in respect of each contract. At the reference resps. took the points that applt.'s claim was out of time, & that the goods should have been examined at the port of landing. The arbitrators awarded "that the buyer was out of time in examining & making claim on the goods, & also in claiming arbn., & that therefore his case fails." 165a. Arbitrator to be appointed within limited time.]—A ship was chartered for a voyage from R. to H. with a full cargo of linseed. The charterparty provided for the reference of all disputes to the final arbitrament of two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties, with power to appoint an umpire, & the clause continued : "Any claim must be made in writing & claimants' arbitrator appointed within three months of final discharge, & where this provision is not complied with the claim shall be deemed to be waived & absolutely barred." After the arrival of the ship at H. the charterers brought an action against the shipowners in respect of damage alleged to have been occasioned to a part of the linseed during the voyage by reason of the unseaworthiness of the ship at the commencement of the voyage. The shipowners pleaded that the charterers failed to appoint their arbitrator within three months of the discharge of the ship & that by reason thereof the action was not maintainable, &, by order of the ct., the question whether the claim in the action was barred by the arbn. clause was tried as a preliminary question of law :—Held : (1) the arbn. clause was not open to objection on the ground that it ousted the jurisdiction of the ct.; (2) inasmuch as the claim in the action was founded upon a breach of the implied condition of seaworthiness, there being in the charterparty no express provision relating to unseaworthiness, the shipowners were not entitled to the benefit of the term in the clause restricting the time within which the action could be brought, & consequently the claim was not barred by the arbn. clause.—ATLANTIC SHIPPING & TRADING CO. v. DREYFUS (L.) & CO., [1922] 2 A. Pltfs. resold the copra cake to B. & Co., who resold it to dealers, & they in turn resold it to farmers, who used it for feeding cattle. The cattle fed on the cake became ill, & it was then found on analysis that the cake contained an admixture of castor beans in so large a proportion as to make it poisonous. Claims were then made by the various buyers against their sellers & by pltfs. against defts. as soon as the mischief was discovered, but this was after the expiration of fourteen days from the final discharge of the vessel. Pltfs. claimed arbn., but the arbitrator before whom the matter came held that he had no jurisdiction, as notice of arbn. was not given nor the arbitrator nominated in time. In an action by pltfs. claiming damages, it was found that it was within the contemplation of the parties that the copra cake would be used for cattle food & nothing else :—Held : the presence of the arbn. clause was not in itself a bar to the action, nor was the award, which dealt merely with the arbitrator's jurisdiction & not with the claim.—PINNOCK BROTHERS v. LEWIS & PEAT, LTD., [1923] 1 K. Before completion of discharge defts. made various payments to pltfs. on account of freight, & on final discharge pltfs. claimed that £568 was still owing for freight. Neither party referred the matter to arbn., & more than three months after final discharge pltfs. brought an action for £568 balance of freight & defts. counterclaimed £581 for short delivery :—Held : though pltfs. could not recover the £568, as the claim for it ought to have been taken to arbn., yet they could recover the £416 about which there had never been any dispute, but the counterclaim, as it was always in dispute, was barred by the arbn. clause.—BEDE STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. BUNGE Y BORN LIMITADA S.A. 294a. —— Effect of Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act, 1930 (c. 25).]—Pltf. was injured in a motor accident & recovered judgment against C. & H. for £300 damages for negligence. H. subsequently became bkpt. At the time of the accident H. was insured with deft. co. against third party risks. The policy of insurance contained the usual arbn. clause making an award a condition precedent to bringing an action on the policy. Pltf. issued a writ against deft. co. contending that under Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act, 1930 (c. 25), s. 1, & Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 36 (4), they were accountable to him for the amount of the judgment. Deft. co. thereupon took out a summons to stay the action on the ground that under the arbn. clause the obtaining of an award was a condition precedent to bringing the action. SWIFT, J., dismissed the summons & directed that the summons should be put into the New Procedure List. On appeal by deft. co. :—Held : the rights of deft. co. under the policy were not affected by either of the Acts of 1930, & deft. co. was therefore entitled to rely on the arbn. clause, which made it a condition precedent to bringing an action that an award should first be obtained.—FRESHWATER v. WESTERN AUSTRALIAN ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1933] 1 K. B., who owned a motor-car, took out a third-party insurance policy containing the clause, " In the event of any difference arising between the co. & the insured under this policy the same shall be referred to arbn.," with the addition, known as the addition in Scott v. Avery, " & the obtaining of an award shall be a condition precedent to the liability of the co. under this policy." B.'s car was involved in a collision with a motor omnibus, & pltf. who was a passenger on the omnibus, brought an action for personal injuries against B. & the omnibus proprietors. B. referred the claim to the insurance co. & they repudiated liability, & B. thereupon instituted third-party proceedings against them. On a motion by the insurance co. that the third-party proceedings should be stayed on the ground of the inclusion of the above clause in the policy, B. contended that by reason of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 38, the clause had no effect. The judge ordered a stay. On appeal :—Held : the arbn. clause, even with the addition in Scott v. Avery, was unaffected by sect. 38, & even if the addition was avoided for certain purposes by sect. 38, the addition was severable & the first part of the clause was unaffected by the sect., & the judge had rightly exercised his discretion to order a stay.—JONES v. BIRCH BROS., LTD., [1933] 2 K. The contract provided for the payment by monthly instalments on the certificate of defts.' engineer at the rate of 90 per cent. of the value of the work actually executed, the remaining 10 per cent. to be treated as a retention fund, & further provided that any question arising between the parties in connection with the contract, or as to the construction or meaning of the contract, should be referred to the decision of an engineer to be agreed upon, or, failing agreement, to be nominated by the President for the time being of the Institute of Civil Engineers, & such submission should be deemed a submission to arbn. within the Act of 1889. An originating summons having been taken out by pltfs. for the determination of the question whether upon the true construction of the contract, for the purpose of the monthly payments to be made to pltfs. thereunder, the value of the work executed was to be ascertained by adding to the prices contained in the schedules a proportionate amount of the sum therein provided for "general contingencies." defts. moved for a stay of proceedings under the summons:—Held: there was a clear & definite contract between the parties that the matter in dispute should be referred to an arbitrator as being a person who possessed the necessary technical knowledge for dealing with the subject-matter of the contract; if the ct. allowed the action to proceed evidence would be necessary in order to put the ct. in a position to determine the technical meaning of the expression "general contingencies" & a number of other expressions used in the contract; the meaning of those expressions in an engineering contract would be perfectly familiar & would present no difficulty to the engineer to whom the parties had agreed to refer the decision of their disputes; the case was not one which involved a simple question of law, & pltfs. had not discharged the onus of showing that the dispute was one which ought not to be referred to arbn., & the arbn. ought to proceed.—METROPOLITAN TUNNEL & PUBLIC WORKS v. LONDON ELECTRIC RY. The motorist issued a writ claiming (inter alia) a declaration that a binding contract of insurance existed between the insurance co. & himself on Oct. 2, 1935. The insurance co. applied for a stay of the action on the ground that the issue fell within the arbn. clause in the policy:—Held: since, if the issue were referred to arbn., a finding by the arbitrator that there was no contract in existence as at the date of the accident, would be a finding that the arbn. clause never existed & that the arbitrator never had jurisdiction to deal with the matter, the issue was a proper one to be tried in the cts.—TOLLER v. LAW ACCIDENT INSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD., [1936] 2 All E. Frustration of adventure—Charterparty containing arbitration clause.]—Resps. agreed to place their steamship at the disposal of applts. on Mar. 1, 1917, & applts. agreed to employ her on specified terms for ten months from the date when she was delivered to them. The charterparty contained a clause by which all disputes arising out of the contract were submitted to arbn. The ship was requisitioned by the Govt. before Mar. 1, 1917, & was not released until Feb. 1919. Applts. then refused to take delivery of her. An arbitrator awarded resps. damages for breach of contract, & they brought an action upon the award :—Held : there had been in 1917 a frustration of the charterparty which forthwith brought to an end the whole contract, including the submission to arbn., & the contract being executory the arbitrator had not jurisdiction.—HIRJI MULJI v. CHEONG YUE S.S. 618a. Necessity for notice to parties.]—A contract for the sale of goods was entered into "subject to the customary terms & conditions & subject to the rules & regulations of the London Metal Exchange, in so far as these rules & regulations do not conflict with the provisions of this contract." A dispute having arisen, the matter was referred to two arbitrators, who formed the view that it was necessary to appoint a third. The appointment of the third arbitrator was made without any communication to the parties, who became aware of it only upon receiving the award. The rules of the London Metal Exchange provide that arbitrators may, after giving notice of their appointment, proceed in the absence of either or both parties. The award was sought to be set aside, because no notice of the appointment of the third arbitrator was given to the parties, & it was argued against this contention that the third arbitrator was, by virtue of the Arbn. Act, 1934 (c. 14), s. 4 (1), an umpire, & there was a custom for arbitrators to appoint an umpire without any notice to the parties to the arbn. :—Held : the practice of appointing an umpire or of his acting in the arbn. without notice to the parties could not bind the parties in the present case, as it was wholly inconsistent with the rules of the London Metal Exchange.—Re ARBITRATION BETWEEN BRITISH METAL CORPN., LTD. & LUDLOW BROS. An original partner nominated by will F., a qualified person, as a new general partner. After the death of the nominator the general partners refused to admit F. into the partnership. F. made an application under Arbn. Act, 1889, s. 5, asking that some fit & proper person might be appointed to act as arbitrator :—Held : only a party to the submission could make an application under sect. 5, & F. was not a party.—Re FRANKLIN & ARBITRATION, [1929] 1 Ch. 238 ; 98 L. A contract between British shipbuilders & foreign shipowners for the building & purchase of certain ships contained a clause referring disputes & differences to the decision of a single arbitrator in accordance with the Arbn. Act. Disputes having arisen the foreign firm duly gave notice to the British shipbuilders to appoint an arbitrator, &, on their refusal to do so, applied to the ct. under sect. 5 of the Act to appoint an arbitrator :—Held : in the case of an application for arbn. by a foreigner residing out of the jurisdiction the ct. had an absolute discretion in assenting to or refusing the application, & in the former case the ct. could attach any reasonable condition, such as making an order for security for the costs of the proceedings, to the granting of the application.—Re BJORNSTAD & OUSE SHIPPING CO., [1924] 2 K. seller, & R., who, so far as appeared from the contract, were the buyers. The contract contained an arbn. clause. The goods delivered in pursuance of the contract were despatched to a foreign firm, who complained of their quality. Thereupon the foreign firm & R., who said they had merely acted as agents for that firm, claimed to have the dispute as to the quality of the goods submitted to arbn. B., while willing to go to arbn. as between himself & R., refused to assent to an arbn. to which the foreign firm were parties, maintaining that he had sold to R. as principals. R. & the foreign firm then took out a summons for the appointment of an arbitrator pursuant to the Act of 1889, s. 5:—Held: it being in dispute whether there was a submission between B. on the one hand & R. & the foreign firm on the other, there was no "matter" pending in the High Ct. as between those parties; therefore an appeal from an order for the appointment of an arbitrator was not in a matter of practice & procedure within R. 949a. ——.]—An arbitrator appointed under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908 (c. 28), for the purpose of determining claims & compensation payable in respect of (inter alia) certain fixtures, hay & straw left by the tenant on his farms, & hay & straw removed by him after the determination of the tenancy, held two sittings & then gave notice that he had been waiting to be supplied with information as to the hay & straw sold off & warned the parties that if it was not supplied promptly he would have to hold another sitting. After an interval of less than a fortnight he gave further notice that he would go to the farms on a specified date "to value the hay & straw & to receive an account of the hay & straw removed." The tenant not having such an account ready & thinking that the only question to be dealt with was a valuation of the stacks of hay & straw remaining on the farm did not attend by himself or his representative, but his foreman was present to point out & give information about the stacks on the farms. While there the arbitrator, besides valuing the stacks, questioned the foreman as to the hay & straw removed. Immediately afterwards he closed the hearing & made an award in which he dealt with the claim for hay & straw removed on the basis of the foreman's evidence, which had not been tendered by either party, & was taken in the presence only of the landlord's representative. 1036a. —— —— ——.]—A contract for the sale of sugar provided that the contract was subject to the rules of the Refined Sugar Assocn. The rules required that all members of the assocn. making contracts subject to those rules should refer any disputes arising out of such contracts, including any questions of law, to the arbn. of the council of the assocn.; & by r. 19: "Neither buyer, seller, trustee in bkpcy., nor any other person as aforesaid shall require, nor shall they apply to the ct. to require, any arbitrators to state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. any question of law arising in the reference, but such question of law shall be determined in the arbn. in manner herein directed." A dispute between the buyers & sellers was referred to the arbn. of the council. The buyers requested the arbitrators either to state their award in the form of a special case under the Act of 1889, s. 7, or alternatively to state a case for the opinion of the ct. under sect. 19 upon certain points of law arising in the reference, or to give them an opportunity of applying to the ct. for an order directing them to state a case. The arbitrators, thinking themselves precluded by r. 19, refused to comply with that request, & made their award without giving the buyers an opportunity of applying to the ct. for an order. The buyers move to set aside the award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrators in so refusing :—Held : r. 19 & the agreement embodying it were contrary to public policy & invalid, as involving an ouster of the statutory jurisdiction of the cts. under the Arbn. An arbn. took place & was divided into two parts, the first being as to whether the Govt. had committed a breach of contract. The result of this part of the arbn. was that an award was given in favour of the co. & the Govt. was ordered to pay costs. The second part of the arbn. as to the amount of damage then began, & when the evidence had been closed the Govt. asked the arbitrator to state an advisory case for the opinion of the ct., but the arbitrator refused to do so. The Govt. then issued a summons asking that the arbitrator might be ordered to state a case, & thereupon the co., applied that all further proceedings might be stayed until the Govt. (1) had paid the costs which it had been ordered to pay, & (2) had given security to answer the costs of the matter & of the arbn. :—Held : so far as concerned the summons for a case to be stated the Govt. was in the position of a pltf., & it could not rely on its foreign sovereignty, & being out of the jurisdiction must give security for the costs of the summons, but the rest of the co.'s application must stand over to be dealt with on the hearing of the summons.—DUFF DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. v. KELANTAN GOVERNMENT (1925), 41 T. If he retains jurisdiction the case is stated under sect. 19, & no appeal lies to the Ct. of Appeal from the decision of the High Ct. upon the special case; but if he makes his award finally, & retains no further jurisdiction in the reference, the case is stated under sect. 7 & an appeal lies from the decision of the ct.

By a submission contained in a charterparty disputes were referred to two arbitrators &, if they could not agree, to an umpire. The umpire stated for the opinion of the High Ct. a special case in which he set out the facts, decided that there had been a breach of the charterparty, & assessed damages for the breach. The award concluded with these words: "The question for the opinion of the ct. is whether upon the true construction of the charterparty & the facts stated by me the decisions at which I have arrived are correct in law. If they be correct my award is to stand, but if incorrect in any particulars I desire that the award may be referred back to me for reassessment of the damages due in accordance with the decision of the ct." :—Held : this was not a final award; the case was, therefore, stated under sect. 19 & no appeal lay to the Ct. of Appeal. —COGSTAD (C. 1083b. Loss of right to appeal—Acceptance of award.]—In an arbn. concerning a contract of sale of goods the umpire stated a special case in which he made three different awards, leaving the ct. to decide which was right. The judge having decided that the first award was right, applts. demanded & obtained payment of the amount of that award & gave a receipt therefor. 1139a. Reference to pleadings.]—By an agreement appcts. were to act as consulting engineers in connection with a certain coal refining process owned by resps. While the plant for the working of the process was being erected, a dispute arose, resps. wanting appcts. to attend every day at the site of the plant & appcts. considering this to be no part of their duty. Resps. thereupon terminated the agreement & the matter was referred to arbn. Appcts. pleaded that the termination of the agreement was unjustified; resps. pleaded that appcts. should have attended every day & that they had been guilty of negligence in respect of certain matters set out in the counterclaim. The arbitrator found the termination of the agreement to be unjustified & also negligence on the part of applts. in respect of the matters set out in the counterclaim, & he awarded applts. damages after setting off an unspecified amount for damages for negligence. Resps. moved to set aside the award on the ground of error of law apparent on the face of it. At the hearing resps. contended that the whole of the pleadings in the arbitration were admissible. Resps. contended that for the purpose of deciding whether there was an error of law apparent on the face of the award, the ct. could not look at any document except the award itself. Resps. further contended that the arbitrator had committed an error in law

To save their vessels from destruction by enemy submarine, the owners cut away the trawls, which were not insured, & claimed a general average contribution against the co., of which the owners were members. The rules provided that all disputes should be settled in the first instance by a general meeting of the co., or, on appeal, by two arbitrators & an umpire, none of whom should be lawyers. The general meeting having refused the claim, the owners proceeded to arbn. under a submission which provided that " all matters in difference in reference to the said claim for a general average contribution are referred," etc. The umpire by his award ignored the claim for general average. 1603b. —— Reference on question of law.]—Where a specific question of law has been submitted to an arbitrator's decision & he has decided it wrongly, that alone is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the award. Where, however, a question of law has not been specifically referred to him, but its determination becomes necessary in the decision of the matters which have been referred, & he makes a mistake apparent on the face of his award, then the award can be set aside on the ground that it contains an error of law apparent on the face of it.—ABSALOM (F. 1603c. —— ——.]—Two firms amalgamated, & by clause 15 of the Articles of Partnership: "The shares of profits payable to the said partners as hereinbefore provided shall be reviewed & if necessary revised as on Sept. 30, 1923, & again as on Sept. 30, 1926, in such manner as may be mutually agreed upon, & in case of disagreement as shall be settled by the special arbitrator hereinafter referred to." By clause 41 the special arbitrator was appointed, & by clause 42 the Articles were to be deemed a submission to arbn. under the Arbn. Act, 1889. The partners did not agree upon whether there should be a review & revision on Sept. 30, 1926, & the dispute continued till the partnership terminated by effluxion of time on Sept. 30, 1929. Provision was made in the deed of dissolution for the exchange of a statement & counter-statement of the contentions of the parties with facts & figures & full particulars, on which the contentions were based, & if the parties failed to agree within two weeks of the delivery of the counter-statement, the dispute was to be referred to the special arbitrator under clauses 15, 41 & 42 of the Articles. The statement & counter-statement raised questions of law & of fact & of mixed law & fact. The dispute was referred to the special arbitrator, before whom the parties appeared in July, 1930, when he gave directions for discovery & adjourned. The parties in Dec. 1930, agreed that certain questions of law raised by certain of the partners in their counter-statement should be decided, with the assistance of a Chancery King's Counsel sitting as assessor, at a preliminary hearing. They also agreed that "either party shall have the same right of appeal in relation to any decision of the arbitrator at the preliminary hearing as such party would have had if there had been no preliminary hearing at all, & the points of law had been argued & determined upon the same occasion as the merits of the dispute." The special arbitrator having heard the parties, stated under the order of the ct. a special case on the questions of law under sect. 19 of Arbn. Act, 1889, which came before FARWELL, J., & the arbitrator stated the conclusions of FARWELL, J., upon the face of the award:—Held: by SCRUTTON, L.J., & ROCHE, J.—LAWRENCE, L.J., dissenting—this was a case where a dispute was referred to an arbitrator in the decision of which questions of law became material & accordingly the ct. could interfere if error in law appeared on the face of the award; per LAWRENCE, L.J., dissenting: In this case specific questions of law were referred to the special arbitrator for decision, as distinct from questions of law which became material in deciding disputes which were referred to him under clause 15. They were also questions of law which could not have been decided in arbitration proceedings under clause 15 in the absence of an express agreement between the parties to that effect, & therefore they could not be termed properly questions of law incidental to the determination of a dispute which had arisen under clause 15. Accordingly, though error in law might appear on the face of the award, the ct. could not interfere; also by SCRUTTON, L.J., & ROCHE, J. (a) clause 15 of the articles was not too vague or uncertain to be enforceable in law, or to be capable of judicial meaning or construction; & (b) the question whether or not a revision was necessary was a matter within the scope of the arbn. & accordingly the special arbitrator had jurisdiction. Accordingly the special arbitrator having held the contrary under the direction of 1644a. ——.] — Though an award may be set aside for an error of law appearing on the face of it, & though a question of construction is, generally speaking, a question of law, yet, where a question of construction is the very thing referred for arbn., then the decision of the arbitrator upon that point cannot be set aside by the ct. only because the ct. would itself have come to a different conclusion. If it appears by the award that the arbitrator has proceeded illegally, for instance, that he decided on evidence which in law is not admissible or on principles of construction which the law does not countenance, then there is error in law which may be ground for setting aside the award ; but the mere dissent of the ct. from the arbitrator's conclusion on construction is not enough for that purpose.—KELANTAN GOVERNMENT v. DUFF DEVELOPMENT CO., [1923] A. 1701a. —— Liability to cross-examination.]—In June, 1913, claimants, R. & Co., effected an insurance with resps., an insurance co., whereby the insurance co. agreed that, if at any time during the period covered by the policy the premises of claimants should be destroyed by fire, & their business should be thereby interfered with or interrupted, they would pay to claimants monthly until such time as the reduction in turnover in consequence of the fire should have ceased, but not exceeding in all nine months, on account of annual net profit & charges as therein set forth, the same percentage on the amount by which the turnover in each month should in consequence of the fire be less than the turnover for the corresponding month of the year preceding the fire as the sum or sums thereby insured should bear to the total of the turnover for the last financial year. It was provided that the amount of the losses under the policy should be assessed by claimants' auditors, L. & G. A condition on the back of the policy provided for reference to arbn. of all differences arising out of the policy. The premises of claimants were destroyed by fire on July 22, 1913, a date within the period covered by the policy. G., a member of the firm of L. & G., duly assessed the amount of the loss suffered by claimants in respect of profits for the period of nine months succeeding the fire. Differences having arisen in regard to the payments under the policy, the parties went to arbn. G. was called as a witness by claimants at the arbn. proceedings, & stated that although it did not so appear on the face of the assessments he was at the time of signing the same satisfied that the losses of the turnover respectively therein stated were in fact sustained in consequence of the fire. There was no suggestion of any fraud on the part of the assessor :—Held : as G., whether regarded as an arbitrator or an assessor, had been called to give oral testimony he could be cross-examined on all relevant issues & consequently could be cross-examined to show that he had failed to take into account certain considerations necessary for arriving at the reduction in the turnover of claimants due solely to the fire.—RECHER & CO. v. NORTH BRITISH & MERCANTILE INSURANCE CO., [1915] 3 K. 1722a. —— Reference to umpire by arbitrators—Custom of the tallow trade.]—Pltfs. sold to defts. a quantity of paraffin wax under a contract providing, "any dispute arising under this contract to be settled by arbitrators in London in the usual way." The umpire awarded that defts.' claim failed & that they were to pay the costs of the arbn. The rules of the assocn. provided for an appeal to an appeal committee, & defts. claimed a right of appeal. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover the costs of the arbn., & the evidence was that in the trade in paraffin wax the usual way of settling a dispute by arbn. was to appoint arbitrators who could appoint an umpire whose decision would be final :—Held : the heading did not apply & the umpire was really appointed in pursuance of the original agreement as to arbn. & not under the rules of the assocn., & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—PALMER & CO., LTD. v. PILOT TRADING CO., LTD. The matter was referred to arbn. by resps. in accordance with conditions of sale endorsed upon the alleged contract of the Liverpool United General Produce Assocn., Ltd. The award, dated Apr. 21, 1933, adjudged the appcts. to pay £800 to resps. as damages for breach of the alleged contract. Appcts. disputed the validity of the award, alleging that the real issue in dispute was whether there was a contract between them & resps. containing the alleged submission to arbn. Appcts. now sought to set aside the award on the ground that the arbitrators had purported to find the existence of a contract containing the alleged submission to arbn., but they had no jurisdiction as no submission had been signed by appcts. :—Held : the application to set aside the award was based upon the fact that there was one, & there could only be an award if there was a submission to arbn. Appcts.' case was that there was no submission & therefore there was no jurisdiction for the ct. to set aside an award which it was denied existed. w (p. 548) i. —— ——.]—The misconduct referred to in Arbn. Act, s. 14 (2) is "legal misconduct." In determining whether there was "legal misconduct" on the part of the arbitrator which would justify the setting the award aside, the ct. may look at the evidence adduced before him, in order to ascertain whether he acted on evidence which was wholly inadmissible & which went to the root of the question before him.

While in the present case, an arbn. as to the loss suffered by the seller of goods because of their non-acceptance by the buyer, the arbitrator was held to have erred in allowing the seller to "split" his case, yet, as he had exercised a discretion in the matter & no substantial injustice was occasioned thereby, the course adopted did not invalidate the award.—Re WOOD & MALKIN CO., LTD. to an arbn. had hired of claimant, for a certain period, a number of horses which, on the outbreak of war & before the expiry of the period, were commandeered by the War Office. He then refused to pay the hire for the full period on the ground of frustration of the adventure. At the hearing of the arbn. on June 19, 1917, claimant did not press for hire after the seizure of the horses, & on July 31, 1917, the arbitrator issued his award, giving claimant the amount due up to the date of the seizure, but not afterwards. On July 10, 1917, Courts Emergency Powers Act, 1917 (c. 25), had come into operation, but there was nothing to show whether the arbitrator was or was not aware of the Act. On a motion to set aside the award on the ground of the technical misconduct of the arbitrator in not taking the statute into consideration:—Held: whether or not the arbitrator was aware of the Act, he had applied its principles, &, consequently, there was no misconduct; the parties were not taken by surprise, & the award was good.

(2) It has been contended that the fact that the arbitrator did not know or take cognisance of the Act, which was passed after the hearing of the arbn. & before the issue of the award, constituted misconduct. The greater part of the timber having been destroyed by fire, he sued the insurance cos. to recover the loss, but the actions were stayed & the matter was referred to arbn. in pursuance of the conditions contained in the policies. Claimant was the sole shareholder in the co. & was also a creditor of the co. to a large extent. The arbitrator held that claimant had no insurable interest in the goods insured & disallowed the claim:—Held: claimant having allowed the point of want of insurable interest to be raised before the arbitrator without objection, it was not open to him to call in question the authority of the arbitrator to entertain it.—MACAURA v. NORTHERN ASSURANCE CO., [1925] A. An arbn. under the contract was held in Norway & an award was issued in favour of pltfs. In an action on the award defts. submitted that the law applicable to the whole contract must be the law of England, & that, since the contract neither was a policy as required by English law nor was properly stamped as such a policy, pltfs. could not recover on the award :—Held : as the action was brought on the award, & as the proper inference from the provision as to the arbn. being held in Norway was that the parties intended the law of Norway to govern the contract, pltfs. were entitled to recover the sum awarded.—NORSKE ATLAS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. LONDON GENERAL INSURANCE CO., LTD. made in London which provided that any dispute arising during the execution of the charterparty should be settled by arbn. in Hamburg. In 1931, disputes arose between the parties which were submitted to arbn. in Hamburg, & an award made against deft. for £20,913 13*s.* 7*d.*, payment to be made in English currency. On Nov. 29, 1932, pltfs., who were a German firm, obtained ex parte an order that they should be at liberty to issue a writ against deft., who was residing in France, claiming the amount due & payable under the award, & to serve notice of the writ on deft. in France. On Jan. 5, 1933, deft. applied to have that order set aside, but the application was dismissed. On appeal:—Held: (1) the order for service out of the jurisdiction was properly made under R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 1 (e), as the action based on the award was for the enforcement of a contract made within the jurisdiction, namely, the submission to arbn. contained in the charterparty; but (2) the order could not be supported on the ground that the breach of contract was committed within the jurisdiction, as the award had not required payment in England, & the ordinary rule therefore applied that the debtor must seek out his creditors, the German firm, at their place of business & pay them there.

2580b. Power to set aside his own order.]—In an action tried by an official referee judgment was given against defts. by default. Defts. applied to the judge in chambers to set aside the judgment of the official referee & to order a new trial. The application was not made within six days after the trial before the official referee, but no objection in regard to time was taken by pltfs. before the judge in chambers. The judge referred to the official referee the application to set aside his own judgment. At the hearing of the application the official referee himself took the point that the application to set aside his judgment had not been made within six days after the trial; & he further held that, having regard to the concluding words of R. S. C., Ord. 59a, r. 3 (b), he had no jurisdiction to set aside his own judgment:—Held: (1) the objection in regard to time, not having been taken at the earliest opportunity, could not be relied upon by pltfs. on the appeal; (2) as under R. S. C., Ord. 36, r. 50, the official referee had " the same authority in the conduct of any reference or trial as a judge of the High Ct.," he had jurisdiction to set aside his own judgment, & the words " save as herein provided, no application for a new trial before a referee shall be made " at the conclusion of Ord. 59a, r. 3 (b), referred only to the procedure to be followed in appeals from referees to the Divisional Ct.—LONDON STEAMSHIP & TRADING CORPN., LTD. v. RUSSIAN VOLUNTEER FLEET (1926), 135 L. On the next day & before final entry of the completed order, the judge, upon pltf.'s application, ordered the costs to be taxed on the High Ct. scale:—Held: in the circumstances the judge had jurisdiction under County Cts. See Arbitration Clauses (Protocol) Act, 1924 (c. 39); Arbitration (Foreign Awards) Act, 1930 (c. 15); Arbitration Act, 1934 (c. 14).

2619a. Submission—What amounts to.]—By an agreement between an English co. & a Luxembourg co. it was agreed that any disputes arising from the objects thereof should be settled by arbn. Differences having arisen the English co. commenced an action in the English cts. claiming to enforce the agreement, but this action was discontinued. Correspondence ensued, in which the English co. stated that it had chosen its arbitrator & setting out the questions to be submitted, & calling upon the Luxembourg co. to name its arbitrator & state the questions it desired to be submitted to arbitration. The Luxembourg co. appointed an arbitrator & stated that it would allege that the claim of the English co. was inadmissible & then put in a counterclaim to the original action. The English co. moved to stay all proceedings in the counterclaim pursuant to Arbn. Clauses (Protocol) Act, 1924 (c. 39), s. 1, as amended by Arbn. (Foreign Awards) Act, 1930 (c. 15), s. 8, or alternatively pursuant to Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49). The Luxembourg co. opposed the motion contending that (i) there had been no "submission made in pursuance of an agreement to which the protocol applies" within sect. 1 of the Act of 1924; (ii) as certain terms as to times stated in the agreement had not been strictly complied with, the ct. was entitled to find that by effluxion of time the arbn. clause had become inoperative; (iii) as the agreement was in the nature of an appointment of an agent & the agency had been discontinued, the agreement itself had become inoperative & the arbn. clause with it; (iv) part of the counterclaim which alleged a conspiracy was outside the agreement & must be excluded from the stay; (v) as the English co., by issuing a writ, had elected to enforce its rights before an English tribunal, it could not then claim to enforce the arbn. clause; & (vi) Arbn. Act, 1934 (c. 14), s. 14, had restored the discretion of the ct. to order an arbn. agreement to cease to have effect & that this was a proper case for the ct. to exercise that discretion :—Held : (1) the naming of their respective arbitrators & the constitution of the arbn. tribunal was a "submission" in pursuance of the agreement within sect. 1 of the Act of 1924; (2) any non-compliance with the terms as to times stated in the agreement had been waived by the parties coming together & being at one as to the constitution of the arbn. tribunal; (3) until all matters in dispute under the agreement had been duly settled, the agreement was still operative, notwithstanding that the relations, which the agreement had originally brought into being, had been discontinued; (4) the claim for damages for conspiracy was not a matter to which the arbn. provisions of the agreement extended & should be excluded from any stay; (5) the Luxembourg co. by its own conduct in sharing in the constitution of the arbn. tribunal had waived any right it may have had as a result of the election by the English co.; (6) assuming that sect. 14 of the Act of 1934 applied, this was not a case in which the discretion of the ct. ought to be applied, & a stay should be ordered.—RADIO PUBLICITY (UNIVERSAL), LTD. v. COMPAGNIE LUXEMBOURGEOISE DE RADIODIFUSION, [1936] 2 All E. In Sept. 1920, pltfs. duly terminated deft.'s employment, & on leaving their service he at once commenced business on his own account as an estate agent within the prohibited area, describing himself as " C. 63a. —— —— ——.]—A freehold house was knocked down to deft. as the highest bidder, but he afterwards refused to sign the contract because one of the conditions of sale required the purchaser to pay certain road-making charges. On the same day the auctioneer, as soon as he was informed of deft.'s refusal, signed the contract as deft.'s agent. In an action by the vendor for specific performance, the judge held in the circumstances the auctioneer's signature could fairly be said to be part of the transaction of sale, & there was a memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 :—Held : an auctioneer had authority to sign a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the Act, provided he signed it at such a time & in such circumstances that the signature could fairly be said to be part of the transaction of sale, & as the question whether this condition was satisfied was a question of fact, the judge's decision that there was a valid memorandum must be affirmed.—CHANEY v. MACLOW, [1929] 1 Ch. 461 ; 98 L. 76a. —— Entry of purchaser's name—Auctioneer's name printed on catalogue.]—Pltf. bought for £60 at an auction one of the lots, which was the property of deft., who was the auctioneer. The lot was included in the printed catalogue, the whole of which was pasted into the auctioneer's book, & after the lot in question was knocked down to pltf. deft. wrote against its description in the book the price & pltf.'s trade name. Deft.'s name was nowhere written by him in the book, but his printed name appeared on the front page of the catalogue pasted in the book. Deft. refused to hand over the goods on the ground that the lot in question had been the subject of a " knock-out " to which pltf. had been a party. In an action for breach of contract deft. pleaded that there was no memorandum signed by him within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1) :—Held : (1) the existence of a " knock-out " did not afford any defence to the action ; (2) deft.'s printed name, having been authenticated by his writing down the price & the purchaser's name, was a sufficient signature, & there was a sufficient note or memorandum of the contract, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—COHEN v. ROCHE, [1927] 1 K. Part IV.—Conduct of the Sale.

—— ——.]—In a sale of certain property by auction, deft. was declared to be the highest bidder, & he subsequently signed a written contract stating that he was in fact the purchaser of the property. The sale was subject to certain special conditions, clause 1 of which stated that the property was also sold subject to the National Conditions of Sale, & by clause 2 it was stipulated that in the event of the property remaining unsold or being bought in by the vendors, the vendors should be entitled to withdraw another lot from the sale. Clause 1 of the National Conditions of Sale provided that subject (inter alia) to the vendors bidding up to a reserve price, the highest bidder should be the purchaser. In an action by pltfs. for specific performance of the agreement by deft. to purchase the property, deft. pleaded (a) that he had agreed to bid at the sale merely as a puffer or dummy bidder on behalf of the vendors, & (b) that the vendors had employed other puffers to bid on their behalf & that this employment was contrary to Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 6, & also to the conditions of sale. Deft. at the trial contended that the sale was in fact one without reserve & therefore the vendors were precluded from bidding either by themselves or an agent by reason of the provisions of sect. 5 of the Act :—Held : (1) deft. in bidding for the property was bidding for himself & not as a dummy bidder for pltfs. ; (2) the sale was subject to a reserve price ; & (3) there was no contravention of Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 6 ; (4) Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 5, does not require that the words " with reserve " or " without reserve " & no others should be used in the particulars or conditions of sale. The requirements of the section are satisfied so long as it is made plain, in whatever words may be chosen, that the sale is subject to a reserve.—HILLS & GRANT, LTD. v. HODSON, [1934] Ch. 53 ; 103 L. 155a. ——.]—A purchaser alleged by his answer to a suit for specific performance, that he acted as a puffer in bidding for one lot, & also as puffer in bidding for another lot, which was knocked down to him; & that he therefore purchased the lot, & signed the agreement for the purchase, as the agent of the vendor; but the statement in his depositions of the circumstances attending the signature was somewhat different from that in his answer, & he had signed an order on his attorney for payment of the deposit money:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence of agency, & deft. was held to have purchased on his own account.

Taking into consideration the signature by deft. of the memorandum of agreement, the contradiction between his answer & his examination, & his having given an order for the deposit in his own name, & on his own agent, it is impossible to contend that he purchased as the agent of pltf. (TURNER, V.-C.).—BENNETT v. SMITH (1852), 20 L. T. O. S. 28; 16 Jur. 421.

Part V.—Deposit.

171a. Failure to require deposit—Whether breach of contract with vendor.]—Pltfs. entrusted to defts., who were auctioneers, a suit of armour for sale by auction. One of the conditions of sale was that the buyer should pay down 10*s.* in the £ or more if required in part payment of the purchase-money, in default of which the lot might be put up again & resold. By another condition, on the failure of a buyer to comply with any of the conditions, the money deposited in part payment was to be forfeited. One B., who had previously bought for an American millionaire, bid at the auction & the armour was knocked down to him. The auctioneers did not ask B. for a deposit, as they assumed that he was acting for the millionaire for whom he had acted before. The millionaire afterwards repudiated B.'s authority, & B., when asked to take the armour, could not pay for it. Consequently the sale was not carried out. In an action by the sellers against the auctioneers for breach of contract to procure the buyer to pay the deposit:—Held: there was no negligence or breach of duty on the part of the auctioneers in exercising their judgment, in the circumstances, by not enforcing the conditions of sale as to a deposit, &, since on the evidence the armour would not have been sold if it had been put up again, there were no damages, & the action failed.—CYRIL ANRADE, LTD. v. SOTHEBY & CO. (1931), 47 T. L. R. 244; 75 Sol. Jo. 120.

191a. —— —— Order for repayment under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 49.]—Leasehold shops described in the particulars of sale as "Valuable business premises" were put up for sale by auction, subject to special conditions of sale & also to the National Conditions of Sale, by one of which, namely, the sixth, it was stipulated that the leases or copies thereof might be examined at the office of the vendors' solicitors before the sale & that the purchaser, whether or not he inspected the same, should be deemed to have bought with notice of the contents thereof. Deft. only became aware of the sale on the day when it was held &, having on that day been supplied by the auctioneers with the particulars & special conditions, but not with the National Conditions, & relying upon the truth of the description in the particulars, he bid at the sale and was declared to be the highest bidder thereat. He then signed the usual form of memorandum to the effect above stated & paid a deposit to the auctioneers. In the course of investigating the title it came to deft.'s knowledge for the first time that the leases under which the properties were held were subject to covenants which prohibited any other trade or business than that of a ladies' outfitter, fancy draper & manufacturer of ladies' clothing from being carried on upon the properties. In consequence of the existence of those restrictive covenants & the failure of pltfs. to procure their removal or the licence of the lessors to use the properties for the purposes of any business, deft. refused to complete the purchase. In an action by the vendors for specific performance in which deft. counterclaimed rescission of the contract & to recover his deposit:—Held: (1) a shop which could be used for one purpose only was not fairly described as "valuable business premises"; & (2) such a misleading representation by pltfs. in their particulars of sale disentitled them, notwithstanding the sixth condition, to the assistance of the ct. to compel deft., who purchased in reliance upon the truth of such representation, to specifically perform his part of a contract for a consideration different from that which he was led to expect. The action was dismissed; & deft. was declared to be entitled to give a valid receipt to the auctioneers for the deposit.—CHARLES HUNT, LTD. v. PALMER, [1931] 2 Ch. 287; 100 L. J. Ch. 356; 145 L. 280a. —— Option to resell on purchaser's default.]—Goods were put up for sale by auction, the conditions of sale printed on the auctioneers' catalogue providing: "The lot to be taken away & paid for the day after sale," & "upon failure of complying with the above conditions all lots uncleared within the time aforesaid shall be resold." A purchaser, through his own negligence, bid for a lot for which he had not intended to bid, & the lot was knocked down to him. He afterwards endeavoured to persuade the auctioneers to put up the lot for sale again, but they declined. Upon his refusing to pay, an action for the purchase price was brought by the auctioneers, & the purchaser contended that under the conditions of sale it was obligatory upon the auctioneers to resell the lot in question, & that he could be charged only with any deficiency upon resale :—Held : the words "all lots uncleared shall be resold" did not impose any obligation upon the auctioneers, but merely conferred upon them an option of reselling at their discretion, & the auctioneers were entitled to recover the full price at which the lot was knocked down to the purchaser.—ROBINSON, FISHER & HARDING v. BEHAR, [1927] 1 K. It was, however, knocked down to pltf., & he paid for it, but the auctioneer refused to deliver it to him. The catalogue announced the sale as being "By order of J. S. & others." The buyer brought an action for damages against the auctioneer: —Held: the various owners of the lots not being disclosed as the principals, & there being no disclaimer by the auctioneer of personal liability, the auctioneer was personally liable for non-delivery; & the fact that the buyer accidentally learned of the ownership of lot 109* was not material.—PAGE v. SULLY (1918), 63 Sol. 13a. —— —— Car park.]—The owner of a motor car left it on a private parking ground, & on payment of 1*s.* received from the attendant a ticket headed " Seaway Car Park, Car Park Ticket " & containing a receipt for 1*s.*, followed by the provision : " The proprietors do not take any responsibility for the safe custody of any cars or articles therein nor for any damage to the cars or articles however caused . . . all cars being left in all respects entirely at their owners' risk." Later when the owner returned for his car the attendant told him he had just given it to the owner's friend. The man who had so obtained the car had neither the ticket nor the key to the car, which was locked ; but he was able to get his hand through the windscreen & free the car. The car was never recovered, & the owner brought these proceedings against the proprietors of the car park for damages. The negligence of the attendant was admitted, but liability denied :—Held : (1) the relation between the proprietors & the owner of the car was that of licensors & licensee, & therefore the proprietors were under no liability whatever in regard to the car ; (2) what had been done by the attendant did not amount to a misdelivery of the car ; (3) even if the relationship between the parties was such as to constitute a contract of bailment & the act of the attendant amount to a misdelivery of the car, the conditions on the ticket relieved the proprietors of all liability ; (4) no term could be implied in the contract (if any) between the parties that the car should not be parted with without production of the ticket.—ASHBY v. TOLHURST, [1937] 2 K. If he so desired the driver could use the co.'s garage telephone, uniform & greasing & inspection services. He supplied his own petrol, but had to buy it from the co. He was to keep the cab in his own personal custody & was not to allow any other person to drive it. The cab was to be used exclusively for the carriage of passengers for hire. A right to inspect the cab was reserved to the co.'s servants. The driver agreed to pay as rent for the cab a certain sum at the conclusion of the hiring, such sum being a fixed percentage of the amount earned by him as fares during the hiring, the balance belonged to the driver. He had no specific right to a renewal of the agreement ; but each day he took out a cab a contract embodying the above provisions was executed by him :—Held : the contract was one of bailment & not partnership.—CHECKER TAXICAB CO. 30 ii. —— Delivery of mineral-water bottles—Charge for detention of empties.]—Pltfs. sold mineral-water in bottles branded with their name. The course of dealing with customers was to invoice the bottles at a deposit rate of two shillings per dozen & when bottles were returned the customers were credited in full. Where bottles were not returned the customers were debited with a charge for them, pltfs. usually accepting half the deposit rate for missing bottles where a deficiency was found to exist :—Held : the transaction was in law a bailment in which bare possession of the bottles vested in the borrower, the true ownership remaining in the lender.—CANTRELL & COCHRANE v. NEESON, [1926] N. 50a. —— ——.]—Pltf., who was a member of a residential club, of which defts. were the proprietors, gave the manager certain jewellery to lock up in a safe in the manager's office. The rules provided that "No claim in respect of any property alleged to have been left or lost in the club-house will be entertained, & neither the club nor the proprietors shall be responsible for any article of value so left or lost in the club, but small articles of value may, on application to the secretary, be deposited in the safe, but neither the club nor the proprietors shall be under any liability in respect of such deposits." The jewellery was stolen from the safe by the night porter employed by defts., who before engaging him had obtained references from two persons by whom he had been employed, but apparently had made no inquiry as to his previous career. After the theft it was discovered that he was an old & dangerous criminal :—Held : defts. had not used due care in engaging the night porter, & as the above rule did not negative defts.' liability for damage due to their neglect to take such care, they were liable for the loss.—WILLIAMS v. CURZON SYNDICATE, LTD. 192a. —— Loss of luggage left outside cloak-room.]—A condition in a railway cloak-room ticket purporting to exempt the railway co. from responsibility for articles above a specified value deposited in the cloak-room except on certain terms, & assented to by the person taking the ticket, is not prevented from being part of the contract & from protecting the co. merely because it is unreasonable, provided that it be not so extravagant as to imply, & there is no other evidence to show, that that person's assent to it has been obtained by fraud, or so irrelevant as to be foreign to the contract.

Pltf. took his bicycle to the cloak-room at a station of deft. co. for the purpose of depositing it there, paid to the official the charge demanded, & received a ticket purporting to be a cloak-room ticket upon the face of which was legibly printed the following condition: "The co. will not be in any way responsible in respect of any article deposited the value whereof exceeds £5, unless at the time of deposit the true value & nature of the article shall have been declared, & 1*d.* per £1 sterling of the declared value be paid for each day or part of a day in addition to the ordinary cloak-room charges." The value of the bicycle exceeded £5, but pltf. made no declaration of value or additional payment. The bicycle was standing at the open door of the cloak-room, but the official told pltf. to leave it there as he would put it away. When pltf. returned to claim the bicycle it could not be found. In an action by pltf. against defts. for the value of the bicycle defts. relied upon the above condition. It was found in effect that pltf. knew that there was printing on the ticket, that he believed it contained a condition, & that defts. had done sufficient to give pltf. notice of the condition; & it was not found & there was no evidence to show that pltf.'s assent to the condition had been obtained by fraud. It was further found that owing to the negligence of the official in leaving the bicycle at the door of the cloak-room it had been stolen:—Held: (1) assuming that the condition was unreasonable which, semble, it was not, defts. were not, merely on that ground, prevented from relying upon it, inasmuch as it was not so extravagant as to imply that pltf.'s assent to it had been obtained by fraud, or so irrevelant as to be foreign to the contract; (2) defts. were protected by the condition, although the bicycle had not been deposited within the cloak-room; (3) on the above facts & findings judgment should be entered

The goods, which were in several packages, were stored without a declaration of value & without any additional charge for a higher valuation. Through the negligence of defts.' servants, the goods were included in a shipment of other goods & sent to England. Some of pltf.'s goods were lost, & others damaged:—Held: the amount which pltf. was entitled to recover was limited by the clause of the warehouse contract.—MAUNSELL v. CAMPBELL SECURITY FIREPROOF STORAGE & MOVING CO., LTD., [1921] 2 W. The first condition on the back was, "The co. will use every endeavour in taking care of all goods consigned to its charge, but will not be held responsible for loss or damage to goods stored through maintaining too high or too low a temperature in the stores, failure of machinery, buildings or plant fire, or any other cause whatsoever other than theft":—Held: the contract meant that defenders promised to do their utmost to take care of the hops, but that, if their efforts were unsuccessful for any cause other than theft, they were not to be liable in damages.—BALLINGALL & SON v. DUNDEE ICE & COLD STORAGE CO. 218a. Agreement to insure chattel—Against "all risks."]—Defts. hired a crane-barge from pltfs., one of the terms of the contract being that pltfs. would insure the crane against all risks, defts. paying the premium. Pltfs. took out a policy covering, as they thought, all risks. The crane, when proceeding to lift a load, broke away from its bedplate & fell over & was damaged. It was then found that the accident was not covered by the policy, & defts. refused to pay for the damage. In an action for breach of contract:—Held: though defts. had failed to discharge the onus which was upon them, of proving that what happened was not the result of negligence by their servants, yet, as the agreement in regard to insurance was intended to be an arrangement for the benefit of both parties, & as the accident came within the description "all risks" & defts. had stipulated that they were not to bear those risks, the action failed.—BRICE & SONS v. CHRISTIANI & NIELSEN (1928), 44 T. One of the conditions provided that: "In lieu of any warranty or condition implied by law, we guarantee that the materials . . . are of the best quality," & that defts. would replace any part broken or unduly worn within 12 months. After further negotiations defts. sent to pltf. a hire-purchase agreement expressed in a covering letter to be drawn up in accordance with the terms stated in the letter above mentioned. The hire-purchase agreement provided that: "This agreement embodies the entire agreement as to the hiring of the machinery." There was in the agreement no exclusion of any warranty or condition. The hire-purchase agreement was duly entered into. The machine proved unsatisfactory & pltfs. brought an action for breach of warranty. That promissory note, which was stated in the agreement to be given & received not as payment of the monthly instalments but as collateral security for the due payment thereof, was made payable to the vendors, indorsed by them, & subsequently discounted with a banking co. The purchaser of the motor car, contrary to the terms of the agreement & during its currency, sold the motor car to a third party, from whom it was bought by deft. On a claim by the original vendors claiming damages from the deft. for conversion of the motor car:—Held: the agreement between pltfs. & the original purchaser was a hire-purchase agreement; that the promissory note was given by way of collateral security only, & not by way of payment, conditional or other; & pltfs. were therefore entitled to recover possession of the motor car.—MODERN LIGHT CARS, LTD. v. SEALS, [1934] 1 K. In the order resp. agreed to pay a deposit & the balance of the purchase money by instalments & to execute applt.'s usual form of hire-purchase agreement. On the order form it was stated that all new cars were sold subject to a guarantee which was set out, which did not include a guarantee that the car was new; & that no guarantee was given with second-hand cars. 262a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. let a piano on a hire-purchase agreement which provided that until all the instalments were paid the hirer should have no property in the goods otherwise than as hirer, & that in case of any breach of the agreement pltfs. might, without any formal notice, put an end to the hiring & retake possession of the piano, & that the hirer should keep the piano in his own custody. At a date when the hirer had paid all the instalments then due, but before he had paid the total price, he sold the piano to deft., who bonâ fide believed that the hirer was the absolute owner. The hirer having subsequently got the piano back into his own possession & having again disposed of it, but having, in the meantime, kept up the payment of the instalments, pltfs., on ascertaining the facts, claimed damages from deft. for conversion :—Held : the sale by the hirer to deft. was not ipso facto a repudiation of the hire-purchase agreement, as pltfs. had never accepted the repudiation, but it transferred whatever interest the hirer had at the time of the sale, & as pltfs. were not entitled to the possession of the piano until they elected to put an end to the agreement there was no conversion by deft.—NELSON MURDOCH & Co. v. WOOD (1921), 126 L. 268a. Ownership at time of agreement—Necessity for.]—Pltfs. were " hire-purchase dealers." Their business consisted in purchasing motor cars from the owners thereof for cash & letting them out to would-be purchasers on hire-purchase agreements. At the request of deft. pltfs. purchased a motor from K., & on Nov. 12, 1931, entered into a hire-purchase agreement in respect of that car with deft. In the hire-purchase agreement pltfs. were called " the owners " & deft. was called " the hirer." The agreement provided (inter alia) for the payment by the hirer of a deposit of £95 " in consideration of the option of purchase hereinafter contained." The usual provision was made for the payment of rent by monthly instalments, & it was agreed that if the hirer desired to terminate the hire, or if the owners terminated the hire or retook the car for non-performance of any terms of the agreement, the hirer should pay such sum as, with the deposit & instalments already paid, would make a total of £235 " by way of compensation for depreciation of the said motor." These became worn out, & B. fitted new tyres to the lorry under a hire-purchase agreement with W. Subsequently W. made default under his hiring agreement with M., who seized the lorry & refused to hand over the tyres to B. The tyres were detachable only by means of special machinery which M. did not possess :—Held : B. was entitled to possession of the tyres, & could succeed against M. in an action for detinue.—BERGOUGNAN v. BRITISH MOTORS, LTD. so. Wrongful repossession by owner—Measure of damages.]—Pltf., who was then share farming, hired from deft. a harvester with the option of purchase. When he still had to pay £83 if he wished to complete his purchase he gave up farming & went mining for gold. He left the machine with a neighbour for safe custody, & deft. wrongfully re-possessed it, & after doing some necessary repairs, resold it for £62, which was the best price possible. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to substantial damages for conversion assessed in accordance with the rules laid down in Liesbosch (Owners) v. S.S. Edison (Owners), [1933] A. C. 448 :—Held : as pltf. had abandoned farming the harvester was not a factor in his business as a going concern, & he was entitled to nominal damages only.—MIZZA v. MCKAY-MASSEY HARRIS (H. V.) the usual option to the hirer to become the purchaser of the car on completing the payment of instalments totalling with the deposit (which was to become the absolute property of the owners, & for which credit was to be given only in the event of the purchase being completed or the depreciation money becoming payable) £309 5*s.* 6*d.*, or by payment at any time after the execution of the agreement of the outstanding balance of that amount, " but unless & until such purchase has been so effected the motor shall be & remain the sole & absolute property of the owners, & the hirer a mere bailee thereof." Deft. paid the deposit of £95 to K., who gave credit for it to pltfs. against the purchase price paid by them. Deft. then made default in payment of the first instalment of rent. Pltfs. retook the car & sued deft. in the Mayor's & City of London Ct. for £100 (being the £235 depreciation money, less the £95 deposit, & £40 abandoned to bring the claim within the jurisdiction of the ct.). After action brought it was discovered that K. had no title to the car, of which he had obtained possession dishonestly. The car was claimed by the true owners, who were then bought out by pltfs. Deft. contended that it was a condition of the contract that pltfs. were the owners of the car at the date of the hire-purchase agreement, & could give deft. a valid option of purchase. That condition being broken he contended that he was under no liability to the pltfs., & he counterclaimed for the return of the deposit of £95 (which pltfs. had never actually received, since it had merely reduced the amount out of which they were swindled by K.). Judgment having been entered in the ct. below for deft. on the claim & counterclaim, pltfs. appealed:—Held: on the true construction of the agreement there was an express condition that pltfs. were the owners of the motor car & entitled to give deft. an option to purchase it; that condition was broken, & the judgment on the claim was therefore right. As to the counterclaim the deposit was expressly stated to be " in consideration of the option of purchase," which pltfs. were never in a position to give. The consideration had therefore wholly failed, & the defendant had also rightly succeeded on the counterclaim.

Qu.: whether, if the defective title of ptlfs. had not been discovered until a number of instalments of rent had been paid & deft. had had the use of the motor car for a substantial part of the contemplated period, he could have recovered the whole of the instalments paid without deduction for use & occupation.

Per GODDARD, J. Apart from the express condition in this agreement, it is an implied condition (& not merely a warranty) of any hire-purchase agreement, that the persons letting the chattel are the owners of it at the date when the agreement is entered into, & not merely that they will become the owners before the option to purchase is exercised. Moreover, the doctrine that a bailee is estopped from denying his bailor's title unless evicted by title paramount does not apply to hire-purchase, where the bailment of hire is coupled with an element of sale.—KARFLEX, LTD. v. POOLE, [1933] 2 K. Pltf. did not call for his car as soon as it was repaired & deft. put it in storage, but failed to remove the water from the radiator with the consequence that it froze & damaged the car:—Held: the above special clause in the work order exonerated deft. from liability whether pltf. had read it or not.—WALDEN v. HANEY GARAGE, LTD., [1928] 1 D. Deft. drove the car on the road to test the headlights, when a collision caused by deft.'s negligence damaged the car:—Held: the notice applied to the driving of the car during which the damage occurred, but did not amount to an unequivocal & unambiguous notification to pltf. that the car was being accepted by deft. on terms that deft. was not to be liable for the consequences of his own negligence in driving, & therefore deft. was responsible.—MORAN v. LIPSCOMBE (1929), V. The conduct of the servant is then the conduct of the master, & the master is liable to the bailor.

Pltf., a customer of deft., left his motor car at deft.'s service station to be supplied with gas & oil & washed. There were no facilities at the station for washing the car, & deft.'s servant, as was his duty, took out the car to drive it to a garage to be washed. On the way to the garage the servant changed his mind & drove the car in another direction " upon a frolic of his own." In doing so he ran the car into a telephone pole & damaged the car:—Held: deft. as master was liable in damages for the wrongful act of his servant.—VAN GEEL v. WARRINGTON, [1929] 1 D. L. these rods had a latent defect, which defts. could not by reasonable care or skill have discovered, & it broke, causing extensive damage to the engine. Pltfs. brought an action in the county ct. claiming damages from defts., but the county ct. judge gave judgment for defts. on the ground that he was not prepared to hold, in the absence of direct authority, that in a contract for work done & materials supplied there was an absolute warranty that the materials supplied were fit for the purpose. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the warranty implied in a contract for work done & materials supplied as to the fitness of the materials was not less than that implied in a contract for sale of goods—namely, an absolute warranty of fitness. But that warranty might be excluded if it appeared that the person giving the order did so in such a form as to show that he did not rely on the contractor's skill & judgment. The case must therefore go back to the county ct. judge for him to determine on the evidence whether the implied warranty was in fact excluded or not.—MYERS (G. A. died intestate, & an application was made by one of his next of kin for a declaration that the nomination was void, on the ground that there was a limit as to nominations by depositors under the special Act of the corpn. whose bank it was, & that, even though by later regulations the corpn. had purported to abandon this limitation, such a nomination was ultra vires the special Act & void:—Held: regulations as to nominations could be made by the corpn. under their special Act similar to those indicated in Savings Banks Act, 1887 (c. 40), with such modifications, including abolition of the maximum, as might be considered necessary; the limit laid down could be abolished under these regulations & such abolition need not abrogate the whole matter, & the nomination by deceased was good.—Re KIMBER, VALE v. ROCKMAN, [1928] Ch. 749; 97 L. 276a. —— —— —— At branch where account kept.]—In the absence of special agreement, it is an implied term of the contract between a bank & its customer that the promise of the bank to repay a balance is a promise to repay it at the branch of the bank where the account is kept & not till after demand at that branch. The obligation of the bank is local, although after local demand & refusal to pay the bank is liable to be sued wherever it can be served. When local demand must be met by payment in a foreign currency the remedy available in an English ct. for refusal to pay is a cause of action in damages for breach of contract & not for debt.—RICHARDSON v. RICHARDSON, [1927] P. 228 ; 96 L. 282a. Account opened in assumed name—Payment in of cheque obtained by duress—Payment out on forged cheques—Action by party whose name assumed.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft. bank for £125,000, money had & received by defts. to his use. Pltf.'s case was that an account was opened in his name at a branch of deft. bank by some one other than himself, that a cheque for £150,000 payable to his order was paid into the account, & that on the following day a forged cheque, purporting to be drawn by pltf., for £130,000 was cashed by one H., the balance being afterwards withdrawn by H., by means of other forged cheques. Defts. alleged that the cheque for £150,000 was obtained by a blackmailing conspiracy from one A., who was discovered by one N. with pltf.'s wife in compromising circumstances, & that the proceeds were shared between the conspirators, whom defts. alleged to include, among others, pltf., pltf.'s wife, & H. & N. Pltf. & his wife denied that they took part in any conspiracy, & pltf. said that, when he heard of the relations between his wife & A., he instructed H., who represented himself to be a solr., to take divorce proceedings, & that, when the sum of £25,000 was handed to him by H., he, pltf., passed the amount on to his wife & said that he would have nothing more to do with her, & that he learned later that A. had paid £150,000. It was to recover the difference between these two amounts that the action was brought. The jury found that there was a conspiracy to get money from A. by catching him with pltf.'s wife, but that pltf. & his wife were not parties to the conspiracy, that A. was induced to part with the money through fear, & that his parting with it was not free & voluntary :—Held : pltf. never got the property in the cheque for £150,000 & could not sue in conversion, & he had no right to sue in contract because the dealings with deft. bank were not on his behalf, & therefore he had no title to the cheque, & the action failed.—ROBINSON v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD. —— Effect of mere book entries.] — In dealings between banker & customer, where it is sought to treat a mere book entry as a payment, some other circumstances must be present & relied upon to enable the customer in whose favour it is made to succeed, either some express previous authority to pay, or a communication of the making of the entry to the customer & an acting upon it by him ; there must be, in effect, both a payment by one party & a receipt by the other, or an alteration in the position of the customer in whose favour the book entry was made.—BRITISH & NORTH EUROPEAN BANK, LTD. v. ZALZSTEIN, [1927] 2 K. 298a. Remittance sent abroad on request—Obligation of bank.]—Pltfs., customers of defts., bankers in London, instructed them to transmit money to a person in Rumania, & defts. sent a cheque by registered post to him personally. The cheque never reached him, but someone apparently put on it a forged indorsement of his name, & it was eventually cleared through a bank in Poland, & defts. debited pltfs. with the amount. In an action for negligence pltfs. alleged that defts. should have sent the cheque by a letter which was insured in addition to being registered :—Held : as the loss of a cheque was a rare occurrence, & as the standard of defts.' duty should not be measured by a consideration of all the precautions which subsequent events might suggest, the action failed.—OSE GESELLSCHAFT, ETC. v. JEWISH COLONIAL TRUST (1927), 43 T. On hearing from the Basle bank defts. credited the money to the Petrograd bank in their books on account of pltf., & they notified the Petrograd bank, but their communication was returned & there was no evidence that it was ever received by the Petrograd bank. About 1930 pltf. became aware that the money was still with defts. & he claimed a declaration that they held it as trustees for him :—Held : the only party who were defts.' customers were the Swiss bank, & as there was no contract between pltf. & defts. the action failed.—ASCHKENASY v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD. Money received from a client, to be applied in payment of rent & costs payable by the client to a third party, was paid into that account, & a cheque was duly drawn by pltf. on that account, & sent to the solr. acting for the third party. Before that cheque was presented a garnishee order nisi was served on the bank in respect of debts owing or accruing due from the bank to pltf. When the cheque was presented the bank marked it " Refer to drawer," & returned it unpaid :—Held : (1) money standing to the credit of the client account was a debt owing from the bank to pltf., in whose name the account was opened, & the garnishee order nisi bound that debt in the hands of the bank. Pension paid to bank on forged certificate given to bank.]—G., a retired officer in the colonial customs service & in receipt of a pension, from 1916 to 1926 collected his pension from deft. bank, with which he had an account, coming to the bank in person. In 1926 G. changed his place of residence & thereafter collected his pension by post through deft. bank by means of receipt forms sent direct to him by pltfs. The receipt form included a certificate that the pensioner was still alive. G. died in 1929 & from then up to 1935, when his widow died, the pension was collected by means of forged receipt forms, the certificates being duly filled up by an alleged medical practitioner. The certificate might be signed by the bank or by a person of certain named categories including medical practitioners. Pltfs., the Crown agents for the Colonies, then sued to recover from deft. bank the amount so paid since 1929 :—Held : the certificate not being signed by the bank it did not amount to a warranty by the bank that G. was still alive, & the bank was, in the circumstances, entitled to rely upon the certificate as being true. 387a. —— —— ——.]—For some years before 1919 one U., a merchant, had a banking account at defts.' bank. In that year he converted himself into a limited co., all the shares being allotted to himself except one, which was held by his wife. A debenture in the form of a floating charge over the assets of the co. was issued to a creditor of U. as a security for his debt. The arts. of assocn. of the co. incorporated Table A. by par. 71 of which the business of the co. is to be managed by the directors. By the arts. U. was appointed sole director. After the formation of the co. U. kept on his private banking account with defts. as before, they having notice that his business had been transferred to the co. The co. had a separate account, which was kept at another bank, but defts. had no knowledge of that fact. U., as sole director, became possessed of a number of cheques, some crossed & others uncrossed, drawn in favour of the co. He indorsed them "A.L.U., Ltd.—A.L.U. sole director," & paid them into his own account with defts. instead of paying them in to the co.'s account with the other bank. Defts., without inquiring whether the co. had a separate banking account, collected the cheques & credited U. with the proceeds, which he misappropriated. When doing so they treated him as being identical with the co., as he owned all the shares, & overlooked the materiality of the cheques being drawn in the co.'s favour & not in his. In an action brought by the co. on behalf of the debenture-holder for conversion of the cheques :—Held : (1) defts. were precluded from setting up that U., when paying the cheques in to his own account, was acting within the scope of his apparent authority as agent of the co., upon two grounds : first, that the act of an agent paying his principal's cheques into his own account was so unusual as to put them on inquiry, that they ought to have inquired whether the co. had a separate banking account, &, if it had, why the cheques were not paid in to that account, & that their failure to make that inquiry amounted to negligence ; &, secondly, that U. when paying in the cheques did not purport to act as the co.'s agent, but as being himself the co., & that defts. so treated him ; (2) with respect to the cheques which were crossed the omission to inquire about the co.'s banking account disentitled defts. as collecting bankers to the protection afforded by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, (c. 61), s. 82.

A customer of a bank paid into his account some cheques to which he had no title. Immediately on his so paying them in the bank credited him with the amounts of the cheques in their ledger, but there was no agreement between the bank and him that he should be allowed to draw against the cheques before they were cleared, nor did he in fact draw against them until after the bank had received the proceeds :—Held : (3) apart from any question whether the bank had notice of any defect in the customer's title, they were not holders in due course, there being no evidence that they took the cheques for value. The mere fact that bankers credit a customer with the amounts of cheques before they are cleared does not make them holders for value ; in order to entitle them to that character there must have been an agreement, express or implied, that the customer should be allowed to draw against the cheques before clearance, & that agreement must have been acted upon. —UNDERWOOD (A. 391a. —— —— Cheques drawn by wife on bank manager's advice—Title of wife to balance.] —A husband, in 1908 transferred the money standing to a current account at his bank in his own name into the joint names of himself & his wife. He did not inform his wife of the joint account, & always drew cheques on the account himself. He died in Nov. 1919. The wife never drew any cheque on the account until shortly before his death, when he was in failing health & unable to attend to business. The bank manager then informed her of the joint account, & advised her to draw a cheque, which she did. The husband had also from time to time made deposits in the joint names of himself & his wife, & in Aug. 1919, consolidated them into one deposit in the joint names. The wife never knew of this deposit until after her husband's death. There was then found among his papers an envelope indorsed with the wife's initials & containing the deposit receipt & a document in which he said: "I would like this paying away at once if possible as under," with a list of names with amounts against them:—Held: the money standing to the credit of both the current account & the deposit account belonged to the wife as survivor, & the document did not raise any presumption that the husband regarded the deposit as his own property.—Re HARRISON, DAY v. HARRISON (1920), 90 L. 403a. Loss of right to repayment—Laches.]—In May, 1866, one F. deposited £6,000 with a Birmingham branch of deft. bank, upon the terms that he could withdraw the money at any time on giving fourteen days' notice, & that interest should be paid on it at the rate of 6 per cent. for the first three months, & thereafter at the current bank rate for the time being. In Aug. 1866, the bank repaid £2,500 of the £6,000 with interest due to that date, & a note of the payment was indorsed on the deposit receipt. In Nov. 1866, a further indorsement was made showing that all interest then due had been paid, but after that date there was no record of any further payment by the bank of either principal or interest & no record of any demand by F. for payment. F. died in 1893. In 1927 a relative of F. discovered the deposit receipt amongst some old papers, & sent it to the surviving exor. & trustee of F.'s will. He gave deft. bank formal notice to pay the £3,500, balance of the principal £6,000, together with interest, in fourteen days. The bank refused to pay, on the ground that it must be presumed that the deposit must have been repaid long ago. The exor. then brought this action to enforce payment, & the bank pleaded presumption of payment; & although they refused to plead Stat. Limitations, they claimed relief on the ground that F. & his representatives had been guilty of laches:—Held: although defts. could not produce evidence of repayment, the proper inference from all the circumstances was that that money must have been repaid, & the action therefore failed. Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879 (c. 11), s. 3, makes an entry in bankers' books primâ facie evidence of an account.

Assignment by order in writing to bank to pay third party sum on deposit—Unindorsed deposit receipt—Letter to assignee.]—About a year before his death, which happened in 1917, testator handed to his landlady, G., an envelope addressed to her describing it as a present to her. She was about to open it, when he took it from her hand & said he would keep it for her & locked it up in his despatch box. After testator's death there was found in his despatch box an envelope containing: (1) A deposit receipt for £500 deposited with his bank in 1914; (2) an order in writing signed by testator directing the bank to pay to G. the sum of £500 then on deposit; & (3) a letter addressed to G.: "You have been very kind to me & I desire to make some return by giving you the amount £500 now on deposit at the . . . bank as per receipt enclosed." The deposit receipt was not indorsed by testator & no notice was given to the bank of any assignment till after his death, the interest on the sum on deposit having been carried by the bank to his current account:—Held: there was a valid & complete gift to G. of the sum on deposit by way of assignment under Jud. By means of an elaborate fraud defts. were induced by an unauthorised person to print from the plates a large quantity of notes & to deliver the notes to him, & the result was that these notes were put into circulation. In consequence of the fraud pltfs. honoured a large number of the spurious notes, & on learning the facts they found it necessary to withdraw all the genuine notes of the same issue from circulation as they had, at that time, no means of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious notes. In an action for breach of contract, negligence, or conversion :—Held : it was an implied term of the contract that there was to be no use of the plates for any purpose not authorised by pltfs., & there was an absolute duty on defts. not to print or deliver notes of pltf. bank without the authority of the bank, &, even if defts. were bound only to take reasonable care to avoid such acts, defts. had, on the facts, fallen short of the standard of care required by the special nature of the business, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. 456b. —— —— Measure of damages.]—A firm of printers employed by the Bank of Portugal to print a series of bank notes known as Vasco da Gama 500 escudo notes delivered to the Bank 600,000 notes which were put into circulation in Portugal. Subsequently, in breach of their contract of employment, the printers delivered to one M., the head of a band of criminals, 580,000 notes of the same type, printed from the original plates or from plates made from the same die, in the belief that he had the authority of the bank. M. & his associates introduced these false notes into Portugal & put a large number of them into circulation. The bank on discovering that unauthorised notes were in circulation issued notices withdrawing the whole of this issue of Vasco da Gama notes & undertaking, within a limited time, to exchange all notes of this type presented to the bank for other notes. The bank had an exclusive license to issue bank notes as legal tender in Portugal, but the amount of the notes to be issued was controlled by law. At all material times the currency was inconvertible. In an action by the bank against the printers for breach of contract defts. maintained (a) that the loss suffered by the bank was due to their own voluntary action in paying the unauthorised notes ; (b) that the loss to the bank was limited to the cost of printing & paper in regard to the new issue :—Held : (1) the loss arose naturally from the breach of contract ; (2) the proper measure of damages was the exchange value expressed in sterling of the genuine currency given in exchange for the spurious notes together with the cost of printing the genuine notes withdrawn.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. v. BANCO DE PORTUGAL, [1932] A. 479a. Cheque credited before clearance—Whether bank holders for value—Bank stopping payment before final clearance.]—(1) Where a customer pays a crossed cheque into his bank, the question whether the bank receive it as holders for value or as agents for collection is a pure question of fact. The fact that the cheque is immediately credited in the ledger does not necessarily make the bank holders for value. That inference may be rebutted by notices in the pass-book & paying-in slip or other evidence showing that the customer could not draw before clearance.

(2) If the bank receive the cheque as agents for collection & stop payment before it is finally cleared at the clearing house, they can only receive & hold the proceeds as collecting agents for their customer, & not on the ordinary bank relationship of debtor & creditor. Consequently, in a winding up following on the stoppage the liquidator must pay the full proceeds of a cheque cleared after the stoppage to the customer, although it was cleared shortly before the actual winding up.—Re FARROW'S BANK, LTD., [1923] 1 Ch. 41 ; 92 L. A. had current & deposit accounts at the bank, but her money on current account was not sufficient to meet the cheque without resort to the money on deposit. It had been the practice of the bank to allow A. to overdraw her current account so long as the overdraft was covered by her money on deposit. The bank refused payment of the cheque, not because of the state of A.'s current account, but because they doubted A.'s signature on the cheque. A. died before anything further was done :—Held : in the circumstances there had not been any appropriation or dedication of the money in the bank, or any constructive payment of the cheque; & there had been an incomplete gift inter vivos of the amount of the cheque, which gift would not be perfected by the assistance of equity.—Re SWINBURNE, SUTTON v. FEATHERLEY, [1926] Ch. 38; 95 L. 544a. —— —— ——.]—A bye-law of applt. co. authorised its secretary-treasurer jointly with any director to sign cheques drawn upon its bank account. A series of cheques payable to one of the directors were fraudulently signed by the director jointly with the secretary-treasurer, & after indorsement were placed by resp. bank to the credit of an account which the director had with them. Resps. collected the cheques from applts.' bank in the usual course of business. In order that there should be to the credit of applts.' account sufficient to meet each of the cheques, the director in each case fraudulently drew a cheque upon one of various other accounts upon which he had authority to draw, & paid it into applts.' account. Applts. sued resps. to recover the aggregate amount of the cheques collected by them :—Held : the action failed, because (1) resps. had not knowledge, either by the form of the cheques collected or otherwise, that they were improperly drawn on applts.' account, & could not recover the money as having been held by their bankers in trust for them, & (2) applts. had suffered no loss, & the ct. could not investigate applts.' liability to persons not parties to the action in respect of the cheques placed to applts.' credit.—CORPORATION AGENCIES v. HOME BANK OF CANADA, [1927] A. 545a. Transfer to own account by agent—In breach of power of attorney—Liability of bank.]—Resp., a widow, who had a deposit account with applt. bank, desired that A., a close friend of resp. & her husband, should attend to the investment of her money, & with the sole object of making arrangement for such investment at a higher rate of interest than the ordinary bank rate on deposits, she executed a power of attorney in A.'s favour on June 24, 1929, using a printed form in very wide terms supplied by applt. bank. At that time resp. had $13,081 credited to her account. A. also had had for a considerable time an account in the same branch of the bank which had generally showed a debit balance; & at the date of the execution of the power of attorney his debit balance exceeded $8,000. On June 29, 1929, A., purporting to act under the power of attorney, transferred from resp.'s account to his own account $8,500, which, together with a small sum of his own, was sufficient to discharge the whole of his debt to applt. bank. The assistant manager of the bank took from A. a promissory note payable to resp. on demand with interest at 7 per cent. per annum, but did not ask on her behalf for security, although applts. had had a mtge. as security for their debt, nor did they communicate in any way with resp. or her solr. In 1931 resp. took a promissory note from A.

546b. Issue of bank drafts to customer's agent—Agent without proper authority—Negligence.] —A co. instructed its bankers in writing that any two of four named persons, of whom three were directors & the fourth was an accountant in the co.'s employment, had authority to draw cheques & sign orders for payments on its behalf. The co. from time to time required drafts payable in New York to remit to creditors there. The course of business was that the accountant attended at the bank with a cheque, duly signed by two of the named persons, payable to the bankers' order for the sum for which the draft was required, but without any further document or written instructions ; having filled up a requisition note giving particulars of the draft required, including the name of the payee, he was handed a draft in accordance with those particulars. In Jan. 1922, it was first discovered that on 41 out of 106 occasions upon which drafts had been so purchased since Nov. 1918, the accountant, having entered his own name in the requisition note, had obtained drafts payable to himself, & had misappropriated the proceeds, covering his fraud by false entries in the company's books. The resps. having paid the co. under a policy guaranteeing the fidelity of the accountant, sued the bankers (applts.) in respect of the loss after the date of the policy : —Held : the bankers had acted negligently in issuing the drafts without authority in accordance with the company's instructions, & were liable in damages in respect thereof ; the frequent repetition of the same irregular procedure afforded no defence either by way of estoppel, ratification or otherwise.—BANK OF MONTREAL v. DOMINION GRESHAM GUARANTEE & CASUALTY CO., LTD., [1930] A. A. drew a cheque in favour of B. upon the Bank C., D. branch, & B. indorsed it for collection in favour of L., who received payment from the P. branch of the bank, which sent the cheque on to the D. branch. The latter dishonoured the cheque, whereon the P. branch gave notice of dishonour & instituted a suit against B. & L. for the recovery of the sum paid. The defence was (inter alia) that the cheque having been discharged by payment there was no power left in the P. branch to give notice of dishonour :—Held : the payment by the P. branch did not operate as a discharge of the cheque, the payment having been made not on the credit of A. but on the credit of B. &, therefore, pltf. was entitled to recover the sum from defts. —RAJA JOYTI PRASAD SINGH DES BAHADUR v. CHOTA NAGPUR BANKING ASSOCN. of collection through the clearing house, presented the bill for payment over the counter to deft. bank & received the money, which he then fraudulently converted & stole. Pltfs. sued defts. to recover the amount of the bill on the grounds of negligence, money had & received, & conversion of the bill. Evidence was given at the trial that there is an almost universal custom at Liverpool that trade bills should be presented through the clearing house for payment to the bank at which they were accepted payable, but evidence was also given that presentation of such bills over the counter, though most unusual, was not irregular :—Held : deft. bank were not liable to pltfs. (1) on the ground of negligence, because no privity of contract existed between defts. & pltfs., & defts. owed no duty to pltfs. ; (2) on the ground of money had & received, because the drawing of the bill did not amount to an assignment in favour of the payee of funds of the drawee, as the acceptors had no funds to meet the bill, which was paid out of a loan by defts., & the advice to pay the bill sent by the acceptors to defts. gave no rights to pltfs. as against defts. ; (3) defts. were not liable to pltfs. for the conversion of the bill, because the bill was a negotiable instrument, & they paid it in good faith without notice of any defect in title & in accordance with the law merchant. A bank was not bound to make inquiries merely because a bill indorsed in blank or an open cheque was presented for payment over the counter. 634a. —— —— Customer silent—Estoppel.]—Pltf. had an account with deft. bank, & his wife forged his signature on cheques & thereby drew out all the money left in the account, & she lent it to her sister. Pltf., on discovering the facts, did not at once inform the bank, but about nine months later, when his wife told him that she wanted more money for her sister, he stated his intention of going to the bank, & that night his wife committed suicide. Pltf. then went to the bank & told the manager about the forged cheques. In an action by pltf., claiming to be credited by deft. bank with the amount of the forged cheques, the bank pleaded (a) adoption & ratification, & (b) that pltf. was estopped by his silence from alleging that the signatures were forgeries. The tribunal of first instance found that the forged cheques were honoured through the carelessness of the bank officials. There was no evidence that pltf. had ever adopted the forged cheques as his own :—Held : ratification had no applicability to a forged signature, but pltf. was estopped from alleging the forgeries because his silence until after his wife's death had caused the bank to lose their right of action against the forger, & therefore the action failed.—GREENWOOD v. MARTINS BANK, LTD., [1933] A. 639a. Payment to third party without valuable consideration—Right of bank to recover.]—Deft. H. having possessed himself of crossed cheques which were drawn on pltf. bank in his favour & which purported to be drawn by his employer's authority defrauded his employer by paying them into a bank, which collected them & credited H. with the amounts. H. drew out these amounts & paid some of the money without valuable consideration to deft. S., who in turn paid into her account with deft. bank a portion of what she so received. S. had no notice of any defect in H.'s title, & she never paid into her account with deft. bank any money except money which was part of the proceeds of H.'s frauds. In an action for a declaration that the money standing to the credit of S. with deft. bank was the property of pltf. bank :—Held : on the assumption that H. obtained a voidable title to the proceeds of the cheques, yet pltf. bank had established their right to the money claimed, as it was capable of being traced.—BANQUE BELGE POUR L'ETRANGER v. HAMBROUCK, [1921] 1 K. 647a. Alteration of payee.]—Pltfs., exors. of one T., deceased, employed a solr., one C., of a firm C. & P. to act for them in matters relating to deceased's estate. They wished to invest a sum of £5,000 through a firm of stockbrokers, & C. accordingly prepared a cheque for that amount payable to the stockbrokers ; pltfs. then signed the cheque & handed it back to C. to deal with as directed. C., however, fraudulently added to the cheque the words "per C. & P.," & then indorsed the cheque with the words "C. & P." & handed it to a branch of deft. bank to be credited to the account which a co. in which he was interested kept at that branch. The cheque was credited to that co. & was passed through the clearing house, & in due course pltfs. were debited by their own bank with the sum of £5,000. On discovering the fraud pltfs. brought this action to recover the £5,000 from defts. :—Held : the words added by C. to the cheque constituted a material alteration & rendered the cheque void under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 64 (1). As therefore the cheque when it came into the hands of defts. was merely a piece of worthless paper no action could be brought on it, & pltfs.' claim failed. If, however, the cheque remained a valid one defts. had dealt with it without negligence & were protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & for that reason also the claim failed.—SLINGSBY v. WESTMINSTER BANK, LTD. M., instead of doing so, paid the cheques with forged indorsements into his own account with deft. bank which credited him with the amounts & obtained payment from the South African bank. The cheques were signed by two directors, including M., of pltf. co. M. applied the money received from the cheques with the exception of about £272 for W., paying out of the proceeds of five cheques " to order " for £62 10*s.* each four sums of £60 from his private account to W. One cheque, dated May 27, 1918, for £97 10*s.*, which was payable to " self or order " & signed by M. & a co-director, was refused by the bank, & came back to them after such refusal with M.'s name written in after the word " self," but the alteration was not initialed by both directors, & the addition was in M.'s writing. Pltf. co. repudiated the transactions & sued the bank for damages for conversion of the cheques, or alternatively for money had & received. 680b. Payment in ordinary course of business—Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60—Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59), s. 19.]—Pltfs., as managers of a convalescent home, kept an account with deft. bank. Pltfs. employed a secretary of the committee which managed the home, who kept his personal account with deft. bank. By a series of frauds, the secretary misappropriated cheques amounting to over £4,000, which were the property of pltfs. & which he contrived to have placed to his account with deft. bank in the following manner. The cheques, which were crossed, were all properly signed by pltfs.' proper officers, & in most cases were drawn to people who had supplied goods to the home, in which cases the secretary forged an indorsement, or procured a forged indorsement of the payee, & paid the cheques into deft. bank, asking the bank to credit his account with the amount of the cheques. In other cases, the secretary procured cheques to be drawn in payment of forged invoices in favour of fictitious persons, & in these cases the indorsements were similarly forged, & the amounts of the cheques credited to the secretary's account. In an action for conversion, deft. bank pleaded: (i.) that the payees were non-existent persons, & that the secretary was the bearer of the cheques; (ii.) that it had paid the cheques in good faith in the ordinary course of business, & was protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), & Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59); & (iii.) that the cheques were crossed, & that it received payment thereof for a customer in good faith, & without negligence:—Held: (1) (MACKINNON, L.J., dissenting) as a receiving bank deft. bank had been guilty of conversion, &, as it had been found by the judge to have acted negligently, it was not protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82. Deft. bank was therefore liable to pltfs. for the amount of the cheques converted during the six years prior to the action; (2) each transaction was a separate one, & the bank was not entitled to plead that, as the system had been going on for some time, the cheques received during the six years prior to the action had been received without negligence on the part of the bank; (3) (MACKINNON, L.J., making no reference to this point) Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59), s. 19, is impliedly repealed by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60; (4) per SLESSER & MACKINNON, L.JJ.: a bank can act negligently, & yet be acting in the ordinary course of business; (5) per GREER, L.J.: Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60, protects a bank only when that bank is merely a paying bank, & is not a bank which receives the cheque for collection. Per SLESSER, L.J.: deft. bank as paying bank was to be deemed to have paid the cheque in the ordinary course of business, & was protected by sect. 60.—CARPENTERS CO. v. BRITISH MUTUAL BANKING CO., LTD., [1937] 3 All E. 687a. —— —— ——.]—L., who was the chief accountant at the Bombay branch of pltf. bank, & was authorised to sign cheques on their behalf, had by a system of fraud procured the signature by another official of the branch of cheques payable to deft. bank. Those cheques were then sent to deft. bank for collection, with instructions written by L. on the bank's letter paper requesting deft. bank to place the proceeds of the cheques to the credit of a joint account which L. had opened at deft. bank in the name of himself & his wife. Those instructions having been carried out, the proceeds of the cheques were then collected by L. promptly after they had been paid in. It appeared from the account itself that it was generally in small credit until the arrival of each fraudulent cheque, & there was a failure on the part of deft. bank to make inquiries of pltf. bank as to the regularity of the transactions:—Held: (1) each cheque taken by itself was "issued," being signed & dealt with by persons having ostensible authority to sign & issue it, but the accompanying instructions, signed by L. alone, gave notice of irregularity which destroyed the "holding in due course"; (2) deft. bank were not entitled to rely on Indian Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 131. as their title as holders was defective through notice, so that they were not "true owners" within the sect.; (3) deft. bank had failed to discharge the burden of showing that they had collected without negligence. Examination of L.'s account should have put them on inquiry as to the source from which these payments were made, & pltfs. were entitled to succeed in their claim for conversion; (4) defts. could not set off the amount of the cheques repaid to pltfs. against the amount of the converted cheques.—LLOYDS BANK v. CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA & CHINA, [1929] 1 K. 687b. —— —— ——.]—One T., a solr., had from a client a power of attorney entitling T. to draw cheques on the client's banking account & to apply the moneys for the purposes of his client. T. for his own purposes fraudulently drew 15 cheques on his client's account with the B. bank, signing the cheques by using a rubber stamp which had on the upper line the name of the client & on the lower line "his attorney" & by placing his own signature between the lines. T. then paid the cheques into his own account with the M. bank, defts., with whom he had an overdraft. On discovering the facts the client brought an action against defts. for damages for conversion of the cheques, & defts. relied on Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, alleging that the cheques were crossed cheques & that they had received payment of them in good faith & without negligence. During the proceedings T.'s client died, & the proceedings were continued by the client's exors. as pltfs. It was admitted that defts. had acted in good faith:—Held: except in the case of two of the cheques defts. in presenting & receiving payment for the cheques, had converted them, & as defts. had from the form of the cheques notice as to the money not being T.'s money, they were negligent in making no inquiry as to T.'s authority to make these payments into his own account, 691a. —— —— Cheque payable to & indorsed by public official.]—A banker to whom a private customer hands, for collection on his account, a cheque payable to & indorsed by a public official is put upon inquiry whether the customer is entitled to the cheque, & acts negligently if he credits the customer with the proceeds of the cheque without having made any such inquiry.

The Overseas Military Forces of Canada engaged in the European war had an estates office in England authorised by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to perform in accordance with statutory conditions the duties of collecting & distributing the estates of members of these forces dying in Europe. A sergeant employed at the office misappropriated during a period of ten months thirty-two cheques of the aggregate value of about £3,900, representing money belonging to the estates of deceased soldiers. Each of the cheques was drawn payable to "The Officer in Charge, Estates Office, Canadian Overseas Military Forces," & was indorsed generally by that officer under the same description with a view to its being sent to the Paymaster-General of these forces for payment of the amount to the beneficiaries, or in some cases directly to the beneficiary, & each cheque was crossed generally. The sergeant paid the first two cheques into a branch of defts.' bank at which he had a small private account of his own & the rest of them into another branch of the bank which passed them on to the former branch. No inquiry was made at either branch whether he was entitled to the cheques, & at the former branch they were credited to his account & payment of them was received for him. In an action by the Paymaster-General against defts. for damages for conversion of the cheques:—Held: the fact that the cheques were drawn payable to & indorsed by a public official should have put the cashiers of defts. upon inquiry whether their private customer was entitled to the cheques; in crediting the cheques to him without any inquiry the cashiers of both the branches had been guilty of negligence; & therefore defts. were not protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, from liability to pltf.—ROSS v. LONDON COUNTY, WESTMINSTER & PARR'S BANK, [1919] 1 K. 691 i. What is negligence—Defective title of customer—Collection for stranger.] —A man unknown to a banker was permitted to open an account with the bank by paying in a deposit of £5 in notes & four crossed cheques for collection, such cheques being made payable to a number or bearer & marked "bank," or "not negotiable," or "bank not negotiable." Without making any inquiry as to the man's title to the cheques the bank collected them. On the following day the man, by an open cheque, drew out almost the whole of the amount to the credit of his account, & paid in for collection four other crossed cheques, including one drawn by pltf. payable to a number or bearer to which the man who paid it in had no title. These four cheques were collected by the bank almost without inquiry:—Held: the circumstances in which the account was opened was such as to put the bank upon inquiry; the duty of inquiry extended to the transactions of the next day & in the absence of reasonable inquiry the bank was guilty of negligence.—LONDON BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. KENDALL (1920), 28 C. 691 iii. —— ——.]—Pltf.'s manager, S., had general authority to draw cheques on pltf.'s account. S. drew & signed a cheque on pltf.'s account for £250 odd in favour of "A. or bearer"; the amount, date & payee's name was also in the handwriting of S. The cheque was crossed generally "Not negotiable." The cheque was on one of pltf.'s cheque forms. This cheque was paid by S. into his account with deft. bank a few hours after it appeared to have been signed. The teller on S. handing in the cheque, asked S. which his title was & received an assurance from S. that "it was all right." S. was well known & of good repute in the district, & had had an account with deft. bank for some time, & during the previous six months several cheques in his favour signed by him, drawn on pltf.'s account, had been paid in & not been queried. Over a year later S. drew & signed a further cheque on one of pltf.'s forms on pltf.'s account for £358 odd in favour of "V. or bearer." The cheque & transaction were similar to the other cheque except that the date, name of payee & payee & amount were not in S.'s handwriting. A similar query was made by the teller, & answered in much the same way. In the interval five directors' cheques signed by S. had been paid in payable to himself or bearer. Other than the inquiry made by the teller of S. no inquiries were made by the deft. The cheques were in fact drawn by S. without authority & the proceeds were misappropriated by him. In an action for damages for conversion:—Held: there was a conversion in each case. Also, as the bank had not acted without negligence, it was not protected by sect. 88 of Bills of Exchange Act, 1909.—BENNETT & FISHER, LTD. v. COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD., [1930] S. A. S. 691 iv. ——.]—Where a banker claims the protection of sect. 88 (1) of Bills of Exchange Act, 1909–1912, the test of negligence is whether the transaction of paying in the cheque, coupled with the circumstances antecedent & present, was so out of the ordinary course that it ought to have aroused doubts in the banker's mind & caused him to make inquiry.—ENGLISH, SCOTTISH & AUSTRALIAN BANK, LTD. v. BEATTY, [1931] S. cheque was duly received at pltfs.' office & B., a director, signed a receipt form on the back of the cheque as follows: "L. & M. Shipbuilding Co. T. B. director." Another director of pltfs., J., then indorsed the cheque to the order of another co. of which B. was a director, B. & Co. Ltd. The cheque was then indorsed by B. "for & on behalf of B. & Co. T. B. director," & was paid into the account of B. & Co. at a branch of defts.; & subsequently by arrangement between defts. & himself B. drew £2,000 out of the £8,000 thus credited to B. & Co. Ltd. for his own private purposes. J. had no right to indorse the cheque to the order of B. & Co., & B. & Co. had no right to the proceeds of the cheque. In 1923 pltfs. went into liquidation, & the liquidator on examining the accounts found that the cheque for £8,000 had been misapplied, & also that other sums were owing by B. to pltfs. The liquidator thereupon proceeded by a misfeasance summons against J. & B., & upon that summons an order was made for £450 against J. & £10,450 against B. The money was not paid, & pltfs. brought an action against defts. for conversion of the £8,000 cheque:—Held: there was clear evidence of negligence on the part of defts., & Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, gave no defence to the claim.—LONDON & MONTROSE SHIPBUILDING & REPAIRING CO., LTD. v. BARCLAYS BANK (1926), 31 Com. 691d. —— —— Dividend warrant for War Loan.] —The first pltf., who was an executrix & a beneficiary under a will, received from the Bank of England a warrant for interest on War Loan, the warrant being crossed "& Co. Not negotiable" & being expressed to be "A/c Harry Turner, deceased." She signed the warrant & sent it to the exor.'s solr. in pursuance of an arrangement that any warrants received by her should be sent to him for attention. The solr. paid the warrant into his own account with deft. bank, representing to the bank that it was a repayment of a loan which he said he had made to the first pltf. In an action against the bank to recover the amount:—Held: (1) although the drawer of the warrant was an official of the Bank of England on which it was drawn, yet, as he was acting as an agent of the Government, the warrant constituted a "cheque"; (2) the word "dividends" in Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 95, included interest on Government stock, & (3) as defts. had not been guilty of any negligence they were, on both grounds, protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & the action failed.—SLINGSBY v. WESTMINSTER BANK, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 691e. —— —— Sufficiency of inquiries—Breach of regulations.]—T., a motor trader in Bristol, had an account with deft. bank. He induced pltfs., a hire-purchase finance firm, to make out a cheque to W. & Co. for £189 5*s.*, which cheque was crossed & marked not negotiable in print. T., having forged the indorsement of W. & Co. upon it, then added his own indorsement to it & paid it into his own account. The cashier asked T., if he had obtained the cheque from W. & Co., to which question he replied in the affirmative. The cashier then inspected T.'s account & saw there were considerable dealings between him & W. & Co. T. then volunteered the information that he had bought a car from W. & Co., & sold it to a customer of his, & mentioned a cheque for £484 10*s.* which had passed through his account in favour of W. & Co., & led the cashier to believe that a hire-purchase arrangement had been entered into with pltfs. in respect of a car bought from W. & Co. & sold to one of his customers. Deft. bank's regulations require such a cheque to be dealt with by the branch manager, & not by the cashier. The cheque was not brought to the branch manager's notice, nor did the cashier by inquiry discover, as the fact was, that many cheques drawn by T. on his account had been dishonoured, or honoured only after repeated presentation. The bank made no inquiry of W. & Co. respecting the cheque. Pltfs. sued the bank for the conversion of the cheque:—Held: (1) a breach of the bank's own regulations was not conclusive proof that the cashier made insufficient inquiry, nor is a customer entitled to require literal performance of such regulations; (2) the past banking history of T. was such that the bank should have made further inquiry, possibly by reference to the drawer or the payee of the cheque.—MOTOR TRADERS GUARANTEE CORPN., LTD. v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD., [1937] 4 All E. 692b. —— Question of fact.] — The question whether a banker in receiving payment of a cheque for a customer has acted without negligence, so as to be protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, if the customer has no title thereto, is a question of fact. Where there was a missing link in the chain of identification of the customer:—Held: that fact ought to have put the bank upon inquiry, & the bank was not protected by the sect.—HAMPSTEAD GUARDIANS v. BARCLAYS BANK, LTD. 692d. —— Failure to require particulars of cheques paid in.]—It was the practice of bankers having a head office in London & various branch offices in London & elsewhere to accept at their head office cheques for the credit of an account at any one of their branch offices & to accept at any one of their branch offices cheques for the credit of an account at any other branch office. A firm of London stockbrokers were in the habit of signing crossed cheques which were intended to be applied in payment of jobbers' accounts, & which in accordance with a rule of the London Stock Exchange were crossed & made payable to bearer. They had in their employment two clerks, P. & S. P. had an account at one country branch of the bank. The wife of S. had an account at another country branch. The manager of country branch No. 1 knew that P. was a stockbroker's clerk, but did not know & did not ask the name of his employers. The manager of country branch No. 2 knew nothing of S. Both P. & Mrs. S. had, when opening their accounts, given references which appeared satisfactory to the respective branch managers. P. stole many of the cheques signed as above, & handed them in at one or other of the bankers' London branches, making out paying-in slips which represented that the cheques were paid in by the payees & directed payment to be made to the credit of P.'s account at country branch No. 1. S. also stole many of the cheques & handed them in at the bankers' head office, making out paying-in slips directing payment to be made to the account of Mrs. S. at country branch No. 2. The stolen cheques were in each case received by the London office & sent to the Clearing House. The paying-in slips were sent to the country branch, no mention being made of the names of the drawers. The amounts of the cheques were without question credited as directed by the paying-in slips. Written rules formulated by the bankers for the direction of their managers provided, among other things, that no new current account should be opened without knowledge of, or full inquiry into, the circumstances & character of the customer; there was also a rule, not written but generally recognised, that banks do not take payments in, without inquiry, of cheques drawn by a firm in favour of a third party & paid in by a person, other than the payee, who is or ought to be known to be an employee of the drawing firm. The stockbrokers sued the bankers for conversion of the stolen cheques. The bankers pleaded Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & alleged that they had in good faith & without negligence received payment of the cheques for their customers P. & Mrs. S.:—Held: (1) the practice of the bankers was defective in that the branch which received the cheques in the first instance never informed the crediting branch of the names of the drawers of the cheques; (2) the managers of the crediting branches had omitted to make sufficient inquiries when accepting P. & Mrs. S. as customers; in these circumstances the bankers had failed to prove that they had acted without negligence, & consequently that they were liable; (3) Semble, by Ct. of Appeal, neither P. nor Mrs. S. was a "customer" within the true meaning of sect. 82, inasmuch as neither had an account at the City offices into which the cheques were paid. —LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. SAVORY (E. 756a. Credit conditional on tender of approved insurance policy—What is approved insurance policy.]—Bankers issued a letter of credit to English sellers of 100 tons of steel plates to Dutch buyers. By the terms of the letter of credit the bankers agreed to honour the sellers' draft for the amount of the purchase-money, which included freight & insurance to R., provided the draft were accompanied by an approved insurance policy covering the shipment of the goods. The sellers presented their draft accompanied by a certificate of insurance which did not contain & did not offer any means of ascertaining the full terms of the insurance. In an action by the sellers against the bankers for not honouring the draft :—Held : the certificate was not an "approved insurance policy" within the meaning of the letter of credit, & the bankers were justified in refusing to honour the draft. 756b. Irrevocable letter of credit—Payment for goods—Refusal of bank to pay invoices—Liability of bank to seller.]—Pltfs. entered into a contract with buyers in C. to manufacture & ship machinery by instalments over several months at agreed prices, but subject to a stipulation that should the cost of labour or wages increase, there should be a corresponding increase in the purchase price. The buyers were also to open a "confirmed irrevocable credit" in favour of pltfs. with a bank in this country, & to pay for each shipment as it took place. In pursuance of this arrangement defts., who were the buyers' bankers in L., wrote to pltfs. stating that they would pay bills drawn on the buyers to the extent of £70,000, the bills to be accompanied by documents & to be received before Apr. 14, 1921, "this to be considered a confirmed irrevocable credit." Pltfs. shipped two instalments under the contract & received payment under the letter of credit. The buyers then found that the invoices included an increase in the purchase price on account of wages & material, & instructed defts. only to pay so much of the next invoices as represented the original prices. Defts. accordingly refused to pay the bill presented on the next shipment & pltfs. then cancelled the contract, claiming damages from defts. as on a repudiation by the buyers :—Held : the credit being irrevocable, the refusal of defts. to take & pay for the particular bills on presentation of the proper documents constituted a repudiation of the contract as a whole, & pltfs. were entitled to damages so reckoned. The basis of this form of banking facility is that the buyer is taken, as between himself & the banker, to accept the seller's invoices as correct. Any adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller & not by way of retention by the buyer.—URQUHART LINDSAY & CO. v. EASTERN BANK, LTD., [1922] 1 K. B. 318; 91 L. J. K. B. 274; 126 L. 756c. Revocable letter of credit—Duty of bank to give notice of withdrawal.]—A firm in W., who wished to buy a quantity of asbestos sheets from pltfs., a firm in L., instructed defts. to open a credit in favour of pltfs. Defts. accordingly wrote a letter dated June 14, 1920, to pltfs. informing them of their instructions & adding that their letter "is merely an advice of the opening of the above-mentioned credit, & is not a confirmation of the same." On July 20, 1920, pltfs. shipped part of the goods to the buyers & were paid the agreed price by defts. on presentation of the stipulated documents which included bills of lading & a draft on defts. On Aug. 4, 1920, defts. were instructed by cable that the credit was withdrawn. On Sept. 30, 1920, pltfs., not having had notice of the withdrawal of the credit, shipped the balance of the goods to the buyers, but defts. refused payment of a draft for the price. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for recovery of the balance of the credit, alleging (inter alia) that it was the duty of defts. to give to pltfs. reasonable notice that the credit had been withdrawn. There was evidence that it was the practice of defts. at once to inform persons to whom revocable credit was given of the withdrawal of the credit, but that in this instance, owing to pressure of business, they had forgotten to do so. Among the documents tendered to defts. on the application for payment on the second occasion was a bill of lading which defts. alleged was out of order, but which, according to pltfs., was in exactly the same terms as the former bill of lading accepted by defts. without objection :—Held : (1) a letter in the form of that written by defts. on June 14, 1920, intimated to the person in whose favour the credit was opened that he might find that the credit was revoked at any time; (2) there was no legal obligation on defts. to give notice of the revocation of the credit; (3) the giving of notice was an act of courtesy which it was very desirable should be performed, but it was not founded upon any legal obligation.—CAPE ASBESTOS CO., LTD. v. LLOYDS BANK, LTD., [1921] W. 803a. —— ——.]—Three shareholders in a shipbuilding co., which was heavily indebted to a bank, agreed to purchase certain shares in a steel co. which belonged to the shipbuilding co. & were held by the bank as security. The price of the shares was £69,750, & the bank agreed to advance £39,750, "on joint loan" to the three purchasers, the balance being provided by them in equal portions. The shares were thereafter to be held by the bank in security of the sum advanced. The purchasers paid for the shares by granting their individual cheques to the sellers for £10,000 each, & by drawing joint cheques, signed by them all. on the bank for the £39,750 advanced. The bank paid this amount to the sellers, & opened a joint overdraft account in name of the three purchasers. The purchasers were not customers of the bank. The value of the shares having fallen, the bank intimated to one of the three purchasers that it held him liable for the whole amount of the loan. He thereupon brought an action concluding for declarator that he was liable only for one-third of the amount of the loan, & that, on payment thereof, he was entitled to receive a transfer of one-third of the shares held in security by the bank :—Held : (1) the pursuer was liable for one-third only, in respect (a) that the purchasers were not jointly & severally liable, as drawers of the joint cheques, to the bank as a holder in due course, seeing that the cheques had been paid by the bank as drawee & were thus no longer subsisting documents of debt; & (b) that the loan was constituted by the agreement to advance it which imposed only a joint liability, & not by the cheques which were merely part of the machinery for carrying out the transaction; but (2) the pursuer was not entitled to receive a transfer of one-third of the shares, in respect that the bank, under the arrangement for the pledge of the shares, was entitled to treat the whole of the shares deposited as being security for the whole of the amount advanced.—COATS v. UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND, LTD., [1929] S. 818a. —— Capitalisation of unpaid interest on advance.]—To secure a co.'s indebtedness to a bank, resps. from time to time gave guarantees to the bank. From 1920 onwards the co. was indebted to the bank continuously, & the interest on the amount owing from time to time was debited half-yearly to the co.'s account. On Nov. 17, 1926, when the co. had become completely insolvent, resps. satisfied the whole indebtedness to the bank by means of a loan from the bank to resps. personally. The agreement was not registered under Conditional Sales Act. Security on the timber cut by the purchasers & remaining on the timber berths was given under sect. 88 of the Bank Act by the purchaser to the applt. bank. The purchaser became bkpt., the cut timber was taken possession of by its trustee, & sold under an order of the ct. & the proceeds thereof were claimed by the bank & also by the vendors, to whom a balance was owing under the agreement. The bank had had no notice of the vendors' claim & had not inquired as to the purchaser's title, but all parties had acted in good faith :—Held : at the time of the assignment to the bank the purchaser was the "owner" of the timber within sect. 88 & had possession thereof within the meaning of that word in Sched. 921a. —— —— ——.]—Defts. acted as bankers for a firm up to Feb. 3, 1914, when the firm being insolvent by deed assigned all their property to pltf. as trustee for their creditors. The deed provided that payments to the creditors should be made upon the basis of a bkpcy. distribution of the property & that secured creditors should have the same rights as under a bkpcy. At the date of the deed the firm had £2,934 to the credit of their current account in deft. bank, & the bank held certain shares as security for an advance to the firm. These shares were subsequently sold by the bank & realised £812 in excess of the amount of the advance to the firm. Before Feb. 3, 1914, the firm had discounted with the bank a number of bills of exchange, which matured after that date, & in respect thereof the firm became the debtors of the bank to the amount of £19,941. In an action by pltf. as trustee under the deed to recover from the bank the two sums of £2,934 & £812, the bank claimed a lien on those sums & also to set off a sufficient portion of £19,941 against those sums:—Held: the bank's claim was right on both points.—BAKER v. LLOYDS BANK, [1920] 2 K. In 1913, the bank, without notice to the guarantors but with the assent of the debtor, increased the rate of interest upon the advances to 8 per cent., though, by Bank Act (R. S. Can. c. 29), s. 91, it was illegal for a bank to charge more than 7 per cent. Subsequently one of the signatories died, & his exors. gave notice purporting to terminate the liability of the estate of the deceased under the guarantee:—Held: (1) the guarantee remained in force against all the guarantors until each & all of them or their respective exors. or administrators gave notice to determine it; (2) the increase in the rate of interest did not discharge the

Pltf. was a customer of deft. bank. A cheque was drawn by another customer of defts. in favour of pltf., who instead of paying it in to his own account indorsed it to a third person who had an account at another bank. On the return of the cheque to defts. their manager inquired of the last-named bank who the person was to whom it had been paid, & was told it was a bookmaker. That information defts. disclosed to third persons: —Held: that disclosure constituted a breach of defts.' duty to pltf., for though the information was acquired not through pltf.'s account but through that of the drawer of the cheque, it was acquired by defts. during the currency of pltf.'s account &

173a. —— Position of.]—A barrister practising in Bristol & a barrister practising in London, or, rather one having chambers in both places, is not practising separate professions ; he is still a practising barrister. The profession of a practising barrister is that of a barrister practising in the courts of Great Britain, & wherever he is called upon to go, there he acts as a practising barrister. I think it is quite impossible to regard a change of chambers from one town to another as a relevant fact. Now, as to the fact of the barrister becoming a King's Counsel, I do not think the matter can be dealt with by construing the King's patent, or by considering it in a technical manner, but by regarding what, de facto, is the state of affairs which arises when a barrister becomes a King's Counsel. No doubt at one time he was considered to hold an office ; he was paid a salary & could not appear against the Crown without a licence. What happens now is that the Sovereign confers a titular rank which is recognised in the cts. by giving the holder precedence, a seat within the Bar, & by entitling him to wear a silk gown. On the other hand, by the practice of the profession, he abstains from doing certain classes of work which he did before appointment. But he is still acting in the same way as before, practising the art of advocacy. All he does is to limit the part he takes therein, but he carries on the work of advocacy still, though in a higher degree. I do not think that there can be any distinction between the different cases where junior barristers become King's Counsel ; the position involved is quite simple & all must come under the same head. Both the junior barrister & the King's Counsel carry on the same profession, but the latter occupy a higher rank or degree within it (ROWLATT, J.).—SELDON (F. E.) v. CROOM-JOHNSON ; SELDON (F. 220a. —— Of junior counsel—Proportionate to fee of leader.]—A junior counsel is entitled to be allowed two-thirds of the fee allowed to his leader & the taxing master has no power to direct that the amount of the fee of junior counsel on the hearing before the master in chambers should be deducted from the amount of the fee allowed on the adjourned hearing before the judge in ct., on the ground that the brief was practically the same on each occasion.—Re PARK, BOTT v. CHESTER (1921), 66 Sol. June 1, 1928, the procedure by which an advocate can be called upon to answer for misconduct is governed by Bar Councils Act, 1926, ss. 10 et seq. To proceed under sect. 10, the High Ct. is required, by sub-sect. (2) of that sect., if it does not summarily reject the complaint, either to refer the case for inquiry to the Bar Council, or, after consultation with the Bar Council, to refer it to the ct. of a District judge. Similar powers of reference are given where the ct., instead of acting on a complaint, acts on its own motion. 356a. Whether binding at second trial.]—A man was employed by a railway co. to sweep their yard & goods warehouse. Several lines of rails ran through the yard, & it was his duty to sweep between the lines, but to stand clear of them when trucks were being run over them. On June 10, 1918, a ca[illegible] man in the employ of defts. gave notice to the man that he was going to run trucks into the yard, which notice the man acknowledged. The first truck was sent in, & the capstan man stated that he saw the man apply the brake to it, which was not a part of his duty, & then leave the yard. A second truck was then sent down on another line, & shortly afterwards the man was found sitting on the ground, having sustained injuries from which he died. Upon a claim by his widow for compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), an admission was made by counsel at the trial that "deceased was crushed between two waggons & sustained abdominal injury from which he died." A new trial having been ordered:—Held: the above admission was not to be binding at the second trial.—DAWSON v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. CO. (1919), 88 L. J. K. B. 1177; 121 L. T. 263; 12 B. W. C. sc. Child of Chinese resident in Straits Settlements & " t 'sip."]—According to the Chinese law of marriage, which is applied in Penang in the case of Chinese residents, a Chinaman may have secondary wives (sometimes called " t 'sips ") who have the status of wives & whose children are legitimate. Although some sort of ceremony is usual when a " t 'sip " is taken, proof of the performance of a ceremony is not essential to establish the relationship. Deceased resp. for twenty-six years lived & was maintained in the house of a Chinese merchant in Penang, & bore him children. One child who survived the father was referred to in his will as " my daughter," & her name appeared upon his tombstone. The resp. had been recognised by the Chinaman & by his primary wife as occupying in his household the position of a secondary wife :—Held : deceased resp. was a secondary wife, whether or not the performance of a ceremony was proved, & under the practice in Penang (which was not questioned in the appeal) she was entitled, upon the death of the Chinaman partially intestate, to share as a widow.—CHEANG THYE PHIN v. TAN AH LOY, [1920] A. se. ——.]—The Chinese custom of legitimation of a natural son by subsequent recognition is not part of the law of the Straits Settlements in relation to Chinese people there domiciled ; nor does recognition as a son raise a presumption that the son's mother was a " t 'sip," or secondary wife. The modifications of the law of England which obtain in the Colony in its application to the various alien races established there arise from the necessity of preventing the injustice or oppression which otherwise would ensue. It is from that necessity that the status of " t 'sips," & consequently the legitimacy of their offspring, have been recognised ; but there are no grounds which would justify treating an illegitimate natural son as legitimated by the mere fact of subsequent recognition.—KHOO HOOI LEONG v. KHOO CHONG YEOK, [1930] A. sf. Child of Mahomedan & his servant —Acknowledgment of child by father as his son.]—The son of a Mahomedan by a female servant in his house claimed a declaration of his legitimacy. The parents had continuously cohabited for many years, & the father on several occasions had acknowledged plff. as his son. There was some evidence of a nikah marriage :—Held : evidence that other members of the father's class had illegitimate children by servants was inadmissible to rebut the presumption of legitimacy arising from the acknowledgments, & though the fact that the mother unlike the father's other wives was not parda-nishin was one to be considered, it was insufficient to interfere with the presumption of law or the balance of proof of the fact of legitimacy.—MOHABBAT ALI KHAN v. MAHOMED IBRAHIM KHAN (1929), 56 L. R. Ind. App. 201.—IND.

22d. —— ——.]—If a husband & wife are not living together but are living separate & apart under a separation deed, the presumption of the legitimacy of children of a married woman born while the marriage is still continuing is not thereby rendered inapplicable. If therefore the wife gives birth to children while the separation continues, these children will primâ facie be legitimate. To rebut the presumption of legitimacy, proof of absence of sexual intercourse between the husband & wife at the material time must be conclusive.

A husband & wife having entered into a separation deed, agreed to live separate & apart. They separated, & at all material times lived apart on terms of estrangement & hostility. Some time after the deed of separation had been entered into & while so living apart, the wife, who was then living with E. H., gave birth to a child. This child was registered as the child of E. H. & the wife. There was no evidence that the husband knew of the existence of this child but it was proved that he was never asked to provide for it or acknowledge it in any way. Some years afterwards another child was born while the wife was living with A. A. & was registered as the child of A. A. & the wife. A question having arisen whether these children might be entitled under the terms of a gift in a will for the children of the husband & the wife on their attaining twenty-one or in the case of daughters on marriage, an originating summons was taken out for the purpose (inter alia) of determining this question:—Held: both children were according to the evidence illegitimate & not entitled to the gifts in question.—Re BROMAGE, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. CUTHBERT, [1935] Ch. 605; 104 L. The proof of adultery submitted to the Bench was the husband's evidence of the birth to his wife on Oct. 27, 1931, of a child of which he could not be the father by reason of his non-access. The magistrates refused to admit the evidence, on the ground that they were debarred from so doing by the decision in Russell v. Russell, No. 70a, & declined to vary the order. The husband appealed :—Held : the magistrates' view that the husband must be presumed to be the father of the child born in Oct. 1931, was wrong. The separation order had the force of a judicial separation, & therefore there was no presumption of law that appct. was the father of the child. The magistrates had been in error in excluding the evidence of non-access. The appeal succeeded, & the order would be set aside so far as the allowance to the wife was concerned.—STEWART v. STEWART (1932), 146 L. T. 407 ; 96 J. P. 94 ; 76 Sol. Jo. 96 ; 30 L. G. 79b. Statement in will—By father.]—A testator & his wife were married in 1847. M. H. was born in 1850, & in the birth certificate the parents were given as testator & his wife. Upon the death of M. H., the legacy duty for which the present trustee of a resettlement of the funds subject to the trusts of testator's will became chargeable would be 1 per cent. if M. H. were the legitimate daughter of testator & 10 per cent. if she were a stranger in blood. The Inland Revenue contended that M. H. was not legitimate & sought to prove this by the evidence of : (i.) testator's will in which he always referred to M. H. as his "daughter or reputed daughter," (ii.) the acts & statements of the exors. of testator's will who had, on the death of testator, paid legacy duty on the bequests to M. H. on the footing that she was a stranger in blood, & (iii.) an affidavit sworn by a grandson of testator as to the reputation in the family with regard to the legitimacy of M. H. :—Held : (1) the statements in testator's will were not excluded by the rule in Russell v. Russell, that rule being limited to evidence of non-intercourse between spouses; (2) upon a consideration of the evidence, the primâ facie presumption of legitimacy arising from the birth certificate was displaced & the illegitimacy of M. H. was established. Legacy duty was therefore payable at the rate of 10 per cent.—Re HAMER'S ESTATE, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. A.-G., [1937] 1 All E. R. 130; 53 T. L. R. 275; 81 Sol. Jo. 99.

Hearsay evidence—Admissibility.] —The rule in pedigree cases that declarations of deceased relatives made ante litem motam are admissible in evidence extends to proceedings under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60). The declarations are admissible in the latter class of proceedings in spite of the fact that the legal relationship of the declarant to the party sought to be legitimated is incidentally part of the subject-matter for decision. Although the party sought to be legitimated is filius nullius until decree & therefore before decree can have no relations, the result of excluding the declarations would be to take away by a rule of evidence the benefit that the statute intended to confer upon persons whose birth has been originally illegitimate apart from the operation of the statute.

The true construction to be placed upon the limitation ante litem motam in cases of legitimation is not a reference to the commencement of proceedings under the statute but the origination of controversy in the family in which legitimation is sought sufficient to create bias in the minds of its members at the moment of their declarations which are subsequently put forward as evidence.—Re DAVY, [1935] P. 1 ; sub nom. DAVY v. A.-G., 103 L. 142a. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60)—Parent married to third party when petitioner born—Petitioner with foreign domicile.]—Though the Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), does not in general permit the legitimation of a person born before the marriage of his parents if either parent was married to a third person when the illegitimate person was born, this restriction does not apply when the person seeking to be declared legitimate is domiciled abroad, & when by the law of the domicile he would be legitimated per subsequens matrimonium. In this case the infant petitioner & his father, a British subject, were domiciled in Germany. When the petitioner was born there was a subsisting marriage between his father & a woman not the petitioner's mother. The father was divorced in Germany, & married the mother of his son. By German law petitioner was thereby legitimated :—Held : under the joint operation of Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), ss. 2, 8, the infant petitioner was entitled to a declaration of legitimacy.—COLLINS v. A.-G. The man was granted in May, 1929, a decree of nullity of the 1909 union on the ground of the woman's incapacity. He married the mother of his child in Nov. 1929, after the decree of nullity had been made absolute. On a petition for a declaration of legitimacy on behalf of the child it was held that, as the retrospective effect of the decree of nullity was to declare that there had been no marriage in 1909 at all, the man was in fact free to marry when the child was born in Apr. 1929, & the child was entitled under the Legitimacy Act, 1926, to the declaration sought.—NEWBOULD v. A.-G., [1931] P. 75 ; 100 L. 152a. On exercise of power of appointment.]—For the purpose of the exercise of a power of appointment a child which is legitimate by the lex domicilii will be treated as legitimate by the English Cts.

Under an English marriage settlement of 1893, funds were settled on trust for J., the husband, who was the settlor, his wife F., & the issue of the marriage, but in the event of a future marriage the husband had power to appoint part of the funds to the children of that marriage. There were issue of the first marriage, two children. About 1909 J. separated from F., who lived in Switzerland with her two children until her death in 1918. J. had acquired a German domicil before 1911, & his first marriage was dissolved in June, 1911, by a ct. in Germany having jurisdiction, the decree nisi being made absolute on July 27, 1911. On Apr. 20, 1912, J. married his second wife A., with whom he had cohabited since 1909. M., their acknowledged daughter, had been born on Jan. 30, 1911, at Zurich, & by German law the marriage gave her the status of legitimacy. By deed poll, dated June 13, 1913, J. purported to revoke the trusts relating to a portion of the trust funds under the marriage settlement of 1893, & appointed the income of that portion after his death to A., & after her death he appointed the capital to M. J. died in 1929 :—Held : (1) the lex domicilii,

M. claimed to be one of the lawful next-of-kin of her father's sister, who died intestate on Aug. 9, 1930, & whose estate was the subject of administration proceedings in the Irish Free State :—Held : M.'s claim was good ; the question of legitimacy was one of status, & status depended on the law of domicile, & M. was legitimate in England on Aug. 9, 1930, & she was also legitimate in the Irish Free State, her legitimacy not being dependent on the Legitimacy Act, 1931 (No. 13 of 1931) of the Irish Free State.—Re HAGERBAUM, [1933] I. The will of her grandfather who died in 1922, after a life interest to her father, gave certain funds to be shared between the "children" of her father who should survive that father. The father died in 1928. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), she was entitled to take as a "child" in respect of any "disposition" coming into operation on or after Jan. 1, 1927. On the one hand it was contended that the will was the "disposition," & as this came into operation in 1922 she could not take; &, on the other hand, it was contended that the bequest was the "disposition," &, as this was contingent, it did not come into operation until 1928 upon the happening of the contingency:—Held: the "disposition" was the will & such legitimated person did not take under the gift to "children."—Re HEPWORTH, RASTALL v. HEPWORTH, [1936] Ch. 750; [1936] 2 All E. 226a. —— ——.]—In determining the question of the custody of an illegitimate child, too young to have any views of its own, where the character of the mother is not attacked, it is the duty of the ct. to give effect to the wishes of the mother with regard to the religion & education of her child, because, according to the whole tenor of the authorities, unless the character of the mother is such that her wishes with regard to those matters may be disregarded, the mother has a legal right to require that her child shall be brought up in her religion in which the child has been baptised. So far as religious education is concerned, the authorities require the ct. to give the gravest consideration to the wishes of the parents ; in the case of an illegitimate child, of the mother. —Re CARROLL (J. st. Application for preliminary expenses—Proof of pregnancy—Sufficiency.]—On the hearing of an application for preliminary expenses under Child Welfare Act, 1923, the only evidence to prove that the woman was quick with child was a medical certificate which was in the following terms : "I have this day examined W. & find that she is pregnant. I estimate the period of gestation as about 4½ to 5 months" :—Held : this did not amount to proof that she was quick with child as required by Child Welfare Act, 1923, s. 70, & the magistrate had no jurisdiction to make an order.—Ex p. FAHEY (1929), 29 S. 278a. —— ——.]—(1) A woman who was with child went to stay at the house of her sister, who lived in a different petty sessional division from that in which the woman usually resided. The woman went home to be confined, & fourteen days after the birth of her child she went back to her sister & stayed with her for a month. Eight days after the commencement of this visit the woman applied to a justice of the peace acting for the petty sessional division of the place where her sister resided for a summons against the man alleged by her to be the father of her child:—Held: the woman resided in that petty sessional division within 1872 Act, s. 3, so as to give the justices of that petty sessional division jurisdiction to make an affiliation order against the putative father, as that sect. did not require that the application should be made to a justice of the peace acting for the petty sessional division of the place where the woman usually or permanently resided.

(2) Where an affiliation order has been made which is not appealed against, or where there has been an appeal to quarter sessions against the order & the appeal has been dismissed, & subsequently an application is made to justices to enforce the order by the issue of a distress warrant, the justices have no jurisdiction to enter into any inquiry as to the validity of the original order.—R. v. LANCASHIRE JJ., Ex p. TYRER, [1925] 1 K. On the morning of the birth when resp. was in labour, applt., who had no other female servant, lit a fire for her & took her some tea & brandy. He also sent for the doctor. After the birth he allowed her & the child to remain for five weeks & two days, until June 17, in his house. There was no evidence whether she was sufficiently recovered to have left at an earlier date. Applt. admitted that during those five weeks & two days he never asked resp. who was the father of her child. Resp. in her evidence said that during that time, though she did not fix the date except that it was before June 16, she asked applt. what he was going to do about the child, & he said that there was nothing for him to do but to pay. After resp. had left his house she wrote him a letter charging him with being the father of the child, & asking him if he meant to pay for its maintenance. The father, having sought to suspend the charge & warrant, the mother contended that his offer of maintenance should not be entertained, in respect that, under the decree for aliment which was still current, his obligation could only be discharged by money payments:—Held: (1) a father's option at common law to maintain his illegitimate child in his home, if a boy after the age of seven, & if a girl after the age of ten, was not excluded by the fact that at the date of such an offer of maintenance a decree against him for aliment was still current; (2) in view of the bonâ fide offer of maintenance here made, the complainer was not a person wilfully refusing to pay aliment within Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1882, s. 4, & charge & warrant suspended.—MACDONALD v. DENOON, [1929] S. On appealing from the order the accused, not wishing to go to gaol pending the hearing of the appeal, gave the bond provided for by sect. 68 (b) of said Act. His appeal was dismissed; &, none of the directions of the filiation order having been complied with, his bondsmen delivered him into custody, & he was committed to gaol & served the prescribed term. 274a. —— What is—Professional artiste producing scenæ.]—The debtor, a married woman & professional singer, had up to May, 1925, been engaged in musical comedy, but had subsequently produced scenæ & vocal acts at various music halls. In the production of these scenæ she had required certain accessories in the way of dresses, etc., in respect of which she had incurred liabilities. On the hearing of a petition against her for a receiving order a number of contracts with music-hall proprietors were put in evidence, from which it appeared that in consideration of a fixed sum per week she undertook to sing & to engage & pay one or more singers to assist her in the production of her scenæ, & also to provide & pay an accompanist. The registrar dismissed the petition on the grounds that Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 125, did not include profession or occupation under the term "business"; that "trade" & "business" were ejusdem generis & intended to bring within the scope of the Act women who were actually trading or carrying on a business in the nature of a trade, & that the fact that the debtor was assisted by another singer & a pianist did not make her any the less a professional artist than when she acted on the stage. On appeal :—Held : the debtor was carrying on a continuous occupation for the purpose of making profits by entering into contracts under which she bound herself to produce scenæ on the stage & to provide the necessary accessories in the way of assistant singers & accompanist, & that in those circumstances she could properly be described as carrying on a business within sect. 125.—Re A DEBTOR (No. 3 of 1926), [1927] 1 Ch. 97; 135 L. The petitioning creditors petitioned for a receiving order. The debtor disputed the petition on the ground that she was a married woman who was not carrying on a trade or business within the meaning of sect. 125 of 1914 Act. The Registrar held that the transactions in which the debtor had been engaged constituted the carrying on by her of a business within sect. 125 & made a receiving order against her. 267 iii. —— Debts unpaid after sale of business—Receiving order may be made.]—A married woman carried on a trade separately from her husband. Having incurred debts, & being unable to meet her creditors, on Feb. 9, 1929, she filed a petition for arrangement & was granted the protection of the ct. on Mar. 1. She was unable to carry out her proposal to pay twenty shillings in the pound, & eventually on July 26, her petition was dismissed, & thereby an act of bankruptcy was committed. On Oct. 30 she was adjudicated a bkpt. on the petition of two of her creditors, wherein she was described as a married woman carrying on a trade separately from her husband, in respect of debts undischarged at the date of the petition. She applied to have this adjudication set aside on the ground that she was not such a trader on the date of adjudication. She stated that during the progress of the arrangement matter she found that she was unable to get any further credit & closed down & went out of trade on Mar. 23, & had not since carried on any trade :—Held : there was ample evidence that the debts in respect of which adjudication was sought were trade debts for goods supplied incurred by her while she was carrying on a trade separately from her husband, & the fact of her having trade debts undischarged at the date of the petition was evidence from which it could be inferred that she was still carrying on her trade.—Re SOMERS, [1930] I. R. 1.—IR.

Act, 1935 (c. 30), was passed :—Held : (1) the Registrar was right in holding that the transactions in question constituted the carrying on by the debtor of a business within the sect. ; it was true that an occasional speculation, even if such a speculation was repeated at intervals over a period, might not amount to " carrying on a business " for the purposes of sect. 125, but, if over a considerable period such dealings were repeatedly carried on in order to make a profit & were as frequent & systematic as those in the present case, they might properly be held to constitute the carrying on of a business by the married woman. It was a question in each case of fact & degree ; (2) also, having regard to sect. 38 (2) of Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), inasmuch as the receiving order was made by the Registrar before the passing of 1935 Act, it remained valid notwithstanding sect. 4 (1) (c) of the latter Act.—Re DEBTOR, Ex p. DEBTOR (No. 490 of 1935), [1936] Ch. 237 ; 105 L. 274d. —— ——.]—The debtor was a married woman who had been carrying on a business of letting furnished flats. She brought an action against the man who later became the petitioning creditor for the return of goods which, it was alleged, she had used in her business. On July 23, 1935, judgment was given to the effect that the goods were the property of the petitioning creditor & the action was dismissed with costs. These costs were taxed at £48 & later by the addition of interest the debt was increased. Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), came into operation on Aug. 2, 1935 : —Held : (1) Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), had no application to this case ; (2) having regard to the terms of the judgment of July 23, 1935, it could not be maintained that the debt was incurred in the course of the debtor's business or in the getting in of the assets thereof, & a receiving order made by the registrar must be discharged.—Re DEBTOR (No. 15 of 1936), DEBTOR v. PETITIONING CREDITOR & OFFICIAL RECEIVER, [1936] 2 All E. 274f. —— ——.]—On Sept. 7, 1933, the petitioning creditor guaranteed the banking account of the debtor, a married woman not carrying on a trade or business, up to a limited amount. On Aug. 2, 1935, the Act came into operation. In Jan. 1936, the bank called on the guarantor to pay under the guarantee & on Feb. 21 the guarantor did so. On May 28 the guarantor obtained judgment against the debtor in respect of the sum so paid. The debtor having failed to comply with a bkpcy. notice issued in respect of this debt the guarantor served her with a bkpcy. petition. The Registrar refused to make a receiving order. On appeal :—Held : the implied undertaking of the principal debtor to repay the money paid on her behalf to the bank arose at the time of the guarantee ; the obligation of the guarantor, though for a time at common law inchoate & unenforceable, had its origin in 1933 before the passing of the Act of 1935 ; it followed, therefore, that the contract or obligation in respect of which judgment was given existed before the passing of that Act & consequently that the married woman debtor, not being a trader, could not be made bkpt.—Re DEBTOR (No. 627 OF 1936), [1937] Ch. 156 ; [1937] 1 All E. 596a. —— In private company formed by debtor & his solicitor.]—The transfer by a debtor of substantially the whole of his property, whether by way of charge or by way of sale, constitutes an act of bkpcy., if the necessary consequence of the transfer will be to defeat or delay his creditors. The bkpt. was carrying on an increasing business as a builder, but was in need of further capital. He had creditors for some £28,000, & in addition he owed B.'s bank about £6,500. In pursuance of an arrangement with L.'s bank, but without notice to any of the creditors, L.'s bank took over the bkpt.'s account from B.'s bank, paying off to B.'s bank the overdraft of £6,500; & a few days later, on Jan. 9, 1929, a private limited co. was formed of which the bkpt. & his solr. were the only directors. There was a contemporaneous agreement for sale to the co. of substantially the whole of the bkpt.'s assets for £17,000 to be satisfied by the issue to the bkpt. of 17,000 £1 shares, the co. undertaking to pay the bkpt.'s liabilities. On Jan. 14 the necessary assignments to the co. were executed, & a debenture for £12,500 was sealed in favour of L.'s bank. On Jan. 17 the bkpt.'s overdraft on L.'s bank was paid off by a transfer from a new account opened by L.'s bank in favour of the co. Upon the formation of the co. & the issue of the debenture becoming known, the bkpt.'s creditors began to press, & some of them were paid off in full. On Feb. 27, 1929, the bkpt. committed an act of bkpcy. by failing to comply with a bkpcy. notice. On Mar. 8 a petition was presented, & on May 9 a receiving order was made, & adjudication followed on May 23. Upon a motion by the trustee for a declaration that the sale agreement of Jan. 9 was void by 1914 Act, s. 1 (1) (b), & for ancillary relief :—Held : (1) the agreement was a fraudulent transfer [illegible] assets of the bkpt. [illegible] creditors, & as the trustee's title related back to the act of bkpcy. & overrode that of the co., the co. must account to the trustee for such of the assets as had come to the hands of the co. or of any person by the order or for the use of the co. The substitution in the place of a going business & substantial business assets of (a) shares in a private co. which has taken over the debtor's assets & liabilities, & (b) a right of action by the debtor against the co. on its covenant to discharge his liabilities must necessarily have the result of delaying creditors, & the substituted assets could not be treated as an equivalent which the creditors could reach as satisfactorily as the assets transferred; (2) 1914 Act, s. 45, protects only transactions which are bonâ fide; &, as the knowledge of the bkpt. & his solr. of the facts which stamped it in law as a fraudulent transfer was the knowledge of the co., sect. 45 afforded no defence, even although the parties might have thought the transfer to be in the best interest of the creditors.—Re SIMMS, [1930] 2 Ch. 22; 99 L. 797a. Creditor who has assented to deed of arrangement—Deed void for want of registration.]—On June 11, 1921, applt. co. recovered judgment against debtor for a certain sum & costs. On Apr. 18, 1922, debtor executed a document in the form of a memorandum of agreement by which he assigned his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The agreement provided (inter alia) that it should not be registered either as a composition or deed of arrangement or otherwise & contained a schedule of creditors & their debts. At the date of the agreement there were five bkpcy. petitions pending against debtor by creditors other than applt. co. As a result of negotiations between debtor & the five creditors & in consideration of his entering into the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, the five creditors agreed to the dismissal of their petitions & signed letters dated Apr. 17, 1922, which were all in the same form, & contained a statement that it was understood that it was not intended to register the agreement as a deed of arrangement, by which they respectively agreed that so long as debtor complied with the terms of the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, they would not bring any action against him in respect of their scheduled debts or attempt to set aside the agreement. On July 18, 1922, applt. co. signed a letter of assent in the same terms, which was also dated Apr. 17, 1922, & agreed to hand it over to debtor on receiving from him a promissory note or bill of exchange of a third party for £300. This condition debtor performed. The letter was not, however, handed over to debtor owing to the refusal by him to pay to applt. co. an agreed sum for costs, a term which the ct. held formed no part of the original bargain. Applt. co. subsequently issued a bkpcy. notice against debtor founded on its judgment debt. The registrar set the bkpcy. notice aside on the ground that applt. co. was bound by the agreement contained in the letter signed by it. On appeal :—Held : (1) the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, being a deed of arrangement, was void for want of registration under 1914 (Deeds) Act, & the letter of assent, being an assent to a void instrument, was also itself void ; (2) as debtor & all the creditors who assented to the agreement knew from the terms of the instrument itself & from the statement contained in the letters signed by them that the agreement was void, & there was no representation that the agreement was valid, there was no question of estoppel, & applt. co. was not estopped from issuing the bkpcy. notice.—Re A Bankruptcy Notice, [1924] 2 Ch. 76 ; 93 L. Judgment including excessive interest within Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21).]—The provisions of Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 9, do not prevent a moneylender who has obtained judgment for a debt which includes interest at a rate exceeding 5 per cent. per annum from serving a bkpcy. notice upon the debtor requiring payment of the judgment debt.

A bkpcy. notice was issued against him on Aug. 24, 1936, & an order for substituted service of this notice was made on Aug. 27, 1936. The affidavit in support of the application for substituted service stated that on Aug. 24 a clerk to the solrs. for the petitioning creditor, having been informed that the debtor's solrs. could not facilitate service of the bkpcy. notice, had attended at the house above mentioned to serve the debtor, but had been unable to obtain a reply; that a registered letter addressed to the debtor at the same house had been sent on the same day; & that the clerk had attended at the house again on Aug. 27 & had been unable to obtain a reply. The affidavit did not state that the debtor was not within the jurisdiction, nor that service by post would not reach him, nor that there was any reason to think that the house mentioned was the place at which the debtor would be found:—Held: the affidavit was not one on which an order for substituted service ought properly to have been made.—Re DE CESPEDES, DEBTOR v. PETITIONING CREDITOR & OFFICIAL RECEIVER, [1937] 2 All E. Debtors paid a sum of £100, including £5 for costs, nine days later, but in the belief that the notice would be disputed the creditors issued & served a fresh bkpcy. notice about two months later for £857, &, that notice not having been complied with within seven days, a petition based on the fresh bkpcy. notice was presented & served. Debtors gave notice of an application to set aside service of the petition, but the registrar refused to do so, & made a receiving order on the fresh bkpcy. notice :—Held : (1) debtors could not refuse to comply with the fresh bkpcy. notice on the ground that as the previous notice had resulted in an act of bkpcy. this had put it out of the power of debtors to make any payment in compliance with the fresh notice or otherwise deal with their property ; (2) if they did make a payment in compliance with the fresh notice it might be that if a trustee were appointed under the previous bkpcy. notice the payment might be set aside, & the money made available for the general body of creditors.—Re DEBTORS (NO. 771 OF 1926) (1926), 43 T. 929a. —— —— Onus of proof.]—(1) Before the war, the creditors, a Polish firm, sold to the debtors, an Austrian firm, trading in East Africa, certain cotton goods. The period of credit had not expired on the outbreak of the war ; but the debtors being enemy nationals were interned & their African business & property was lost to them. After the war they had a claim against the German Govt., but had then become nationals of Czechoslovakia. In 1924 the debtors returned to East Africa, & in the same year the creditors sued them in Vienna & obtained judgment against them. In 1925 the debtors obtained an award from the Mixed German Czechoslovak Arbitral Tribunal against the German State for a large sum & in the same year the creditors obtained an attachment on the "alleged debtors' claim against the Reich Settling Office." In 1932 the creditors obtained judgment for their debt in Kenya & in 1933 they caused the debtors to be served with two bkpcy. notices. The bkpcy. law in Kenya on this point is the same as in England under 1914 Act. The debtors sought to have the orders set aside on the ground that by attaching the award in Germany the creditors had prevented them satisfying the judgment : —Held : the onus was on the debtors to prove affirmatively that the claim in respect of which the bkpcy. notice was issued could & would have been paid but for some act or omission of the creditor & they had entirely failed to prove any such case.

(2) It was contended that the attachment orders in Berlin were a form of execution & it was, therefore, improper to issue the bkpcy. notices :—Held : the attachment orders were not a form of execution & could not be an execution upon the Kenya decree obtained after the orders. The attachment orders having proved abortive, were not a bar to the issue of the notices.

(3) In Kenya the procedure in execution follows the Indian Code, & arrest & imprisonment is the normal form of execution. There being some evidence of means & that the debtors had refused to pay some part of the debt when they had the means to pay, a receiving order was made in lieu of committal :—Held : the order was rightly made as the English decisions under the Debtors Act, 1869, did not apply.—BRACIA CZECZOWICZKA v. MARKUS, BRACIA CZECZOWICZKA v. LOY, [1936] 1 All E. In a subsequent action in the K. B. D. brought by the creditor against the debtor in respect of a different transaction the creditor obtained judgment in respect of which he issued a bkpcy. notice. On an application by the debtor under sect. 1 (1) (g), of 1914 Act, to have the bkpcy. notice set aside :—Held : the claim in the Chancery action was not a "counterclaim, set-off or cross-demand" within the sub-sect., & was not therefore a ground for setting aside the bkpcy. notice.—Re BANKRUPTCY NOTICE (NO. 171 OF 1934), [1934] Ch. 431 ; 103 L. 940b. Affidavit filed by debtor—Day fixed for hearing—Form of order.]—Rule 140, sub-r. 2, provides that there shall be endorsed on every bkpcy. notice an intimation to the debtor that if he has a counterclaim, set-off, or cross demand which equals or exceeds the amount of the judgment debt, & which he could not have set up in the action in which the judgment or order was obtained, he must within the time specified in the notice file an affidavit to that effect with the Registrar. Rule 141 provides that the filing of "such affidavit" shall operate as an application to set aside the bkpcy. notice & then states the procedure to be followed.

On May 25, 1934, judgment creditors for £2,727 issued a bkpcy. notice against the judgment debtor. On May 31 the debtor filed an affidavit in which he alleged that he had a cross demand for two sums amounting together to £1,500. The Registrar marked the application "Fix a day—Motion—No Stay," & appointed June 28 for the hearing. A stay having been refused, the act of bkpcy. became complete on June 4, & on June 5 the judgment creditors presented a bkpcy. petition founded on that act of bkpcy. On June 21 the debtor's application was dismissed & on June 28 a receiving order was made. On appeal by the debtor:—Held: receiving order was properly made; there had been no compliance by the debtor with r. 140, as the affidavit on the face of it showed that the cross demand did not equal or exceed the amount of the judgment debt, & therefore the procedure provided by r. 141 for dealing with a bkpcy. notice did not come into operation, & the case must be treated as if no affidavit under r. 140 had in fact been filed. Also, the Registrar, if he thought, as he appeared to have done, that the affidavit did not satisfy r. 140, ought to have marked the application "Affidavit not sufficient—No case raised" & not to have taken seisin of the matter.—Re DEBTOR, Ex p. DEBTOR (No. 523 OF 1934), [1935] Ch. 347; 104 L. The creditors proceeded against the debtor, alleging that he had committed an act of bkpcy. under 1914 Act, s. 1 (1) (h). A receiving order having been made, the debtor appealed:—Held: (1) the statements made by the debtor were not a mere discussion of his affairs, but a "notice" to his creditors that he had suspended or was about to suspend payment within the sect.; (2) the debtor being in England, there being creditors in England, & the jurisdiction here being undoubted, it was not necessary to suspend the making of a receiving order here. His trading was not prosperous & new debts were incurred. On Feb. 21, 1924, he executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors generally & a circular letter with a form of assent was sent to & received by petitioning creditors, who were new creditors. On Feb. 25, 1924, their director with their accountant attended the office of one of the trustees under the deed & suggested that they or some other new creditor should be represented on the committee of inspection. Petitioning creditors were then invited to attend the meeting of the committee on Mar. 26, 1924, & their director & their solr. attended accordingly, discussing & advising on certain matters. Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, intituled " In the High Court of Justice, In Bankruptcy," & was sealed with the county ct. seal, the Form not being adapted in any way to the form of bkpcy. notice to be issued by a county ct. On an appeal from a receiving order, the Div. Ct. discovered that the original bkpcy. notice was in Form No. 6, & the affidavit of service exhibited a copy of the bkpcy. notice sealed with the seal of the county ct. which was not a true copy of the original bkpcy. notice. The ct. held that the bkpcy. notice was bad, allowed the appeal, rescinded the receiving order, dismissed the petition & set aside the bkpcy. notice.—Re EVANS, DAVIES v. EVANS, [1931] B. & C. 1287a. —— To require proof—Although debt & act of bankruptcy admitted.]—Bkpcy. being a matter which affects not only the debtor & his creditors but also the general public, a duty is imposed upon the ct. to see that all the requirements of the 1914 Act & rules have been observed. Where therefore a petition in bkpcy. is presented by money-lenders it is the duty of the Registrar before making a receiving order to satisfy himself that all the requirements of sect. 5 (2) of 1914 Act, r. 171 of Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, & Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 10, have been complied with. Admission or consent by any one of the parties that this has been done is not sufficient. On an appeal the Registrar should furnish the Ct. of Appeal with a full note of the proceedings before him showing that these requirements have not been overlooked.—Re DEBTOR, Ex p. DEBTOR (No. 591 OF 1934), [1935] Ch. 353; 104 L. 1334 iii. —— Position of creditor.]—A creditor who had petitioned for sequestration of the estates of his debtor proposed to abandon his petition before sequestration had been awarded. Another creditor thereupon lodged a minute craving to be sisted as a party to the petition. The Lord Ordinary sisted him, & six weeks later, on his petition, granted sequestration. Vouchers, admittedly sufficient to substantiate the creditor's debt, were exhibited to the Lord Ordinary before he granted sequestration, & were subsequently lodged in process, but these particular vouchers had not been produced when the creditor was sisted. Thereafter the debtor presented a petition for recall of the sequestration on the ground that the proceedings were ab initio void, in respect that the sisted creditor had not fulfilled the statutory procedure for obtaining sequestration laid down in Bkpcy. (Scotland) Act, 1913, s. 20, in that he had failed timeously to lodge in process the necessary evidence of his debt:—Held: a creditor craving to be sisted in terms of Bkpcy. (Scotland) Act, 1913, s. 33, as petitioner to a petition for sequestration did not need to to follow out the statutory procedure prescribed by sect. 20 as essential in the case of an original petitioner, it being sufficient if such sisted creditor, before the award of sequestration was made, satisfied the Lord Ordinary as to the existence of his debt.—STEWART v. WETHERDAIR, LTD., [1928] S. Debtor claiming indemnity—As surety for contingent liability of petitioning creditor.]—Petitioning co., of which debtor was formerly chairman, had lent debtor a large sum of money, & recovered judgment against him (on balance of account) for £2,065. A receiving order was made in the county ct. from which debtor appealed, alleging that he had become surety for the co. for their bank overdraft with a limit of £5,000, & that he was entitled to be indemnified against this liability. The claim further stated " & we also have a claim for interest on the said two promissory notes which is postponed interest under sect. 9 (1) of Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21)." On the petition coming before the Registrar the debtor tendered to the petitioning creditors the principal due on the promissory notes with 5 per cent. interest but not the postponed interest. This tender was refused, & the Registrar made a receiving order against the debtor. The cheque was dishonoured & judgment obtained against debtor for £500 & £14 6*s.* costs. In Dec. 1926, the judgment creditors petitioned for a receiving order against debtor in respect of the judgment debt. From time to time arrangements were made for adjourning the petition, but in Mar. 1927, the petitioning creditors intimated that the conditions on which they would agree to the petition being dismissed were that debtor should pay £100 & provide a guarantee for payment of the balance of the debt & also agree to pay to them the costs of their proceedings against the underwriters as between solr. & client, & the costs of their proceedings against debtor, also as between solr. & client. Payment of the costs of proceedings against the underwriters was refused, but payment by debtor of solr. & client costs was agreed to, & sums of £50 & £144 were paid & the petition dismissed. 1552a. —— Receiving order discharged subject to condition—Condition not fulfilled—Rescission of discharging order.] — Debtor, a barrister, was entitled on the death of his mother to a vested remainder in tail of considerable value. His mother was seventy-five. The petition was filed on July 19, 1923. His present indebtedness amounted to about £6,000 & negotiations for a loan for that amount with an insurance co. had been going on since July 16, 1923. Owing to a delay in raising this loan, the registrar had made a receiving order on Nov. 21, 1923, from which debtor appealed; & upon debtor undertaking during the interval necessary to raise the loan, to insure his life immediately, i.e. from Dec. 1, 1923, to Jan. 1, 1924, in order that, in the event of his death during that period, the unsecured creditors might be safeguarded, the Ct. of Appeal allowed the appeal, discharged the receiving order & dismissed the petition without prejudice to another petition being presented if the loan was not carried through & petitioning creditors' debt not paid on or before Jan. 1, 1924. Up to Dec. 20, debtor had not insured his life pursuant to his undertaking & petitioning creditors then moved to commit debtor for contempt. The Ct. of Appeal allowed debtor three hours within which to insure his life, & a certificate being produced showing that this had been done, the ct. made no order except that debtor should pay the creditors' costs. Subsequently debtor having [illegible] broken his undertaking by not compl[illegible] the insurance on his life, the Ct. of App[illegible] rescinded their order, with the result t[illegible] the receiving order stood as originally made by the registrar.—Re A DEBTOR, Ex p. THE DEBTOR (No. 1088 OF 1923), [1924] B. & C. 1552b. —— From order restoring adjudication order—To House of Lords without leave of Court of Appeal.]—Applt. was adjudicated a bkpt. on Aug. 22, 1932. On Oct. 24, 1932, the Ct. of Appeal allowed an appeal from the order of adjudication upon certain terms, & ordered that the application for adjudication be adjourned. One of the terms not having been complied with applt. moved the Ct. of Appeal to vary its order, but on Feb. 10, 1933, the Ct. of Appeal rescinded its order of Oct. 24, 1932, & restored the order of adjudication so as to have effect from Aug. 22, 1932. The Ct. of Appeal refused applt. leave to appeal from its order of Feb. 10, 1933. Nevertheless he appealed, & the objection was taken that under sect. 108 (2) (b) of Bkpcy. Act, 1914, the appeal was not competent, as it was an appeal "in bkpcy. matters" & leave to appeal had been refused. The order of Feb. 10, 1933, purported to be made "in bkpcy. matters" & applt. so treated it in his petition of appeal to the House of Lords. The cts. having jurisdiction in bkpcy., which under sect. 108 (1) of 1914 Act might review, rescind, or vary any order made by them under their bankruptcy jurisdiction, were by sect. 96 confined to the High Ct. & county cts., & it was alleged that therefore the Ct. of Appeal had no power to exercise that jurisdiction of reviewing, rescinding, or varying its order:—Held: if the order was a complete nullity the House could not deal with it, but if it were to be regarded as an order of the Ct. of Appeal it fell within the provisions of sect. 108 (2) (b), which expressly limited the jurisdiction of the House in respect of orders made "in bkpcy. matters" where leave to appeal had been refused by the Ct. of Appeal. Appeal dismissed as incompetent.—HARMAN v. OFFICIAL RECEIVER, PETITIONING CREDITORS & TRUSTEE, [1934] A. C. 245; 103 L. J. Ch. 158; 150 L. T. 501; 50 T. L. R. 238; 78 Sol. Jo. 192; [1934] B. & C. 1893a. —— Duty not to take advantage of mistake of fact.]—A receiving order was made against a debtor, who thereupon applied for & obtained a stay of the advertisement of the receiving order & all proceedings thereunder pending an appeal therefrom. The appeal was subsequently dismissed & an order was made adjudicating him bkpt. At the date of the receiving order bkpt. had an account at a bank. After the making of the receiving order & pending the hearing of the appeal bkpt. paid into the bank £165 which he had collected from his debtors, & drew out of his account £199. The bank acted in good faith & received & paid those sums in the ordinary course of business without knowing that a receiving order had been made against bkpt. The trustee in bkpcy. claimed a declaration that the sums paid into the bank after the date of the receiving order vested in him as trustee:—Held: (1) the sums paid into the bank by bkpt. after the date of the receiving order became by virtue of 1914 Act, ss. 18 (1), 37 (1), 38 (a), the property of his trustee in bkpcy.; (2) the bank were not entitled to credit themselves with the payments out to bkpt., as those transactions took place after the date of the receiving order & were therefore not protected by sects. 45 & 46; (3) there was nothing dishonest in the trustee enforcing the rights given to him by the Act, & the action of the ct. in staying the advertisement & proceedings could not operate in any way in derogation of the rights of the trustee.—Re WIGZELL, Ex p. HART, [1921] 2 K. 1894a. —— Duty to recover statutory debt.]—In 1919 debtor paid deft., a bookmaker, various cheques for bets lost on horse racing, & these cheques were cleared through various banks, as holders. On Aug. 30, 1920, debtor was adjudicated bkpt. & on Mar. 30, 1921, his trustee in bkpcy. by the direction of his committee of inspection, commenced an action to recover £955, the amount admitted to be due, if recoverable. The action was transferred to the judge in bkpcy. under Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, r. 123. Deft. took the point that such an action ought not to be brought by an officer of the ct., as the claim, however legal, was practically dishonest, & that all cts. must apply the rule in Re Condon, Ex p. James, No. 60, ante:—Held: the claim the trustee in bkpcy. was seeking to enforce was in respect of a debt which under Gaming Act, 1835 (c. 41), s. 2, & the decision of the House of Lords in Sutters v. Briggs (see GAMING & WAGERING, Vol. XXV., p. 418, No. 213), was a statutory debt, & there was nothing in Re Condon, Ex p. James, or in any of the cases in which the rule in that case had been followed, which entitled the ct. to say that if & when a right of action in respect of such a debt vested in a trustee in bkpcy., it was a dishonest or dishonourable thing for him as an officer of the ct. to enforce it, & judgment for the trustee in bkpcy. must be entered in the action for the amount claimed.—SCRANTON'S TRUSTEE v. PEARSE, [1922] 2 Ch. 87; 91 L. 1894b. —— Duty to act equitably—Recovery of money paid to bankrupt with approval of official receiver.]—On June 26, 1924, a receiving order was made against W. on a petition presented on May 25, 1924, in respect of an act of bkpcy. on May 1, 1924. W. was a promoter of boxing contests & had in view at the date of the presentation of the petition boxing competitions, one of which was held at the Stadium, Wembley, on Aug. 9, 1924. He appealed against the receiving order, & pending that appeal the receiving order was not gazetted. His appeal having failed it was then gazetted on July 29, 1924. At an interview between W., his solr., the solr. for the Wembley authorities & A., the assistant official receiver, who under Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, r. 316, represented the official receiver, A. was told of the proposed boxing contest & the judge held on the evidence that at the interview W. told A. he desired notwithstanding the receiving order to be allowed to stage the contest as the only hope of providing assets to meet the claims of his creditors, & that it was arranged he could do so without any interference by the official receiver, on W. undertaking not to use the proceeds of the sale of tickets for his private purposes but only for discharging the expenses of the staging of the contest & to hand over any balance to the official receiver. On that arrangement being made W. proceeded with the negotiations for the contest & an agreement was executed by which he gave the Wembley authorities the right to collect all moneys paid for tickets at the turnstiles, & they were to have those moneys as a security for the payment by W. for the use of the Stadium. Various ticket agents paid W. for blocks of tickets to be sold by them to the public. The contest, which was held at the Stadium on Aug. 9, 1924, only realised after payment of all expenses £730 which W. paid to the official receiver. On Sept. 6, 1924, W. was adjudicated bkpt., & on Sept. 9, S. was appointed trustee in the bkpcy. On a motion by S. to recover from the various ticket agents all sums paid by them since the date of the receiving order to W. for tickets they had bought from him & to recover the money collected by the Wembley authorities at the turnstiles:—Held: A. had power to give his sanction to W.'s receipt of the proceeds of the sale of tickets to be applied by him in discharging expenses & the trustee in bkpcy. was bound by the sanction so given, but even if he were not so bound & even if A. exceeded his powers the trustee could not take the benefit of W.'s activities without accepting their burden, & the payment to W. of the moneys which the trustee claimed, being the direct result of the leave obtained by W. from A. to stage the boxing contests, it would be inequitable & unjust to make resps. pay these moneys over again for the benefit of W.'s creditors & to hold that the charge given to the Wembley authorities was nugatory.—Re WILSON, Ex p. SALAMAN, [1926] Ch. 21; 95 L. J. Ch. 58; 133 L. T. 814; 70 Sol. Jo. 65; [1925] B. & C. R. 96.

1894c. —— Extent of duty.]—G. contracted with M. & Co. that they should build upon his land four greenhouses at a price of approximately £1,100, with the proviso that he was not to be bound by such contract unless he obtained a loan sufficient to meet his obligation under the contract. M. & Co. introduced G. to the Agricultural Mtge. Corpn., & a sufficient loan by the Corpn. to G. was arranged.

The work having been carried out to the satisfaction of all parties, M. & Co. wrote to the Corpn. requesting payment by them of the £1,153 14*s.*, & the Corpn. expressed their willingness to pay M. & Co. upon receipt of G.'s permission. M. & Co. sent a form of permission to G. for his signature, but on the very day of its arrival a receiving order was made against G. The trustee in G.'s bkpcy. was able to sell the land at an enhanced price by virtue of the presence on it of the four greenhouses. M. & Co. then sought to restrain the trustee from dividing £1,153 14*s.*, part of the proceeds of sale of the said land among the creditors generally & claimed the said sum for themselves in full:—Held: as M. & Co. at the date of the receiving order had no right to receive the loan from the Corpn. without the consent of G., the said sum was divisible between the general creditors. The facts did not warrant the application of the doctrine of Re Condon, Ex p. James, No. 1889, as M. & Co. by their own failure to obtain a charge to secure their debt were in the position of unsecured creditors.—Re GOZZETT, Ex p. MESSENGER & Co., LTD. v. TRUSTEE, [1936] 1 All. 2293a. —— Holder of proxy from company.]—At the date of the receiving order the bkpt. had on deposit with a bank certain preference & ordinary shares which had been deposited by him by way of security for a loan. A creditor for a large sum of money, a limited co., was appointed one of the members of the committee of inspection in the bkpcy. The co., being unable to act personally, appointed applt., who was its chairman, to act as its general proxy on the committee. In the course of the bkpcy. the applt., whilst so acting, purchased some of the deposited shares from the bank without any knowledge that the person who had deposited the shares was the bkpt. & that the equity of redemption in them formed part of his estate. Applt. subsequently sold some of these shares :—Held : applt. must in the circumstances of the case be treated as a member of the committee of inspection & was therefore in a fiduciary relation to the bkpt.'s estate. He was therefore precluded on general equitable principles from entering into the present transaction, which was therefore void against the trustee in bkpcy. As, however, the transaction was entered into by applt. in ignorance that the shares formed part of the bkpt.'s estate, the ct., whilst ordering him to hand over to the trustee in bkpcy. the shares retained by him (subject to his lien for the price paid by him), would not order him to replace the shares sold by him but would be content to require him to account for the purchase money actually received for the shares which he had resold.

2514a. —In Aug. 1921, two borrowers [illegible] sureties borrowed £20,000 from an insurance co. The loan was secured by the joint & several covenant of the borrowers & the sureties & by a mtge. & further charge on the borrowers' life policies. The loan was repayable by instalments spread over five years, but, if a borrower or surety became bkpt., it was immediately repayable. On Jan. 10, 1924, a receiving order was made against one surety, H., on his own petition, & on Jan. 25 he was adjudicated bkpt. At the date of the receiving order the amount due to the insurance co. as creditors was £8,000 principal & £249 interest, & on Jan. 13, 1926, they put in a proof for that amount in H.'s bkpcy. Between the date of the receiving order & the proof, however, the creditors had received some £5,372 made up of £4,910 payments of principal & interest by the other sureties & £462 credited ex gratia as the surrender value of the policies which had really lapsed. The trustee in bkpcy. applied to reduce the proof by £5372 :—Held : as each surety was liable for the whole debt due at the date of the receiving order, the creditors were entitled to prove for the full amount in the surety H.'s bkpcy. without giving credit for any sums received from the other co-sureties since that date, provided that they did not in the whole recover more than 20*s.* in the pound.—Re HOULDER, [1929] 1 Ch. 205 ; *sub nom. 2791a. Apportionment of dividend.]—The covenantor by deed covenanted to pay an annuity to trustees for the benefit of his son, &, in certain events, for the benefit of other persons. The covenantor became bkpt. & the trustees lodged proof for the amount of arrears of annuity together with a sum which represented the capitalised value of the annuity. Proof was admitted for a smaller sum & a dividend declared & paid. The question was whether the whole of the dividend was payable to the annuitant & if not how it was to be apportioned :—Held : the dividend must be apportioned in the ratio which the arrears of annuity bore to the total proof lodged. then was or thereafter might become entitled, to be held, subject to life interests in favour of husband & wife, upon trusts to be mutually agreed between the trustees of the settlement. It was further agreed that the first trustees of the settlement should be the three trustees of the articles therein named, & that if they or either of them should fail to accept the trusteeship of the settlement, then such other person or persons as the spouses should nominate; & that in the meantime until the execution of the settlement the persons in whom such property should be vested should hold the same upon the trusts of the settlement. The marriage was solemnised on the day of the execution of the articles. On the death of his father on Feb. 22, 1918, the husband, under his will, became entitled in reversion, subject to the life interest of testator's widow, to a share in his residuary estate. On June 13, 1919, the trustees of the articles gave notice to the will trustees of the execution of the articles. On Oct. 21, 1920, the husband, in pursuance of his contract contained in the articles, executed a settlement by which he assigned to the trustees thereof, of whom there were three & of whom one was also a trustee under the articles, but the other two were not, his interest under his father's will upon trusts for the benefit of his wife & children. On Dec. 5, 1921, the settlor was adjudicated bkpt. The trustee in bkpcy. moved for a declaration that the settlement & the transfer of the property purported to be made thereunder were void as against him:—Held: (1) the acquisition by bkpt. on his father's death of the property which was non-existent at the date of the articles did not operate under the well settled doctrine as a complete equitable assignment of that property, as the persons to whom the property was contracted to be assigned & the trusts upon which such persons were to hold it were not ascertained at the date of such acquisition; (2) even if there had been an equitable assignment within that doctrine, it would not have operated as a transfer of property within the true meaning of 1914 Act, s. 42 (3); (3) the assignment contained in the settlement of Oct. 1920, operated as a transfer of property within that sub-sect. & was void by reason of its execution within two years of the commencement of the bkpcy.—Re DENT, Ex p. TRUSTEE, [1923] 1 Ch. 113; 92 L. 2978a. Proof by plaintiff against bankrupt defendant—Stay of action after bankruptcy—Proof in bankruptcy for amount claimed in action.]—On Oct. 25, 1920, resp., a mtge. broker, hereinafter called pltf., issued a writ against debtor in the K. B. Div. to recover a sum of £650 for commission earned. On June 20, 1921, the action was set down for trial. On July 19, 1921, a receiving order was made against debtor. On Feb. 2, 1922, on the application of pltf. made in the action the action was stayed with liberty to pltf. to restore. On Mar. 6, 1922, pltf., instead of applying to restore the action, lodged his proof in the bkpcy. of debtor for £650. The official receiver rejected his proof, but on Jan. 17, 1923, the county ct. judge reversed the decision of the official receiver & admitted the proof. On Sept. 29, 1923, pltf. lodged a further proof for £46 17*s.* 9*d.* for his untaxed costs of the action, all of which were incurred before the date of the receiving order. On Oct. 31, 1923, the official receiver rejected that proof. Pltf. appealed, & on Feb. 11, 1924, the county ct. judge reversed his decision & ordered that the proof of the costs, amounting to £46 17*s.* 9*d.*, should be admitted subject to taxation. On the appeal of the official receiver:—Held: (1) as pltf. had obtained no judgment dealing either with his claim in the action or the costs thereof, but had elected to stay his action & to prove in bkpcy. for the amount claimed in the action, he was not entitled to prove for his untaxed costs of the action; (2) (ASTBURY, J.) the sum for which pltf. sought to prove in respect of his costs was not a debt or liability certain or contingent to which debtor was subject at the date of the receiving order or to which he might become subject before his discharge by reason of any obligation incurred before that date, within 1914 Act, s. 30 (3), & therefore was not provable.—Re PITCHFORD, [1924] 2 Ch. 260; *sub nom. The mere fact that the trustee cannot recover either payments made to a creditor whose proof is subsequently expunged or overpayments made to a creditor whose proof is subsequently reduced, does not prevent the operation of that equitable principle in the case of a proof in bkpcy.
